A Subterranean Cell Hewn Out of Solid Rock and Just Unearthed by the Greeks in Jerusalem Is Firmly Believed to be the Very Dungeon Where the Saviour Awaited His Trial Before Pilate.

Jerusalem, July 20, 1906.

THERE is great excitement here over the discovery of a subterranean prison in the famous Via Dolorosa. The Greek monks are responsible for the discovery, and they have already decided that this prison must have been the very one in which Jesus was confined by the Romans before his Crucifixion.

Pilgrims are flocking to the little chapel in crowds, anxious to see the very place in which, according to the Gospels, Jesus was shackled until final judgment had been passed upon him.

It is well known among archaeologists that the modern city of Jerusalem is actually built upon the ruins of the ancient city, and that during the ages a great accumulation has been gathered over the original structures or their ruins.

It is therefore not at all surprising that this Roman prison was found hewn in the solid rock many feet below the present street level. It is also confirmatory of the identification of this prison as the one in which Jesus was confined that it was discovered close to the Via Dolorosa, for according to the traditions of the Church it is along this "Path of Sorrow" that Jesus bore his cross to Golgotha. If this be indeed the prison which once held the person of Jesus it will become one of the favorite goals of pilgrims, desirous of seeing the very spot where Jesus was prepared by suffering for that final and fearful death on the cross.

The cell is connected with the series of underground chambers discoverd thirty years ago near the Ecce Homo chapel, but was only discovered the other day by some Greeks who were clearing out the original cells.

"Christ's prison" is one of a group of cells which appear to be ancient Roman dungeons; they are hewn out of rock similarly to the Latomiae at Syracuse, Sicily. Christ's cell contains a contrivance of stone which is supposed to be an ancient form of the mediaeval stocks.

Below the cell is a smaller and grimmer cell—a kind of "oubliette"—full of human bones and skulls.

Already "Christ's prison" has been converted into a Greek chapel, and the multitudes of devout pilgrims, who are coming and going here firmly believe it to be the veritable dungeon in which Jesus awaited His Trial before Pontius Pilate.

The identification of the sacred sites associated especially with the last days of Jesus has been the task of nineteen centuries, and is not yet completed to the satisfaction of all scholars. The aid of tradition has, however, been most valuable, especially for the laying out of the Via Dolorosa, in which naturally there could be no ruins or marks indicating exactly where it lay.

According to the Gospels Jesus was taken from the residence of Pilate, but it was not certain exactly where Pontius Pilate, the then Roman Procurator, had his residence. Some authorities claimed that he probably lived in the great palace of Herod, while others asserted just as positively that Pilate must have lived in the Fortress Antonia. The latter suggestion has been generally received, and as this was located at the northwestern part of what is now known as the Haram, or site of the ancient Temple of Solomon, it agrees with the tradition of the location of the Via Dolorosa.

When Jesus had been arrested at night, taken first to the house of the high priest and there examined, he was kept over night, and then early in the morning brought to Pontius Pilate.

It was true, as then stated, that the Jews no longer had the right to inflict capital punishment. John xviii :31, "Then said Pilate unto them, take ye him and judge him according to your law. The Jews therefore said unto him, It is not lawful for us to put any man to death."

Pilate knew this, and then he himself questioned Jesus, asking him, "Art thou the King of the Jews?" to which he replied, "Thou sayest it!" This was the chief point which interested the Roman Procurator, for naturally Rome would resent the setting up of any man as "King of the Jews" while Judaea was a Roman Province.

When he had been condemned by Pilate the Roman soldiers took Jesus to the Praetorium, or guard room, and there they crowned him with thorns and scourged him as was the Roman cruel custom. Then all preparations being made they laid the cross on him as was also the custom, for those who were to be crucified carried the cross to the place of execution.

Tradition here steps in and traces each step of the progress, but until this latest discovery no one had identified the prison in which Jesus was confined. Now this serves as a starting point, and as it has been discovered at the very beginning of the Via Dolorosa it serves to confirm the traditions clustering around that sorrowful way.

No less than fourteen stations have been selected as the places at which Jesus stopped to rest in that short progress to Golgotha. The procession formed, led by a centurion, and besides the Roman soldiery, eager to divide the clothing of the victims, which were their legal perquisites, were the two thieves bearing the crosses on which they, too, were to be crucified. They had gone down into the prison and there removed Jesus from that slab of stone so hewn and bored with holes to serve as stocks. This very stone has now been found in the ancient prison. The procession starts from the grim Fortress Antonia, where judgment had been passed by Pilate. The first station is the place at which, according to tradition, Jesus took up his cross. A few steps further is the resting place now marked by an orphans' home, the street arched by one of the Roman triumphal arches, and this has been pointed out as the place at which Pilate exclaimed, "Ecce Homo!" hence the name, "The arch of Ecce Homo." The third station is in the Tyropaeon, a broken column, indicating the spot at which Jesus sank beneath his awful burden.

At the Fourth Station Jesus is said to have met his mother, the Virgin Mary, and at the Fifth Station Simon and Cyrene took up the Cross which the fainting and weakened Jesus could no longer carry.

The Sixth Station is that of St. Veronica, where this pitying Roman matron wiped the bloody sweat from the face of Jesus, to find later that all of the features had left their impress upon the handkerchief.

The way winds upward now to the Seventh Station and thence to the Eighth Station where he is said to have addressed the weeping women following him: "Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children." (St. Luke, xxiii.: 28). At the Ninth Station Jesus fell fainting to the ground, for the third time. This is the last station outside of the walls of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, the other five being within the Church, and marked as the places where his clothing was removed, where he was nailed to the Cross, where the Cross was raised, where he was taken from the Cross and where he was interred.

Those who have been to Jerusalem know with what feelings of awe they walk along the Via Dolorosa, remembering as they must the procession that passed that way almost two thousand years ago toward Golgotha, which was to give birth to a new, world-conquering religion. What then will be the feelings of the pilgrims of the twentieth century when they come here now and are shown the very prison which held the sacred person of Jesus, and the stone in which his tired limbs were fastened.

If then the pilgrim will go back to the Mount of Olives he will see the Garden of Gethsemane in which Jesus asked Peter, James and John to wait and watch with him, for he felt impending doom. There he was obliged to reproach them for their sleepiness, but Jesus forgave them, as he only could, and then came Judas and the betraying kiss which led up to the final tragedy.

Each new discovery made in Jerusalem adds power and virtue to the Holy City, and the measure of the activity of the Saviour. Take away the sacred sites from this city and it becomes one of the meanest on earth, but with the Holy Places Jerusalem is the heart of the Christian world, and each sacred site discovered adds to the power which it exerts upon all of the faithful scattered in every clime.

The importance of finding the prison of Jesus cannot therefore be exaggerated, especially if the experts finally confirm the contention of the monks that they have unearthed what must prove one of the most entrancing sites in all this great City of the Holy associations.

A CRIPPLED MILLIONAIRE AND HER "INVALID AUTOMOBILE"

(See Front Page.)

IF you could pull aside the portieres and peep beneath the silken curtains of the new automobile de luxe of Miss Evelyn Walsh the scene would be a revelation even in these twentieth century days of extravagant ease. You would see a charming little interior, as exquisitely appointed as a Parisienne's boudoir, lit with fairy-like electric lights in crystal bulbs if it be night, the tiny lights reflected in mirrors of more crystal, and if by day sunlit through vast niches of plate glass hung with rose-tinted draperies. The air is sweet with American Beauty roses or Parma violets—the favorite flowers of the young lady of the automobile—fresh picked and placed about in crystal vases. A silver clock with musical chimes ticks and tells the time; the latest books and magazines are scattered about over the miniature writing and reading table; a regal lion's skin crouches on all-fours upon the floor; a rare bird of the tropics sings in its gilded cage. It cost a fond father $10,000 to build and equip this little nest on wheels to please a daughter's fancy.

The father is Thomas Walsh, the Colorado multi-millionaire, whom you all know about. And the daughter, Evelyn, you will all recall, was in that deplorable tragedy in Newport just a year ago when her brother was killed by the throw of his auto and Miss Evelyn was herself terribly injured. Now, after all the tenderest and most scientific treatment by the best surgeons money could secure, she is well along on the road to health again, but is still none too strong, and it was especially for her that this wonderful motor-boudoir was manufactured on cushions so soft and springs so supple that no jar nor jolt should visit her harshly.

The car was delivered the other day to Miss Walsh, and as your eyes scan these lines Miss Walsh is enjoying her first trial trips in her specially constructed "Aristocrat."

Yes, if you could peep in through the silken portieres the scene would be a revelation. You would behold the only car in the world containing so many requisites for comfort. The electric light system has lamps of different candle power.

There is a labyrinth of heating pipes to preserve an even temperature, for even in Summer it is often cold at the altitude where the car will be mostly used.

There are two swivel seats for guests, which admit of their occupants turning around to face Miss Walsh, who reclines at ease on the couch.

You have only to press a button and send, the chauffeur or the footman sits beside him, knows instantly the na of one's wants. One can even order a ing beverage from the zinc-lined basket.

Or, if a dainty repast is desired, dicator is set opposite the legend lunch," a red lamp flashes on the board, and the corresponding shows in the direct line of vision servitor.

By simply pressing different ivory one can order the car stopped, turned to the left, to the right, the car ahead, to increase the slow down, to in fact carry ou whim of the owner.

A wide running board, rubber mits of passage from the fron the entrance to the boudoir, lady's wants can be instantly without the stoppage of the car.

All gears are so encased in jacket, that Miss Walsh will no noyed by the slightest sound of machinery.

The gasoline tank of the Aristocr carried in the rear beneath the chassis integral with it. The axles of Miss Wal car are of one-piece forging and will break, as they are untampered.

ALWAYS UNLUCKY; UNHAPPY—No Matter What this Pretty Girl Does.

Even in Her Romantic Marriage to the Son of the President of Nicaragua the Cruel Shadow Still Pursues Her.

"ONE NIGHT WHEN WE WERE SITTING TALKING TOGETHER DURING OUR COURTSHIP SOME MEN RUSHED IN, SEIZED ALPHONSO AND CARRIED HIM OFF—HE WAS BUNDLED OFF TO NICARAGUA. IN MY LOVE AS IN EVERYTHING, I WAS MOST UNLUCKY AND UNHAPPY."

Of such distinguished lineage that she can name Gen. Robert E. Lee, world-celebrated war hero of the Southern Confederacy, as her great uncle; with the president of an American Republic for a father-in-law, yet with memories of more romance and misfortune than would suffice to make a heroine of stage melodrama, young and beautiful Mrs. Marguerite Lee Baker Zelaya declares:

"I must begin life over again—start the struggle afresh. I have faith that I shall rise above the troubles that have beset me on every hand, and be yet successful and happy."

The woman who thus bravely defies the malign influences which have pursued her for so long, is the finest type of Spanish-American beauty. She is educated, cultured, refined. For her new series of struggles against fate she has established herself in Washington, D. C., where she is training systematically to achieve her girlhood ambition—to win a worthy place on the operatic stage.

On this page she tells her own remarkable story, no less remarkable and romantic through having for a background the walls of St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum in Washington ,where her childhood was spent.

By the Unhappy and Unlucky Marguerite Zelaya.

NOT until I was a woman grown did I know who I was, who were my parents.

I supposed myself to be the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Baker, of Washington. They were as kind and loving as parents could be, and I loved Mrs. Baker as a mother.

I had absolutely no premonition of the shock I was to receive later, at the most impressionable period of girlhood, only a few years ago, in fact.

While I was well cared for in every way, I think I must have been ambitious, even as a little girl. I loved to dress up in fancy clothes. It was easy for me to imagine myself parading up and down the stage before an audience, a prima donna of opera whom everyone applauded. I acted this part so persistently, indeed, and practiced singing so seriously, that I was sent to a conservatory of music.

A throat affection which lasted some months interrupted these preparations and I returned to the comfortable home which I believed to be mine by right. I had not the slightest idea that these preparations were ever to become useful to me, or needed in a future career.

Then, suddenly, came the first great shock of my life. Imagine the pain that went through my heart when I learned that dear Dr. and Mrs. Baker were not only not my parents, but no relation whatever—that I had no claim on them.

Out of the darkness and the daze into which this awful discovery plunged me came the thought at last that somewhere in the world were those who were once my own. I became possessed with a desire to dig down deep to the bottom of it all, to leave no stone unturned until I had unravelled the whole tangled skein—and I did not.

All those who were likely to know I questioned. Gradually I learned all.

I am the daughter of Sydney Smith Lee, brother of General Fitzhugh Lee, and America Munos, formerly of Guatemala, and of a distinguished Spanish family.

My father was an officer in the Confederate navy and served on the Shenandoah. He was born in Georgetown and died in 1888, two years after I was born. He was the son of Sydney Smith Lee, a brother of General Robert E. Lee, who was, therefore, my great-uncle.

My mother lived in Guatemala, and it was there my parents met. My grandmother was born in Madrid, Spain, but had gone to Guatemala to live. From the scanty bits of family history which I have succeeded in tracing, my mother was about fifteen years old when she and my father were married. He brought her to America and since that time this country has been our home, although I am now, as I have been since my father's death, practically alone.

I was born in Knoxville, Tenn., and two years later my father died. That was in April, 1888, and on August 16 of the same year my mother placed me with my two sisters and brother in St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum, Washington, D. C. The asylum records will bear me out in this statement and will show that I was taken there as Julia Lee, while my sisters and brother were admitted as Sarah Lee, Annie Lee and Sydney Smith Let.

My mother was a Catholic, and the Lees did not think highly of the alliance, and for that reason trouble over the estate followed my mother's death. Nothing was ever settled, so I am made to believe, and upon inquiry my guardians find that at this time the estate is absolutely tax consumed.

My father's family never made any advances to me, nor, as far as I can understand, to my sisters or brother. They did not care to recognize my mother's and father's marriage, and have not done so in any way.

In an Orphan Asylum.

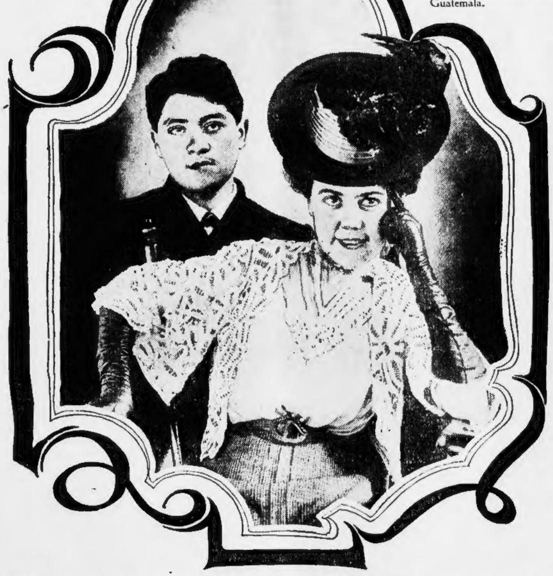
I was only two years old then, but from that day to this I have never known my own people. The life at the asylum, of course, has no place in my memory. I was too young to appreciate or understand the conditions or to know that the rest of my life was to be a struggle with the world, a struggle single-handed and unsupported by mother love or home influences.

It was not long before I was taken away. John West Wagner, a prominent architect, and his wife made application to the sisters to bring me up in their own family, but shortly after that Mr. Wagner failed in business, and the strain of this affliction proved so great that Mrs. Wagner's mind was impaired. It was during the inquiry into her mental condition that I came to the attention of Dr. W. W. Baker, and on Oct. 22, 1895, an agreement was made by which Dr. Baker took charge of me, but I understood that my mother objected to his adopting me legally.

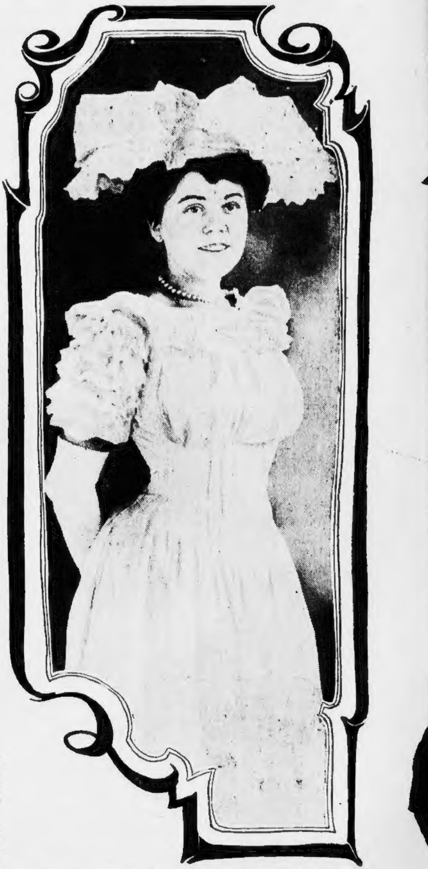
My own two sisters, who were also at the orphan asylum with me, are now married and are living somewhere near Richmond, Va.

My brother, who was there,too, is somewhere out West, but I do not know where. I never heard from any of them. In fact, I was left to others when I was so small that I could not understand, and at the very time when I needed care and devotion it was denied me, except by strangers, and the yearning for it now has been crushed. I must confess that I have no feeling now in that regard.

About a year ago I made up my mind that I wanted to go to work. I felt that the time had come when I should get out and take care of myself. I knew such a time must come, if it had not then, and I left Dr. Baker's home with the intention of making my own way in the world.



Mrs. Zelaya and her husband, who is son of President Zelaya of Guatemala.



Mrs. Marguerite Lee-Baker-Zelaya, from a recent photograph.

I became ill and was taken to the Homeopathic Hospital, where I had a spell of fever. After I recovered from that, and while I was convalescing in the hospital, I thought perhaps I might study nursing and support myself in that way; so when I recovered entirely from the fever I returned to the hospital and entered the training school. It was during one of the busiest seasons at the hospital, and after two months' service my health gave way and I was compelled to give up my idea of being a nurse. It was just a little while after this that Alphonso Zelaya came into my life.

After living a life, short as it was, crowded with romance and a great deal of mystery, it would seem that I had about exhausted my share. But the same influences which worked so many changes in my earlier years seemed to again combine to color other chapters, and I am not quite sure that when the incidents surrounding my marriage are disposed of and forgotten there will be others hovering near by, and only waiting for a chance to develop.

I had taken rooms in a boarding house in K street northwest, and was much like any other young girl. I loved a good time, and always liked to be with lively, congenial people. It was during the time of President Roosevelt's inauguration, when thousands of strangers were in the city to attend the ceremonies and a number of them had rooms in the house where I was living.

Among these people was Alphonso Zelaya. He was presented to me, and I soon learned that he was the son of the President of Nicaragua and highly connected in his native country. He was then a student at the Montclair Military Academy at Montclair, N. J., where he was taking a course preparatory to entering West Point. His father had sent him to America to obtain a good military schooling, and he had gone through the session at Montclair. However, at the final examinations he failed in English, and Mr. Corea, Nicaraguan Minister to the United States, took him away and placed him in the Maryland Agricultural College.

Courted by a President's Son.

It was while he was here from Montclair that we met, and after he went to the Maryland Agricultural College he visited me frequently, and we corresponded. Our correspondence, however, was only that which might be carried on between two good friends until he began to dislike the college and refused to study.

His visits to Washington became more frequent, and finally we became engaged. We were afraid to say anything to anyone about our plans to get married, and we thought we had considered the matter very thoroughly. However, we decided to take into our confidence Chester C. Mercury, an American, who married the daughter of a former President of Nicaragua, but a man of whom we later had reason to change our opinion.

This man Mercury went direct to Mr. Corea and told him that Alphonso was about to be married, and one night when we were sitting talking together, some men rushed in, seized Alphonso and carried him off. They kept him in the Cairo from that night, Friday, to the following Sunday, when he was bundled off south on his way to Nicaragua. Neither of us has ever blamed Mr. Corea for the part he took in that sensational kidnapping, but we certainly blamed Mercury. Even in my love as in everything, I was most unlucky and unhappy.

I knew what train Alphonso was to take, and I went to the station with several people from the boarding house. Just before the train pulled out he swore that he would return in two months to marry me. In saying this he repeated a vow which is characteristic with the people of his country. He swore before everybody that he would keep his word, and he did.

However, he was sent back to his people, and later wrote me that he had obtained his father's consent to the marriage and was coming back. He reached New Orleans only to be taken quite ill with appendicitis and was ill six weeks. When he was able to come to Washington he did so and we were married at Dr. Baker's home.

I learned that when he went home his father put him in prison; at least that is what he told me. His father was evidently very much disturbed at his desire to marry, for he had mapped out a military career for Alphonso, and, of course, that is all over now.

So there it is, as far as it goes. Sometimes I get to thinking it all over, and I cannot realize that all these things have happened to me. It seems more like a dream that some one might have rather than a straight succession of real incidents.

The many vicissitudes that have followed our married life have brought me conspicuously before the public, and, much as it seemed to the contrary, this publicity has been distasteful to me. It seems I have been unfortunate from the very beginning of my life, and now that I have been brought into the public eye so many times and so unwittingly, I want to get out of it once and for all. I have never before told this story of my life to any one but my dearest friends, and now that I have taken the public into my confidence I am sure it will be no longer interested in me.

I must begin life over again—start the struggle afresh. I have faith that I shall rise above the troubles that have beset me on every hand, and be yet successful and happy.

A Woman's Torture of This Little Boy Enough To Make One's Blood Boil

Who Are the Mysterious and Unhuman Man and Woman in Black Masks Anyway, and What Malignant Wickedness Made Them Wire the Poor Child's Arms and Legs to a Post, Gag Him and Leave Him for Mosquitoes To Bite to Death?

CLARENCE SMALLING is a tall, lithe, merry-eyed boy of thirteen years, with a smile so roguishly engaging and a laugh so hearty and good-natured, with manners so boyishly frank and yet courteous, that he makes friends at a glance. There is no apparent reason why Clarence Smalling, the handsome little nephew of Captain Jacob Smalling, a prominent citizen of Babylon, Long Island, should have an enemy in the world. Yet somewhere there lurks in the shadow of mystery a pair who hate the lad with the fury of demons.

A man and a woman, hiding their identity in the darkness, waited, and perhaps still wait, as devils would wait in ambush, to do him harm.

The boy's mother is ill from thinking of the horror that was visited upon him and may be still hanging over her son's head.

For these demons took the lad, tied him hand and foot to a telegraph pole and then with a malignancy utterly inexplicable, ran off and left him to be bitten to death by the poisonous mosquitoes which infest the spot.

His father, a man of resources and intelligence, confesses: "I don't know what to do. I can't think where to turn. If they would only come out of the night and tell who they are or what they are."

Clarence Smalling, heretofore a healthy, happy lad, is growing thin and pale under the strain of a great dread, and yet the boy knows no more of the motives and the names of his malicious foes than do his father or mother.

The whole neighborhood where little Clarence lives is roused to a sullen anger over this hideous torture of the poor child, and it bodes ill for the man and the woman in the black masks if the townspeople of Babylon discover their identity. But the whole thing is so mysterious, unusual and inexplicable! The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children may unearth the real fiends, for a guilty woman and a married man are under some suspicion. But unless it be these two—and that will be a very difficult thing to prove—this mystery of binding a boy to be bled to death by mosquitoes will remain a cruel mystery. Nothing like it in a civilized community was ever heard of before. It is like the tortures to which the King of the Belgian's jackals subjects the poor natives of the Congo Free State when they do not yield up enough rubber. They tie the unfortunates—after they have cut off their right hands sometimes, as a refinement of deviltry—to a tree in the broiling sun and leave them to be stung to death by ants. But to have such a thing happen right in Babylon, in Long Island, in the State of New York, a suburb of New York City! It is bewildering and appalling.

They Tied Him to a Telegraph Pole.

On Friday night, Mrs. Charles A. Smalling, the mother of the boy, sent him down town with a message to his aunt. Clarence Smalling leaped upon his bicycle and went whistling through the dusk. He delivered the message, chatted for a few minutes with his aunt at the gate. Then he was on his bicycle gain, and with a merry smile and a wave of his cap was off. "I must hurry home," he called back. "Mother will worry if I am gone more than a half hour."

But the half hour passed and grew into an hour. The hour swelled into an hour and a half and into two hours. At 9 o'clock Mrs. Smalling stood at the front gate straining her eyes through the darkness for a glimpse of her son, straining her ears for a far-off sound of his bicycle. There was nothing in sight, but a night bird that flew low and darted skyward as it cried out in fright. There was no sound except the stirring of the grasses at the will of the wind. Sobbing out her vague fears, Mrs. Smalling ran to a neighbor's and begged her friend's husband to go in search of the boy. Then, going back to her post at the gate, she waited.

In another dragging, terrible half hour she heard the sound of a heavy footstep, and her neighbor appeared with a burden in his arms. He waved the frightened woman away and pushed past her through the gate and laid it on the floor of the veranda.

"It is Clarence," he said. "No, he is not dead, but he has fainted. Some one had tied his hands and feet and fastened him to a telegraph pole. The curs went away and left the mosquitoes to do their work."

The electric light on the veranda revealed the boy lying quite unconscious. Blood trickled in an irregular stream from a wound in his wrist. The ankles of his low shoes were reddened from a gash in his left instep. Around ankles and wrists was a thin red line, the path of some instrument of torture. His face was swollen and disfigured with cruel purplish blotches. When he opened his eyes he started in terror. Recognizing his mother's pale face he burst into tears.

The story he told was well-nigh incredible in its cruelty. "I was riding along, whistling, and had just made the turn to come down our street, when a man's voice called: 'Where do you live?' I looked over my shoulder and laughed. 'Down at Higbee's,' I said, because that was in the opposite direction from where I was going. The man swore and I laughed again. Then a woman came out from behind a telegraph pole and ran straight at me. She grabbed my shoulder and pulled me off my bicycle. She caught me by both shoulders and shook me. 'We'll teach you to tattle,' she said.

"I was too frightened to say a word. I just stared at the woman. Although she turned her face away from me and looked back for some one, I could see that she was tall and stout, and that she wore a long, black cloak that covered her from head to heel. Her dress rustled while she shook me, and I knew it was of silk. The man came up from behind us and caught me by the back of the collar. She let go and he dragged me toward a telegraph pole.

"I fought as hard as I could, but he was a big man and could manage me with one hand. He did, for he held the other hand over my mouth.

"'What are you going to do with me? Who are you?' I kept asking, but the man wouldn't answer. The woman whispered again—she seemed to be afraid to talk out loud, for fear I would know her voice. Her whisper sounded like the hiss of a snake.

"'We'll teach you to tattle,' she said again.

"'Don't talk. There's a better way to punish him,' the man whispered back. When he got me up to the telegraph pole and pushed me against it so hard that it took my breath I twisted around to look at him. This time I would have seen his face, but he wore a mask. It looked like a piece of black cloth tied across the lower part of his face, hiding the mouth and chin. His straw hat was pulled down over his eyes. He nodded to her and the woman pulled a piece of wire from the pocket of her cloak and he tied it around my wrists. He tied it so tight that it cut deep into my flesh, as though it had been a sharp knife. I was struggling all the time to get away and the woman crouched down and held my feet. The man tied them with the wire. He had left long, loose ends of each and he tied these around the telegraph pole. Then he made a signal to the woman and she handed him a silk handkerchief. He tied it around my mouth so that I couldn't make a sound. They went away. I don't know where. I thought for a long time that they were still standing behind me and I was afraid to move."

The sturdy boy, who had never been ill in his life, whom his mother had not seen cry since he was five years old, dropped his head in her lap when he had finished the story and wept as a frightened infant weeps at the unknown terrors of the dark.

Little Clarence Smalling.

"By this time there must have been thousands of mosquitoes. They all settled on my face and the thousands of stings tortured me as though they were red hot needles."

The neighbor, who had saved him from his vigil of dread, took up the story.

"I was going along the road looking from right to left and sort of feeling my way in the darkness, when my foot struck against something hard in the grass. I leaned over and picked it up and saw that it was a bicycle. As my eyes travelled around in the darkness, and I was saying to myself, 'This is his bicycle; he can't be far away,' I saw the outline of something close to the telegraph pole, and I went over to it. There wasn't a sound, so I struck a match, and there was Clarence, gagged, with his hands and feet tied by wires to the pole. His face was swollen to double its size from mosquito bites, and the blood was running down his fingers from the gashes in his wrists."

The Smalling home is in a lonely spot half a mile from the village of Babylon. The public road runs past it, and on the other side of the road are the telegraph wires, with the poles standing sentinel-like by day and like ghostly gray shadows at night.

His Story of the Mosquito Agony.

It was to one of these at the point where the high road turns from the Smalling home to the village, at a distance of a hundred rods from his home, that his enemies bound him, believing, no doubt, that by morning he would be dead from fright or from loss of blood or the stings of the giant mosquitoes that swarm in myriads in the swamp half a dozen feet on the other side of the road.

Clarence Smalling told a representative of this paper of the torments of that lonely hour as he stood bound and gagged and fastened by the cruel wires to the telegraph pole.

"I tried to get away but the more I struggled the deeper the wires cut into my wrists. I knew there was one place on the wrist that if cut would make me bleed to death, so I tried to turn my hands so that the deepest cuts would be on the sides of the wrist near the bone. The wires were tightest around the ankles and they burnt me as though they had been rings of fire. I turned and twisted my head but the gag was too tight. I could not loosen it. But the worst was when the mosquitoes came. The man and the woman had hardly left me alone when the mosquitoes came in droves. They sounded in a second like the machinery of a mill turned on. They all sang as though they were coming to a feast. I had been bitten by mosquitoes before, but one or two at a time. This time there must have been thousands of them. They all settled on my face and the thousands of stings tortured me as though they were red hot needles. They went away and an army of others came. In five minutes my face began to swell and I could feel my eyes growing smaller and smaller until it seemed to me they were closed. At every sound of the wind or of some one passing I trembled because I thought the man and woman were coming back to kill me. When Mr. Graham came up to me I did not know him, and when he cut the wires I fell down in the grass. I thought they had killed me and that I was falling into my grave. The next thing I saw was my mother leaning over me and crying."

Who were these malicious tormentors of the Smalling boy? Whoever they were theirs was a devilish ingenuity that suggested the means of slow torture that would, if he had not been rescued so soon, have ended in death. Unquestionably they expected that he would bleed to death and that while his life was ebbing away from the wounds at wrists and ankles the swarms of mosquitoes would render the manner of his dying a thousand times more horrible.

The boy noticed that they were both tall and stout, that the man had dark hair and the woman wore a long black cloak, that they both wore masks. He had no chance to observe anything further.

What was their motive? There was no hint of this except the woman's whispered threat, like the warning hiss of a serpent: "We will teach you to tattle."

The boy's grandfather remembers that a few evenings before, as they were driving past the spot that was the scene of the attack upon the boy, the child noticed a couple strolling down the roadside.

The man's arm was about the woman's waist. Her head rested upon his shoulder. As the carriage passed the absorbed couple the boy cast a merry glance toward the pair.

"Look, grandfather," he said, and the pair flashed back defiance at him from angry eyes.

The grandfather thought he recognized a belle of the village and a man who long ago assumed the obligations of husband and father. But he is not sure. For he is old and his eyes are dim.

English From a Foreigner's Standpoint.

IMAGINE yourself a foreigner striving to master the construction of the English language. Perhaps you may be gazing at a number of vessels on the water, and exclaim:

"See, what a flock of ships!" You are at once told that a flock of ships is called a fleet, and that a fleet of sheep is called a flock. It might also be added for your future guidance that a flock of girls is called a bevy, while a bevy of wolves is called a pack; yet a pack of thieves is called a gang, and a gang of angels is called a host; but a host of porpoises is called a shoal, and a shoal of buffaloes is called a herd.

Still, a herd of children is called a troop, but a troop of partridges is called a covey; a covey of beauties is called a galaxy, while a galaxy of ruffians is called a horde; further a horde of rubbish is called a heap, yet a heap of oxen is called a drove; a drove of blackguards is called a mob; but a mob of whales is called a school and a school of worshippers is called a congregation.

WHY WE SLAVES OF THE HAREM ARE ESCAPING FROM THE TURKS

"American Mission Schools Have Taught Us That There Is Something Else and Better In Life Than to Be the Mere Playthings of Men. Some Day the Women of Turkey Will Rise In Mass and Proclaim Their Freedom. It Will Be Worse Than a Civil War. Wives Will Not Hesitate to Slay Their Husbands, Mothers Their Sons, Sisters Their Brothers," Says Beautiful Saila Omarunyi, a Fugitive Bride from Constantinople.

"TURKISH BEAUTIES MARKED FOR THE HAREM ARE LIKE THOSE PRINCESSES WHO WERE CHAINED TO ROCKS AND DEVOURED BY DRAGONS IN YOUR FAIRY TALES."

Paris, July 28.

THE steadily increasing number of Turkish women who escape from harems in Constantinople and fly to the French capital for refuge, dreading capture by their masters—which means being sewn up in a sack and drowned in the Bosphorus—has brought to light a remarkable and significant revolt against this feature of their religion among enlightened members of the fair sex in the Sultan's realm.

Beautiful Saila Omarunyi, daughter of a wealthy banker of Constantinople, who recently came to Paris in disguise because she had been virtually sold to an influential Turk whose harem was already well filled, tells a startling story, which is forwarded herewith.

The statement of Hassan Yousef Bey, a Turkish diplomat here, will also be read with interest in America, whose women travellers have done more than any others to impress upon their Turkish sisters how sad and degraded their situation really is.

Parisians are not deceived by the light and careless view Turkish men in public life pretend to take of this slumbering revolt of the women of their country. They rather believe all that such refugees as Saila Omarunyi assert—that the Turkish harem is an institution doomed ere long to go down in a bloody revolution.

By SAILA OMARUNYI.

WHEN I saw the harem of a rich and powerful Turk in Constantinople opening its doors to receive me, though it already contained four women, my heart turned sick within me. I was under seventeen years of age, and in my father's house, overlooking the Golden Horn, I had met Western women travelers and had learned of their happiness and dignity, each as the one and only wife of a loving husband.

The thought that the degradation of my mother, of my mother's mother and of all their women ancestors for generations was soon to be mine was more than I could endure.

So I fled. Aided by a sympathetic domestic in my father's employ and by a careful disguise, I reached Paris and safety. Rather than be captured and taken back I will die.

Turkish beauties marked for the harem are like those princesses who were chained to rocks and devoured by dragons in your fairy tales. Oh, it is horrible, horrible!

It would not be so horrible if we did not know how blessed other women are. It is not like it used to be in the days of our grandmothers, when no Turkish women ever traveled, and we knew nothing of the outside world.

Now we have books, and we sometimes meet women from America and from other parts of Europe. When I first met one of these women I was amazed. How free, and how happy they were!

They seemed to me like another order of beings. It was almost impossible to believe that a woman could go and come as she pleased; that she could remain single if she chose to do so, and that it was her right to select her own husband, who could have no other wife than her.

American Women Ideals.

How proud and beautiful, how stately and graceful they were! What lithe, strong figures, even when past middle age, while our women, except when quite young, were fat from overindulgence in sweetmeats and ungainly in their walk because of days full of idleness, reclining on divans and sitting cross-legged on cushions!

How resolute and confident these Western women are! Not only are their bodies free, but so are their minds. I listened in wonder when they told of their happy lives, there in my father's house where they were guests.

Doubtless he never dreamed how I was enchanted by the life they pictured. It is impossible for the men of Turkey to believe that their women could seriously covet anything which is contrary to our religion. But they are blind, and before their eyes are opened terrible things will have happened.

Our religion is all for the men, just as our women are. We Turkish women cannot be truly religious unless we yield absolutely to the behests of our masters. We have no individual place in the world. If we gain heaven in the end it will be only because we have been obedient slaves to the particular man who owns us.

Turkish women are brought up to think of nothing in the world but to pamper their bodies in a way that will please the men. That is how my own girlhood was spent.

Young girls, even when they are nothing but children, are given to understand that their ultimate fate is to be shut up in a place which will be exactly like the one they are now living in. Always the same thing, for ever and ever—nothing new, nothing different!

We are all told when young that it is our lot, prescribed by our religion, to be born and to live and die within four walls, with an occasional outing supervised by a regular gorgon of a governess.

Everything is chosen for us, even our women friends. If we happen to see a girl whom we think we might like, we may never speak to her unless our father or our husband gives his permission.

I think it is this constant espionage, this hopelessness of ever escaping the monotony that surrounds our lives, that makes unmarried Turkish women revolt at the thought of the harem for which they are being prepared, for we all live in about the same way.

Now that we have learned something of the lives of the women in other countries we realize what prisoners we Turkish women really are. We have learned that if other European or American girls do not wish to marry they don't have to. Or, if she does not love the man who wants to marry her she has the right to dismiss him. She is free. She may see some man that she knows she can love, and is free to try and inspire the same sentiment in him, with the wonderful prospect of becoming the one wife of the man she loves and who loves her.

How deceived the Turkish men are in believing that we do not now think of these things, and eat our hearts out over our miserable fate! We are cruelly forced to be brides in the harem against our will. We are compelled to share with other women the affections of a husband. Often the husband selected for a Turkish girl is positively repulsive to her. That makes no difference; she must go to him and be his slave. He has even power over her life.

That husband is no less terrifying to a young Turkish bride than the fairy tale dragon I have mentioned, who devours at his leisure beautiful princesses who are chained to the rocks where he dwells.

And after marriage, in the harem—what a life! Most Turkish girls immediately resign themselves to physical indulgences that soon leave them as mindless as cattle. They become fearfully greedy. I shudder when I think how even we girls used to stuff ourselves with sweets. Look at the way women in the streets of Constantinople waddle. Grace? There's no such thing in Turkey.

But now there is a revolution preparing in the hearts of Turkish women. Your women visitors to us and the American mission schools have brought this about. These teachers have taught us that there is something else, and better, in life than to be the mere plaything of men—that women are not meant to be nothing but breeders of men, but to be men's companions intellectually, and their equals.

For the reasons I have given love in Turkey is never legitimate. Almost never do our women love the men they marry. Most of them never know the blessing of loving and of being loved.

When we love it is not some man for whose harem we are designed. It is some one we have seen passing under our window, some one whose voice we have heard, yet some one whom we may never speak to, never know on peril of our life.

If he sees and loves in return, tragedy hangs over all. It sometimes happens. Terror adds joy to clandestine meetings which are bound to be discovered, being so difficult. Then there is death for him, death for her. The bowstring poison—a sack and the waters of the Bosphorus, such is the fate of Turkish women who dare to love, who try to seize a little real happiness.

Oh, to live, and love, and work and think for one's self, speak freely, unashamed! That is the Turkish woman's dream to-day.

Some of us know what freedom means now, and we risk our lives to enjoy it.

Some day, instead of our slipping away in ones and twos, like thieves in the night, the women of Turkey will rise in a mass and proclaim their freedom. There will be a revolution such as the world has never seen. The women will fight against the men. It will be worse than a civil war, where men take up arms against their brothers, and sons against their fathers. Wives will not hesitate to slay their husbands, mothers their sons, sisters their brothers.

We will hew down the barriers that have hemmed us in for centuries even though we must slay the men of our own households to accomplish this.

It will not be an ordinary war, where cannon and guns are used, but a wholesale massacre. An apotheosis of assassination, in which the dagger and the poison cup will be our weapons.

Ah, you have no idea what loving slaves we could be to the men who won our hearts, and whom we felt we did not have to serve.

A Revolution of Turkish Women? Bah!

BY HASSAN YOUSEF BEY.

A REVOLUTION of Turkish women to escape harem life?

Bah! It is all nonsense. A few silly creatures run away, but there is no fear that Turkish life is on the eve of a great upheaval. Existence in a harem is part of our religion for women. They accept it and believe in it. You know yourself that when Western women are religious, you don't shake their faith easily. Well, the religion of Turkey is not going to be uprooted in a day by a few hysterical houris who want to show off.

The trouble all comes through women from the western parts of Europe. They go to Turkey and get into the harems and stir up the women's ideas and make mischief generally.

Then, too, Turks themselves travel much more than they used to. They take their women along with them. In France, for instance, the law forbids a man keeping a harem. He has to get along with one wife. The woman takes to the notion. She likes to be the only one. When she goes back to Constantinople she tells her friends about her life in Paris, and then they want to do the same.

Oh, no, we Turks don't tremble in our boots yet, notwithstanding the dreadful threats of your pretty Saila Omarunyi. You'll notice, by the way, that all the women who run away are pretty ones. They know well enough, the sly foxes, that they will always find a protector willing enough to allow them their freedom if he can enjoy their beauty when it pleases him.

Midsummer Follies and Extravagan

1—How the Unblushing Peek-a-Boo Shirt Waist Has Grown Worse and Worse Until It Has Demoralized Business Life, Ministers Have Shut It Out of the Churches and It Has Got Into the Courts.

THE well recognized innate tendency of woman to carry fashions to outrageous extremes receives a startling illustration this year in the garment popularly known as "the peek-a-boo waist." It has now reached a phase of disclosure entirely beyond anything dreamed of in civilized countries since the pagan fashions of drapery yielded to the advance of modesty.

The peek-a-boo waist heads the list of all the follies which woman is committing this Summer in the name of fashion. Philosophers, be it noted, have observed that woman is especially prone to commit follies in Summer. Associated with the peek-a-boo waist in prevalence and in provocative character is the open-work or peek-a-boo stocking.

The question of the peek-a-boo waist is a serious one for the American people. Leading clergymen have thundered denunciations of it from the pulpit. It has given rise to cases in the police courts. In the opinion of clergymen, magistrates and other high authorities, it is the cause of wickedness, strife and widespread demoralization in social and business life.

The New York Telephone Company has been forced to issue orders that its women employes shall not wear peek-a-boo waists.

It was found that the men employes were so distracted by the new developments and vagaries of the peek-a-boo, as exhibited by their near neighbors in the office, that they were practically unable to attend to business, thereby causing great annoyance to the public. A leading bank president called to have his house telephone disconnected for the Summer, and addressed his instructions in vain to an assistant manager, whose eyes were busy exploring the mysteries of a peek-a-boo waist.

Even a Parisian leader of fashion has declared that the peek-a-boo waist is immodest. The Countess de Noailles has declared that any woman who wears a shirt waist exposing her bare shoulders is deficient in good breeding. The decollete gown may be excused on the ground that it is worn in the company of friends and intimates, but the peek-a-boo unveils the wearer to the populace. This denunciation from a Parisienne is as significant in its way as that of religious leaders.

In one case the waist led to a violent altercation between persons of good social position and a subsequent appearance in the police court. Upon a recent evening Mrs. Mary Linck and her husband, of No. 835 Cherry street, Philadelphia, were returning home from the theatre. They were in a crowded street car and were both standing up. Behind them stood Mr. Joseph Bruce, of No. 4541 North Twentieth street. Mrs. Linck was wearing a peek-a-boo waist of unusually provocative design. The demon of perversity was aroused in Mr. Bruce by the sight of this garment just under his nose. He happened to have an instrument of mischief at hand in the shape of a straw. This he passed through the interstices of Mrs. Linck's waist and proceeded to tickle her. Thinking it was a mosquito Mrs. Linck slapped at the place on her back, and Mr. Bruce quickly withdrew the straw. He chuckled deeply at the joke, and began it again as soon as she took away her hand. There were actually a great many mosquitos in the air. She slapped and slapped and told her husband how maddening the mosquitos were. Suddenly she turned round and caught Mr. Bruce in the act of tickling. She angrily denounced the offender and grappled with him. Mr. Linck then had the car stopped and gave Mr. Bruce into the custody of a policeman.

Bruce was arraigned at the Central Police Court before Magistrate Kochersperger, who decided that the act of tickling constituted a technical assault and battery, and held Bruce in $600 bail for trial. It is considered by many that the peek-a-boo waist should be regarded as a justification of this offence, or at least, a greatly extenuating circumstance.

The peek-a-boo waist occupied the police court on another occasion. Dr. Jacques Schnier, a dentist, of No. 601 Lexington avenue, New York, appeared before Magistrate Whitman in the Yorkville Police Court and made a complaint against Miss Adelina Weissman, who lives in the same house. Miss Weissman is pretty and plump, with flashing black eyes and abundant hair. The doctor complained that she wore "an awfully tantalizing peek-a-boo waist," and that wearing this she came and looked at him while he was engaged in the delicate art of filling teeth and distracted his attention. The Magistrate did not find a cause for criminal proceedings, but warned Miss Weissman not to disturb Dr. Schnier unnecessarily.

By the Church the peek-a-boo waist is generally condemned. Mgr. McNamee, of St. Theresa's Church, Brooklyn, looked over his congregation and was shocked that most of the young and attractive women in it were wearing peek-a-boo waists, and in many cases very short sleeves.

"It is disgraceful the way some of the women come to the altar to receive communion," said Mgr. McNamee. "I have been pained to see them coming to the sacrament with these transparent waists and, worse yet, with the sleeveless waists, with hideous looking gloves as substitutes for sleeves. I hope I will not be obliged to say any more on this question."

The Rev. Dr. MacFarland, on behalf of the Ministerial Association, of Iowa, denounced the peek-a-boo. "Our mothers would have thrown up their hands in holy horror if they had been asked to wear the kind of waists the girls now wear," he said.

Women who wear short sleeved, low necked or open-work waists are not permitted at the communion rail of St. Ignatius's Catholic Church, at Kingston, Pa., in them, according to the directions of Father N. E. Lynott, who has told the women of his congregation that he thinks such waists are immodest.

He hopes they will not wear them at any time, and expressly forbids the women to wear them when they are taking communion.

Father Jordan, of St. Mary's Parish, at Pittston, Pa., has followed the lead of Father Lynott, and in the future will decline to allow women wearing peek-a-boo waists at the communion rail. He has notified the women of his parish that he considers waists with short sleeves, low necks or open-work in front immodest, and that it is improper for women to go to communion in them.

A few Sundays ago the pastor of St. Cecilia's Church, in Rochester, Pa., Rev. Father Schoerner, on rising to preach saw before him in the congregation two young women wearing especially flagrant examples of the up-to-date, open-work, sleeveless shirt-waist.

"Go home!" he thundered at them. "Take off those bathing suits; this is a church of God, not a bathing resort."

Father Schoener's only mistake was the injustice he did to the bathing suit. At no known resort would bathing suits modelled on such a design be permitted.

Short sleeves and low-cut dresses and "peek-a-boo" waists have been barred from the choir of Trinity Episcopal Church, in Asbury Park, of which the Rev. W. N. Baily is rector.

The Rev. Mr. Baily says members of the congregation have made complaint to him in regard to the attire of the members of the choir.

The leading Methodists of Missouri have strongly condemned peek-a-boo garments. The following official warning is published in the Church Herald of to-day for the guidance of those attending the Feast of the Tabernacles at College Mound, Macon County, August 2 to 12:

"Please do not let any young ladies come to the campmeeting with arms and necks exposed by thin sleeves and waists. It seems immodest and unbecoming enough to wear such garments at home, where no one sees you but your father and brothers."

Jewels of all kinds have long since been barred by the Holiness people, but this is their first proclamation against peek-a-boo shirt waists and arm exposure.

Women are showing a fondness this Summer for several garments which seem fitting accompaniments of the peek-a-boo waist. One of these is the thin white bathing suit. At Lake Hopatcong, N. J., a young woman gave a fine imitation of Venus rising from the sea. She wore a costume that seemed too beautiful to wet. It was of white brilliantine, trimmed with blue polka dot silk. The blouse was sleeveless, the neck was low, the skirt was short. A white silk cap was perched on Venus's head. Long, very long, extremely long pink silk stockings encased her limbs.

When this bather emerged from the water and took a sun bath on the pavilion 600 persons surrounded her, but their stares did not disconcert her. When finally she went to the bathhouse a crowd followed her. The manager of the bathhouse ordered her to leave by the rear door and warned her to wear a different bathing suit the next time she bathes there.

The Rev. Mr. Johnson has been preaching against young women, and young men, too, "who go about the bathing grounds with their chests bared and their arms exposed."

It is interesting to recall briefly the evolution of the peek-a-boo waist. Like other outrageous fashions, such as the crinoline and the eel-tight skirt, it had a comparatively innocent beginning. That was in the year 1900. It was at first confined to a simple little yoke, outlining a pretty girl's neck and giving fleeting glimpses of the interior decoration. It was graceful, coquettish, piquant. It was a tantalizing hint, not a bare-faced revelation.

By 1902 the peek-a-boo shirt waist had reached another stage in its evolution. The open-work yoke had extended its limits and began to frankly disclose features which garments were supposed to veil.

In 1904 the extent of open-work territory claimed by the shirt waist was increased by spacious Vs descending in front and in the rear to points beyond the limits that mere man had expected fair woman to fix.

In 1905 "panels" of various shapes came to the aid of the V's in adding space, variety, interest and intricacy to the area of exposure.

In the present season the shirt waist, it is believed, has got as near to the Trilbyan "altogether" as it may dare to go.

And fitting companions in disclosure and exposure of the peek-a-boo, apt aiders and abettors in allurement of the casual eye are the open-work stockings. Like the peek-a-boo, they, too, began their career in most modest guise.

Mere pinpricks traced in varied designs that flashed faint, fleeting visions of pink-white points of flesh. But to-day they also have advanced to a point where the word "open-work" possesses hardly strength sufficient to be adequately descriptive.

3—The Silly Craze to do Something New in Dinners and Dances and the Clownish Performances of the Newport Smart Set.

SEVERAL hundred of the richest people in America are gathered together in Newport, with nothing to do but spend money, and comparatively few methods of spending it.

Really, they do very little but eat and drink and wear new clothes. When they ask other people to come and eat and drink and wear new clothes with them they call it giving an entertainment. There is a tremendous striving among the Newporters to make their entertainments novel. They decorate the table in a strange manner, and dance in strange clothes. As they are neither artists nor theatrical entrepeneurs, nor persons of imagination, the result is almost invariably dreary and silly.

This craze for novelty has resulted in giving the world such triumphs of stupidity as "the baby dance," "the looking backward dance," the monkey luncheon" and "the vegetable dance."

The mania for bizarre entertainments has assumed a more acute form this season than ever before and never has the absence of wit, humor, taste and artistic imagination been more marked.

Probably the most pleasantly foolish affair of the present season at Newport was "the baby dance," on July 4. The men and women wore baby dresses, carried nursing bottles, rattles and dolls.

They made their debut in automobiles, as serenaders, on the lawn of Miss Gladys Deacon at Snug Harbor, on Bellevue avenue, where Miss Gladys is spending the Summer with her grandmother, Mrs. Charles H. Baldwin.

The young women of the party included Miss Vera Gilbert, the Misses Irene and Mildred Sherman, Miss Constance Whitney Warren, Miss Charlotte Warren and Miss Sybil Kane. They were met on the lawn at Snug Harbor at 11 p. m. by [illegible] party of young men [illegible] came over from Ochre Point, all in infant [illegible].

The young [illegible] sang their clan song, "Mother Pin a Rose [illegible]." They asked for a rose, but Miss Deacon summoned her guests to a supper, after which dancing followed.

Then a display of baby fireworks was given by the visitors on the lawn. Finally, they took their hostess along and serenaded Harold Vanderbilt at Belcourt.

Their last effort of the evening was to serenade the dinner party in honor of Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, which was the only arrangement Harry Lehr hadn't planned.

The climax of these entertainments would beyond question have been "the bathing suit dinner." It was announced that Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish would give a dinner dance at The Crossways, where all the guests would wear their bathing suits. These guests included Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Pierson, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. E. Rollins Morse, Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Lehr, Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Dyer, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones, Mr. and Mrs. James [illegible] Potter, Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Thomas, Mrs. Charles Hall, Mrs. Glen Collins, Miss Edith D[illegible] Miss Catherine Cameron, Miss Julia Fish, Miss Gwendolyn Burden, Joseph O. Mliott, James De Wolf Cutting, Lawrence L. Gillespie, Clarence W. D[illegible], Gould Redmond, Francis J. Otis and Harry [illegible].

According to the gossip which circulated very freely in Newport society, Mrs. Fish had requested each of her guests to come in a new and attractive bathing suit. The girls, it was said, had already ordered theirs for the occasion. They were made in the striking and novel style of the present season. The skirts reach just below the knees, the average length being twenty-seven inches. The skirts are mostly side-pleated. The waists are lined with a sheer lining and are cut in bolero style, with deep girdles and circular collars and cuffs of contrasting colors. They are made of silks, mohairs and poplins.

It was understood that some of the girls would wear canvas bathing shoes, and others their regular [illegible]. The men, it was said, would wear their ordinary unassuming bathing dress, consisting of a bathing shirt and trunks, with a ruffle or two at the bottom of the latter to make them look more dressy.

A fierce controversy raged for a few days among the Newport idlers over this proposed dinner dance. Some said that it was a delightfully original idea worthy of the exquisite fancy and powerful mind of Mrs. Fish. They ridiculed the suggestion that there was anything immodest about the idea. A bathing suit was, in fact, they said, much more modest than many an evening gown. Moreover, it was remarked that if you were going to dance in midsummer a bathing suit was the only sensible thing to do it in.

On the other hand, there were many sticks, old persons who were horrified at the idea. They said it was a grave sign of the decadence of manners among "our best families." They scouted the suggestion that there was any comparison between a bathing suit and a decollete gown. They pointed out the great truth that doing something unusual is the only way in which a woman can be immodest. Society has been accustomed for centuries to seeing her at the ball room more or less undraped at one end, but it would be none the less shocking to find the region of exposure suddenly changed. Besides, it was horrible to think of men, who had always dressed with perfect modesty at balls and dinner tables, going in this free and easy attire.

When Mrs. Fish heard this gossip and read some playful newspaper references to her proposed dinner, she grew very uncomfortable and then she issued the following statment:

"Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish asks the newspapers to deny that she proposed having her guests appear in bathing suits."

It was generally understood in Newport that this notice was issued only because of the publicity that had been given to the dinner, and not because it had not been planned.

A novel aberration of useless wealth was exhibited by Mrs. Ogden Goelet, who, of course, is a leading member of the Newport colony, at a dinner given by her in Paris in honor of the Grand Duchess Anastasia of Mecklenburg Schwerin. For this occasion she had a new flower cultivated at an enormous expense by a horticultural expert. It was of a shade of blue hitherto unknown in flowers, and was the result of a cross between a white carnation and a blue cornflower. Many other flowers would have been more beautiful, but the great necessity was to find one that was different from any other and would cost more money. The dinner was given at the [illegible] Ritz in Paris, and the guests included the D[illegible] of [illegible], the Prince of Wied, the Count and Countess Sierstorpff, Vicomte and Vicomtesse de Janze, the Comte de Gabriac and M. de Fare[illegible].

Then there was the vegetable dance, where everybody went dressed as a pumpkin, a cucumber, a turnip, a cabbage or some other distinguished looking vegetable. The idea of a gentlemanly cucumber addressing cool remarks to a blushing lady tomato was considered the funniest thing that the Four Hundred had ever thought of up to that time. Another exquisite witticism was that "the squash had got an awful mash on the beet."

At the looking backward dinner all the men and women went with their clothes put on so that what is usually the back part appeared in front. A man who walked toward you appeared to be walking backward, because the back of his coat was moving your way, although the fact that his face and his feet were turned in the direction he was going made the situation rather puzzling. There was an element of appropriateness about this entertainment, because the oddly mixed up attire of the dancers typified the state of mind of their social set.

A MAD RIDE IN A WILD NIGHT OF MURDER

A Tragedy of Human Passions In Tennessee In Which Two Men Were Killed, a Helpless Woman Shot, the Sheriff Wounded Almost to Death. With a Dramatic Hiding In an Endless Cave; and the Arrest of the Doctor and His Son's Sweetheart Who Had Driven Over the Course of the Vendetta.

The McPhersons Run for Their Buggy.

Mrs. Grant Smith, the Injured Widow.

Grant Smith, the First Man Murdered.

THE son of a leading physician of Knoxville, Tenn., has killed two men, wounded one man and one woman and fled to the mountains, where, hidden among the rocks, he holds all the Sheriff's posse at bay.

No one can approach him without being under fire for hundreds of yards, while it is absolutely impossible to tell behind just which boulder the murderer is hiding.

The story of the crimes and the wild midnight ride to the mountains is as thrilling as any ancient tale of piracy or highway robbery.

Dr. M. A. McPherson is one of the ablest surgeons of Knoxville, but is a man of violent and blood-thirsty temper, ready to kill on the slightest provocation. In 1897 he shot and mortally wounded Dr. Thomas Pickens, a young physician belonging to one of the most famous families of the South. Dr. McPherson's motive was merely jealousy at the growing success of the young doctor. So great, however, was Dr. McPherson's professional instinct that after mortally wounding his victim that he stopped and bound up his wounds in the most scientific manner before escaping to the mountains from which he only returned when he was sure that he would be acquitted.

Young John McPherson, the doctor's son, has inherited his father's ferocious character in an even more aggravated form and he has now far outstripped his father's record in bloodshed.

Young McPherson was formerly a suitor of Miss Nettie Hall, but his temper was unbearable and she married Grant Smith, a respectable young business man and the son of a prominent deceased clergyman.

On the evening of July 14 young McPherson, who had been drinking, went to the house of the Grant Smiths on Florida street, accompanied by his father. He called for Mrs. Smith and demanded that she should come away with him. It is said that he expected her husband would be away from the house and believed that he could persuade her to go with him. She absolutely refused to have any conversation with him, [illegible] him in the hall and told him to go away.

"I never wish to see you any more," she cried.

Roused to madness by her [illegible] scorning of [illegible] and [illegible] her [illegible] head with his heavy [illegible]. She fell to the ground and at the same time the pistol went off. Her husband rushed out from the parlor, thinking she was killed, and knelt over her.

"What is the matter?" he asked.

As he spoke McPherson shot him in the back and abdomen. It is said that the father also attacked Smith, using a surgeon's knife with great skill to make sure of his death.

Dr. McPherson.

John McPherson.

After the murder father and son began a wild flight for liberty. They hurried to the McPherson home on East Vine avenue, procured a horse and buggy and then drove to the house of Miss Eliza[illegible] Winstead, another sweetheart of John McPherson. It was about 11 o'clock at night and the girl was quickly awakened and ordered to dress. They took her because they believed the officers would not shoot at the McPhersons while they had a girl in company with them. The three drove rapidly south of the city, crossing the county bridge. One mile south of the city they met Dr. Joseph Waddell, a physician who was making a night call. Their buggy collided with his buggy in the darkness and John McPherson angrily assaulted the physician, knocking him from his buggy and injuring him severely. Dr. McPherson interfered and probably saved Dr. Waddell from death. The McPhersons left Dr. Waddell lying in the road and continued their journey going in the direction of Sevierville. Dr. Waddell after a time crawled to his buggy and drove to the residence of Deputy Sheriff William Walker, awakened the officer and informed him of the attack made on him. Together with the officer, the injured physician hurried after the McPhersons and a mile further overtook them. A shaft had been broken in the [illegible] and John McPherson was trying to mend it. Dr. McPherson had gone to the house of Thomas J. Burnett near by to secure a light.

"I am Deputy Sheriff Walker, and I arrest you," said the fearless young officer to John McPherson.

The young man drew his pistol and fired from the back of his horse at the officer. [illegible] struck Walker in the right shoulder, ranged through his body and passed part of the way through his backbone, causing paralysis of the lower limbs. His injuries were fatal. Miss Winstead looked on at the scene, paralyzed with terror. Dr. McPherson hurried up and [illegible] asked Walker.

"Who shot you?"

"I don't know," said the dying man, [illegible] that they would finish him [illegible] if he said that he knew.

Then Dr. McPherson, with the professional instinct always strong upon him, [illegible] bound up Walker's wounds.

The McPhersons continued their wild [illegible] [illegible] Sevier County [illegible] Sunday morning. Dr. McPherson and the girl went as far as the home of Benjamin McPherson, the doctor's brother, explained the circumstances and requested that his son be placed in safe hiding and cared for until further notice. John McPherson obtained plentiful supplies of provisions and ammunition and at night went on to the mountains.

The physician and the girl, weary from the night's work, returned to this city, arriving here late Sunday afternoon. The girl was driven to the home of her sister, where she was arrested immediately on the charge of being concerned in the murder of Sheriff Walker. Dr. McPherson telephoned that he would surrender, and officers met him as he was leaving his gate on his way to the Central Police Station. Both were committed to jail by a magistrate, the father on one charge of murder and one of assault on the officer.

A strong Sheriff's posse went on John McPherson's trail and a reward was at once offered by Sheriff Kreis for his arrest.

William Walker, the Murdered Deputy-Sheriff.

Miss Elizabeth Winstead, Unwilling Witness of the Crime.

After studying the tracks the officers came to the conclusion that John McPherson was hiding in Devil's Den, a wild spot in the Tenth District of Sevier County.

Dr. McPherson admits that his son is concealed in Devil's Den. Describing this place to a correspondent of this newspaper who talked with him at the jail he declared that the son, if he wasn't foolish and didn't take unnecessary chance of exposure, could remain at [illegible] indefinite time. From what Dr. McPherson said, the indefiniteness of time depends on the [illegible] of the son. It is presumed that relatives familiar with the wonderful country will keep up the food supply, as the Den affords excellent opportunity to the one hiding to see those in pursuit without being seen. If the one in hiding has rifles and pistols, as John McPherson has, with plenty of ammunition, he can hold his pursuers at bay as long as he keeps fairly well.

If the worst should come to the worst and some one betrays John McPherson, he has still the Devil's Chimney Top cave to [illegible] into. If it is hard to get him in the Den, it is almost impossible to take him in the Chimney Top cave.

One can stand at the top of the Chimney-Top, and this is as near as any novice ever gets without a guide and credentials, and drop a rock into the crevice at his feet and hear the rock bounding and rebounding below until "one's breath is almost gone," in the words of Dr. McPherson, and he knows. Deep down where that rock is striking there is a little aperture known to but very few. In this entrance, one who knows how can crawl into a great cave and be free from the storms of Winter and the heat of Summer.

It was suggested to Dr. McPherson that a supply of matches would be necessary.

"Punk and flint are good enough," he declared. "There are plenty of nice places to build a fire in the den and a man might see the smoke and be almost over it, but he would have to travel many a hundred yards to get to the spot.

"I'll take you through Devil's Den one day when I get out of here," was the interesting invitation of the doctor to the reporter. "It is in a gorge of some forty acres and this gorge is filled with great boulders, some of immense size. They are of different heights and you have to know how to thread your way along at their base. If a man starts in ahead of you by ten minutes, he will be ten minutes ahead of you at the end of the journey, for you will both have to crawl through the same places, wind around the same boulders. There is no way of making a short cut. There are places where he could see you when you couldn't see him, and he might point his gun at three of you, one at a time like this (illustrating his speech with his hands) and pick you off at his pleasure. I scouted in there a year and I know. I finally surrendered when I got ready and I might just as well have been there now. You can't appreciate Devil's Den without first seeing it and having somebody take you through."

Dr. McPherson was referring to the hunt made for him after the Pickens murder when he spoke of scouting. After he had been in hiding a month a reward of $300 was offered for his capture. Later, relatives of Dr. Pickens further increased the reward, and finally the Governor of the State increased the reward to $500. Dr. McPherson finally arranged with a relative to capture him that the relative might claim the reward. This was done and the reward was paid to the relative and then turned over to Dr. McPherson, who used the money in defending himself. In the present case against the son, Smith's relatives have stated that they would increase the reward this coming week, and Walker's relatives, in the event of his death, will further increase the reward.

At present the officers are besieging the Devil's Den, taking care that McPherson does not come out, but it is doubtful if any one will face the prospect of practically certain death by venturing inside.

Some Valuable Vacation Hints.

FOOD Most Suitable for Hot Weather—In dry, sultry weather the heat ought to be counteracted by means of a cooling diet. Cucumbers, melons and juicy fruits should be used, also acid foods and drinks, such as salads, lemons and oranges, taken with sugar. Much meat should be avoided, as it is extremely heating; also fatty food of all kinds.

To Remove a Bee-sting—Pull the sting out at once with the fingers or a needle. Press a key tightly over the stung part; this forces the poison out; wipe the place and then apply the bluebag.

If the feet are sore after a long walk or vigorous exercise, massage them with olive oil. They respond to care very quickly.

Cycling in moderation is an excellent aid to health; but long distances are not to be advocated.

A Touch of Sore Throat—Wring out a cloth in strong salt and water and bind it around the throat when going to bed. This is an excellent remedy for some throats.

Going bareheaded in the evening, which was a fad for a few Summers among girls, doesn't seem likely to be revived this Summer, if one may guess by the way maids are making provisions for muslin and lace hats.

Tennis is an excellent game for keeping the muscles in use, but should never be played immediately after a meal or in the heat of noonday.

Bed rooms, especially those immediately under the roof, often feel stiflingly hot on Summer evenings and make one feel disinclined for bed. One good way to keep them cool is to hang a damp dust sheet over the window while the sun is hot, and when the sun goes down set door and window open to catch all the air possible.

Summer Colds. Nothing in time so destroys good looks as constant ill health and neglected colds. The skin loses its healthy look and becomes worn and sallow. Damp shoes and stockings ought to be especially guarded against, as these are fruitful sources of illness.

To Cool Liquids Without Ice—Take a bottle of water, surround it with a piece of linen dipped in water and place it in a thorough draught. It will be found that the liquid in the bottle will be reduced in temperature much below that of the surrounding air. This is due to evaporation.

If you sigh for a glimpse of the country, do not waste your time in hot, dusty trains. A few days, even hours, are made the most of when spent visiting any charming spot within a few hours of the city. Travel by coach or boat if possible, and spend all the time in the air and sunshine.

Midsummer Coats of Linen and of Lace

F—Back View of E.

THIS Summer has seen the development of some of the daintiest thin wraps imaginable. They are eminently becoming, very dressy and attractive in appearance, and give just that slight additional warmth necessary to comfort in any sudden cool.

There are women who will claim that a thin lace coat has no warmth. Just let them try it. One does not require anything more than a slight protection against Summer breezes, which seldom demand a warm wrap except on cool nights at the seashore or in the mountains.

The light Summer wraps are in all lengths and all are lovely. They are made to match and to contrast with gowns both in materials and color. Diaphanous black coats are sometimes trimmed with an edging of brown chiffon, and, generally speaking, black lace coats are much in vogue. In all colors lace coats are of transparent and thin laces, rather than of Irish crochet and similar heavy laces. Of course the weight of a coat must be governed by the material which forms the gown.

The newest lace coats are made of Valenciennes, rechantier and combinations of lace and delicate embroidery. These are dyed to match the coloring of a gown or else they are in some harmonizing shade of the dress, or contrast with it. It is particularly effective to have the coat in a different shade of the same color as that of the gown, the coat usually being prettier when of a darker tint.

Both white and colored lace coats are worn with white gowns, and yellow lace wraps are quite charming over dresses of white.

The fad for combining lace and embroidery in coats gives an opportunity for the making of most economical and elegant lingerie wraps. Left-over bits of embroidery can be worked into pieces of lace which may, perhaps, be heirlooms of the family, making the lace go farther and saving it from being cut unnecessarily.

Very smart wraps of this character are frequently made of linen appliqued with heavy lace, while sleeveless linen jackets, embroidered by hand and sometimes trimmed with lace, are very chic and new.

Some novel and attractive styles are introduced in the short dressy wraps illustrated upon this page. One of these is the quaint shawl-front coat shown in Figure A. The back, which is illustrated in Figure B, is cut like that of a bolero, of linen, with very short bolero fronts, which are cut in a V from the shoulder, leaving the front of the neck very open.

Except for the short shoulder seam the entire back is outlined by a band of hand-made crochet, of the simple old fashioned kind, over an inch in width. A decorative design, over four inches in width, is worked of thick linen crochet thread almost like cord and is in a very open pattern. Above the bottom row of crochet trimming the little linen fronts are tucked in pin tucks up to nearly an inch above the crochet band. This gives shape as well as effectiveness to the jacket fronts. Below the wide crochet band is sewed a deep shawl point with a border of six points headed by hemstitching and edged with a wide border of open crochet lace finished with little crochet roses and balls covered with tucked linen.

In the back is a wide square collar of crochet, and in the front lapels of linen that extend from the shoulder to the point of the V in front. These lapels are bordered with tabs and puffed squares, as along the front. Where the collar meets the front edges it is bordered with five lengthwise pin tucks.

At the bottom of the back the border of tabs and puffs is repeated, while the entire coat, including its armholes and collar, is edged with crochet roses and balls covered with tucked linen. This combination of crochet roses and linen balls makes a very effective edging and novel fringe.

The coat is without lining, except under the wide crochet in the fronts, where chiffon is sewed in to keep the crochet in place.

While this style of coat is very smart, expensive and all hand made, it may readily be seen how a woman who can make simple crochet can get up such a coat at a very trifling cost by making it herself.

A Little Coat in Irish Linen.

A chic little coat of Irish linen is illustrated in figure C. It has a square collar across the back that follows the outline of the neck only half way around the front, at which point it extends down the side, concealing a seam and terminating in a fancy point at the bottom. This collar and the panel formed down the fronts are bordered by rows of narrow embroidery in straight and wavy lines. The rest is embroidered in large floral patterns in raised and flat embroidery. The panels are crossed over their upper portions and above the fancy points, by narrow embroidered straps held in place by buttons. Small geometrical patterns are outlined all over the coat by embroidered cord effects, some of them made by the application of an embroidered cord, which comes like soutache braid in width, and which may be applied so as to look like band work.

The little geometrical patterns are decorated with chainstitching which twists in tiny circles all along the chain. The larger patterns are crossed by parallel bars of linen lutestring or very narrow tape, held down by thick stitches of mercerised embroidery cotton, like tiny crossing straps. This effect is wonderfully new and attractive. The neck is cut quite deep in front, with an almost square effect in two points on each side.

On the bottom the fronts are rounded at the corners, and cut in slanting square corners on each side.

The armhole extends from shoulder to waist line, where the sides of the front and back are cut in pieces not three inches in width. These are pointed at the ends and cross like straps.

While this side arrangement is newer and smarter than the underarm pieces with which we are familiar, the coat may be brought up to the usual height under the arm and sleeves be inserted, if desired.

Rheumatic people would find the jacket best for them with a sleeve. In this case the sleeve would be decorated like the rest of the coat and preferably be short and open.

A Lovely Effect in Pale Brown.

White mull forms the lining of this coat, and this is bordered by Valenciennes beading, edged with a Valenciennes frill, which shows along the edges of armhole, front and bottom. Pink baby ribbon is run through the beading.

This coat may be made of any color to match a gown, and would be lovely in very pale brown embroidered in a deeper tint of brown, but with little difference in the shading.

White pique combined with transparent open lace are the materials employed in the fetching coat shown in figure E.

Each front is cut with two square tabs at the bottom edge, the front one longer than that next to it. A few inches above these tabs two long strips are cut up the front, one forming the front edge and the next a panel about two inches in width, which comes to a point near the shoulder and is sewed to the ends of a strap that forms a collar around the back. The front border, strap, panel and collar are bordered by a narrow bias fold and trimmed up the middle with little closely gathered roses and small foliage made of tiny lutestring. This is gathered for the roses and put on in loops for the leaves, with cord embroidery for stems. Little crochet roses or lace buttons could be used for this decoration where it is not possible to get the lutestring.

The side of the back is cut in one piece from the bottom of the back to the bottom of the front. Transparent lace fills the spaces between the front border, panel and side, being shaped to fit the figure. The back and back portions of the underarm pieces are of transparent lace. The sides of the front and back and edges of the pique cut to fit over these portions of the coat, are edged with bias folds and trimmed with designs carried out in cords of pique and embroidery, together with crochet roses and foliage formed of lutestring outlined by embroidery cords.

The front of the armhole is cut in an open square to give shape to a shoulder epaulette of pique, scalloped across the bottom, where it hangs across a full short sleeve of lace. This sleeve has a narrow embroidered pique band around the bottom, with a Valenciennes frill on each edge. The lower frill hangs over a puffing of lace sewed over a band of chiffon, which gives it shape, and which is finished with another decorated pique band and two frills of lace.

The back of this coat, which is shown in figure F, is of lace, crossed at the lower portion by two embroidered straps. The pique side pieces are cut in one piece, with the strap across the bottom of the back. Pique side panels end in two square tabs, one on each side the centre of the back, showing transparent lace between them. The lace underarm pieces are crossed by three [illegible] pique straps. A [illegible]loped border of lace shows all around the coat bottom, except where it is hidden by the two square tabs in the back.

Loops and ends of braided narrow white braids are tipped by chains of crochet and linen bead dangles.

ONLY AN INNOCENT SCHOOL GIRL PRANK

IN a recent issue of the Sunday American and Journal appeared an article headed "Oh! Those Shocking Pranks of Vassar's Naughty Six," which in giving an account of the suspension from Vassar of the Misses Elizabeth and Genevieve McLure, of Wheeling, W. Va., and Miss Murdock, of Ironton, O., stated that the three ladies in question had visited a notorious resort located in Poughkeepsie and known as the Hotel Savoy, a picture of which accompanied the article as sent in by the correspondent. The American and Journal has learned that an injustice has been done these young ladies, who come from highly respectable families and are highly esteemed in the communities in which they live.

The facts are that a young man, Richard S. Laffer, of the city of Wheeling, and a life-long friend of the McLure girls, while on a visit to New York City called to see the girls at Poughkeepsie and proposed that they take a ride to the country. Elizabeth McLure and he rode in her automobile, while Genevieve McLure and Miss Murdock rode horses. They went to the Millbrook Inn, a reputable place visited at times not only by the students of Vassar, but by the faculty and citizens of Poughkeepsie as well, and there took supper. They returned from said Millbrook Inn to the school without having gone or visited any other place whatsoever, and while they were disciplined by the faculty for having remained away longer than allowed by the strict rules of the school, their conduct involved nothing but a mere schoolgirl prank. Miss Elizabeth McLure took part in the commencement exercises, graduated with her class and received her diploma.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS.

Philip Masters, a gentleman in distress, is relieving a night watchman on Kingsway, London, when he sees a figure crawl out of a house and stop in a trench. The next morning the murdered body of Captain Henry Pollexfen, a retired sea captain, is found in the trench. The house is kept by Adrian Hilgay, who furnishes lodging to distressed gentlefolk only at 12 cents a night. Philip meets an old friend, Sir Anthony Didring, from whom he wins two hundred and fifty pounds, and is then called to attend the inquest on the captain's body.

CHAPTER IV.

An Old Sea Captain.

THEY dined together that evening at Sir Anthony's usual table in the Louis Quatorze Restaurant on the first floor of the Devonshire Mansions. It was the table between the second and third onyx pillars on the left as you enter by the grand entrance, not the entrance from the suite of the Half Moon Club. They had spent a curious but interesting day. It had rained most of the time. After Philip, in his laconic way, had finished reciting his Odyssey to the young baronet he had announced his intention of going out to get three suits of clothes, three suits and no more—a lounge suit, a frock coat with the latest in trouserings and waistcoats, and a dress suit. Philip meant to be economical, strictly so, but with two hundred and fifty pounds in his pocket he could not deny himself the satisfaction of replacing the dress suit which he had abandoned a few days before to a pawnbroker in Gray's Inn road. Sir Anthony had replied that, having regard to the weather, it was absurd to go out, and that the mountain, summoned by telephone, would certainly come to Mahomet. The mountain did come, in fact, several mountains came, including a Mont Blanc of a tailor, and a respectable Ben Nevis of a hosier. Nor was that the only miracle. By the intervention of Oxwich and the baronet Philip had his dress suit within eight hours.

After lunch they had both, with one accord, fallen asleep, and slept for two hours.

Then there had been tea, cucumber sandwiches, trying on, and a visit to an acquaintance of Sir Anthony's who had a flat in the mansion, Miss Kitty Sartorius, the renowned star of the Regency Theatre. It was Kitty's "day," and half the genius and all the golden youth of London were there.

"Look here," said Tony suddenly, during the timbale de macaroni, "we'll go for a run in the car to-morrow if it's fine."

"No," answered Philip firmly. "To-night I sleep at my Corner House in the corner reserved for me by Mr. Hilgay. To-morrow I begin to look for my living."

"Suppose you don't find it? Not so easy, you know. You've been trying some time."

"Ah!" said Philip. "But then I hadn't got three good suits of clothes, and money enough to keep me for a year. That frock coat I've ordered will get me a situation pretty nearly anywhere."

"Then you abandon me to my fate?"

"What fate?"

"Why, I haven't got a friend in the world, except you. I'm not in love. I'm not even in debt. I'm only bored." Sir Anthony sighed. "You don't fancy I'm happy, do you?"

"Not in love! You always used to be."

"The fact is," said the baronet, self-consciously, "I've had a serious reverse in that—er department. It's blighted my life, my boy. I shall never be the same man again."

"No, I know you won't," Philip smiled—"not until next time. Tell me about it. You've told me nothing really exciting yet about yourself." The tableau of the gay and irresponsible Tony ruined for eternity by a hopeless passion amused Philip.

"It was a"——

"Well, go on."

"No, I won't talk about it. I can't. I'll only tell you that I had a stall seventy-three nights running to see her. What do you think of that?"

"Sublime!"

"It's all very well for you to laugh—Ha! Mr. Varcoe! You here! Come and have coffee, will you?"

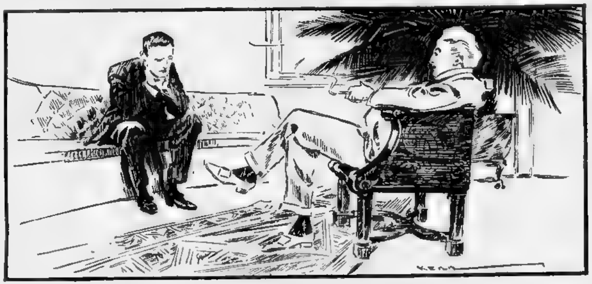
Mr. Varcoe stopped and bent the gaze of his spectacles on the baronet.

"A charming idea!" said Mr. Varcoe.

"Philip shivered in his spirit as he thought of himself asleep in the watcher's cabin."



"WHY I HAVEN'T GOT A FRIEND IN THE WORLD EXCEPT YOU."

"With pleasure. I'll be with you in an instant."

"And who is Mr. Varcoe?" Philip demanded, while the latter was away.

"Dashed if I know. Met him at Kitty's this afternoon. Didn't you see him? Seemed a very decent, agreeable, jolly sort of chap. Awful keen on swimming. Swims all through the year, he says, as I do. Challenged me to a race in the Serpentine on Christmas morning, but I wasn't having any. I should think he must be one of the cracks. Doesn't talk about anything else, you know."

"I suppose that's why you invited him to my dinner party," Philip observed.

"Awfully sorry, old man; I was thinking for the moment it was my party."

However, when Mr. Varcoe returned and had been introduced to Philip, he mentioned no word of swimming. He held in his hand a copy of the special edition of the "Westminster Gazette," and for a few seconds its contents seemed to preoccupy him to such an extent as to make him nervous.

"Anything in the paper?" Philip inquired nonchalantly.

Mr. Varcoe stared hard at Philip, fixing him with those spectacles.

"Yes," said he; "the murder of that old sea captain."

"What old sea captain?" Philip asked.

Mr. Varcoe glanced around the glittering room, which was now chiefly occupied by waiters. The little trio of two young, fair Anglo-Saxons, one dandiacal, and the dark man who might have been any age and of any nationality, was isolated in a sea of empty white tables.

"Captain Pollexfen," said Mr. Varcoe in a low calm voice.

"He was just a sea captain. That is almost all that's known."

"Where was he murdered? How was he murdered?"

"Back of his head smashed in."

"But where?"

"It isn't ascertained."

"But I suppose they've found the corpse?" said the baronet as he set fire to an R. P. Muria.

"Yes," replied Mr. Varcoe, still in the same low voice. "It was found this morning buried next to a sewer in an open trench near Kingsway."

"Nice sort of a cemetery!" Tony commented before Philip could put a word in. "Any clue?"

"One. There was a scheme to get rid of the regular watchman at the trench last night, and his place was taken by a young man," said Mr. Varcoe, looking Philip steadily in the face. "The murder was committed while the young man was in charge. The young man behaved very strangely to a policeman who happened to come up just afterwards. He then tried to get to bed at a lodging house exactly opposite to where the corpse was buried, and though he didn't succeed he ingratiated himself with the manager of the lodging house. Old Pollexfen had been staying in the house. This morning, after the gang of laborers had recommenced work on the trench the young man was found hovering near the spot, and he actually suggested to the foreman that the soil had been disturbed. He then fled."

"Sort of fatal fascination that the corpse has for its murderer, eh?" said the baronet.

"Perhaps," Mr. Varcoe admitted.

Philip half stood up, then sank back. "You're a detective, Mr. Varcoe!" he blurted out.

And Mr. Varcoe calmly said:

"I am."

"A detective!" exclaimed Anthony, shocked.

"And I've been keeping an eye on you both ever since ten o'clock this morning," added Mr. Varcoe.

A state of high tension existed at the table.

"You want me to go with you?" said Philip, motioning Tony to be silent. "You suspect me? Appearances are against me, [illegible]"

"Appearances might have been against you, my dear sir," said Mr. Varcoe, "if you had displayed the least agitation when I first mentioned a sea captain and the name of Pollexfen. But you did not. Thus my previous notion that you are not immediately connected with the murder is, to a certain extent, confirmed. Appearances, then, are not against you. On the other hand, they are not for you. And though I do not wish you to 'go with me,' I shall esteem it a favor if you will keep me informed of your address. At any rate, your evidence will be valuable. I would like your version."

"At once?"

"Why not?" said Mr. Varcoe, sipping his coffee. "If Sir Anthony does not object."

"Better come up to my rooms," Sir Anthony suggested. He was perplexed and unnerved by these revelations, for Philip had not mentioned to him the trench episode.

And up there, in the "den," after Philip had related everything he knew to the detective, a rather strange piece of conversation ensued.

"What about Pollexfen's relatives?" Tony asked. "Hadn't he any?"

Mr. Varcoe seemed to pierce into Tony's soul with a swift glance.

"Do you know," said he, "I was expecting that question from you."

"Why from me?"

"Because you are Sir Anthony Didring, that's all. Yes, Captain Pollexfen had relatives—a brother and a daughter. And the highly curious thing is that they have both disappeared."

"Since the murder?"

CHAPTER V.

Giralda.

IN a large chamber of irregular shape, with glass peep-holes in strange positions, a chamber that looked as if it had been originally designed by a child out of a box of bricks and subsequently enlarged by a pavement artist under the influence of wine, a chamber all whitewash and cement and concrete, and full of a strange odor, a shabby, self-conscious crowd of some twenty men and three women were wandering lumpishly about from peep-hole to peep-hole, spying, craning, grinning, whispering, wedging. And a universal instinct made them tread as softly as they could on the hard floor. Through one peep-hole was to be seen the corpse of a young child that had been overlaid by its parents, through a second the corpse of another young child that had been overlaid by its parents; through a third the corpse of a middle aged nun who had hung herself by means of a window cord in a Marist convent not far from Lincoln's Inn, and through a fourth the corpse of an old sea captain of whom little was known except that his name was Pollexfen and some one had buried him in a sewer, with the back of his head smashed in. This was the mortuary of a central London district. The audience whom the law had invited to the spectacle consisted of sundry witnesses whose consciences were more or less easy and a jury of small tradesmen and employes wrenched from their work, whose feelings were divided between annoyance, self-importance and curiosity.

The four corpses, waste product of one day's history in a single quarter of London, defied the scene and the crowd to rob them of their icy and majestic dignity. They reposed there in those compartments, with the indestructible proud calm, at once impressive and pathetic, that death alone can give.

Presently an aged nun and a well-dressed man entered with a policeman; and the crowd gaped. The nun was the Mother Superior of the Marist Convent and the man was Philip Masters. The Reverend Mother gave one glance through the peep-hole at the dead nun, pressed her thin lips tightly together, clasped her cross and went out on the instant. The policeman directed Philip to the peep-hole of Pollexfen, and Philip beheld a typical sailor's face, an old wrinkled reddish face, with a reddish gray beard that curved outward from under the chin, and a long smooth upper lip; the hair was awry. The hands were gnarled and pale. It seemed impossible that Captain Pollexfen was dead; he had the look of having dropped off to sleep for a few moments in his bunk. It seemed impossible that those simple eyes had but recently glimpsed murder in the eyes of another, and that that existence had survived the seas of half a century in order to end in a sewer and furnish copy for evening papers. It seemed horrible; it seemed uncanny, it seemed unreal. Philip shivered in his spirit as he thought of himself asleep in the watcher's cabin while, within a few yards of him, quick and ruthless hands had packed the unresisting limbs of the old sailor close to a common drain pipe in a common open street.

The policeman touched his shoulder. The mortuary had emptied; the private view was over; and the inquiry was to begin. It was already half past two in the afternoon. In the wake of the policeman Philip crossed the street to the Coroner's Court, a nondescript room that might have been a creche, a soup-kitchen, a workshop, a school, anything but a temple of justice. He had to show his subpoena at the door, and he was told curtly to sit on a certain bench. Near him he noticed a negro. The room was pretty full. A constable was taking the names of the jury who, officious and timid, sat in two rows on the side of the court opposite to the witnesses; at the back were a handful of persons who, being out of a job, were representing the great and enlightened British public. Two policemen, who struck the eye unfamiliarly because they were without their helmets, dominated the scene.

Then there was a movement; everybody rose; and the Coroner, the celebrated Mr. Acrefair, known by name to all newspaper readers, entered. He was a thin, active man of forty-five or so, dressed like a stock broker, and he carried a brown bag. In a fraction of time he had doffed his overcoat, ransacked his bag, and assumed his seat at the kneehole desk, which served as the judicial stall. And almost before Philip could realize the fact the inquest on one of the overlaid children had begun.

Mr. Acrefair did nothing but hold inquests. He passed his days in an atmosphere of sudden, violent and mysterious death. He was impassionable, disillusioned, undeceivable, and his methods were very rapid because he invariably had rather more work than he could do. In an hour and a quarter he had dealt with the two infants and the nun, censured the parents of one child, had a passage of arms with the Mother Superior, gently ridiculed a priest, examined altogether seventeen witnesses, summed up three times to the jury, and given effect to three verdicts. His celebrity, his ingenious economy of time, his skill in getting evidence, his placid and yet remorseless determination to have the unexaggerated and unminimized truth, his just estimate of human nature; his habit of absolute authority—these qualities astounded and delighted Philip, who thought how interesting it would be to catch that man one night in a quiet corner of his club and, through a haze of cigar smoke, listen to such philosophy as life had taught him.

And then Mr. Acrefair, after having signed some papers hurriedly, looked up at the jury, and said in a new tone of voice:

"The next case is somewhat remarkable, gentlemen, and will demand your special attention."

He apparently knew all about it.

The first witness was the constable who had been called to assist at the unearthing of the body. He gave his evidence as he might have poured tea out of a pot, smoothly, without pausing and without being questioned. He had merely watched the latter part of the process of exhumation. The corpse was lying parallel to the drain pipe, close to it, and with the face towards it. He had afterwards superintended the removal to the mortuary. He had been summoned at 7 15 on Tuesday morning. Having stated these facts he shut his little note book.

"You searched the body?" asked the Coroner.

"Yes, sir."

"What did you find?"

"Nothing whatever, sir."

The Coroner wrote, and gazed absently at a chromograph of the Prince of Wales which ornamented the wall in front of him.

Then came a doctor, a portly and pompous man in a blue melton overcoat. He had a long gray beard and a big white nose; his beard was in some sort an ideal that he had to live up to.

"You have made a post-mortem examination of the body of the man described by the last witness?"

"Yesterday afternoon."

"What was the cause of death?"

"Concussion and compression of the brain, caused by a violent blow at the base of the skull."

"Compression of the brain?" asked the foreman of the jury, seemingly resolved at all costs to protect the jury from mystification. He had a long gray beard, and a kind of rivalry was established. "Will the gentleman kindly tell us what compression of the brain is?"

"In the pathological sense?"

"In sense."

"Compression of the brain occurs whenever its structure is so squeezed that its functions are in any degree interfered with."

"Thank you," said the foreman.

"There were punctiform hemorrhages," continued the doctor, taking his revenge, "in the pons varolii and in the floor of the fourth ventricle. The whole surface of the brain was intensely congested. There was no external lesion; merely a very slight abrasion of the epidermis over a circular area of about five square inches."

"Not five inches square?" asked the coroner.

"No, sir, five square inches."

"Was death instantaneous?"

"It is impossible to say."

"Was the man dead before he was buried?"

"Yes."

"At what time do you estimate he died?"

"I began the necropsy at four o'clock yesterday afternoon. I judge that he had then been been dead about sixteen hours. That would make it that he died on Tuesday at midnight."

"The blow might have been delivered much earlier than that?"

"Not much earlier. Perhaps an hour at most."

"With what kind of an instrument do you suppose the blow was delivered?"

"Something soft and heavy. Probably a bag of wet sand."

"The injury could not have been caused by a fall?"

"No."

"Why not?"

"It would have needed a fall of thirty or forty feet, and such a fall would have broken half the bones in the body."

"Was the body well nourished?"

"Fairly well."

"What did it weigh?"

"At a guess, perhaps eleven stone."

"Have you any questions?" the Coroner demanded of the foreman of the jury.

"No, sir."

The Coroner finished writing, and resumed his stare at the portrait of the Prince of Wales.

Mr. Adrian Hilgay, who followed the doctor, was the first of the witnesses who wept. The respectability of the Corner House had been shaken to its very basis by the murder. The Coroner eyed him sharply.

"Your lodging house is a philanthropic undertaking, Mr. Hilgay?" he asked, after the preliminary questions.

"My boarding house"——

"You need not trouble to correct my phraseology," interrupted the Coroner. "I said lodging house."

Mr. Hilgay flushed. "It pays its way."

"What do you charge?"

"Sixpence or a shilling a night."

"And that pays? Rent? Interest on capital? Managerial expenses? Deterioration?"

"There is no rent. I am the manager. I accept no salary. I make a present of my capital to the concern. I haven't had time yet to think of deterioration."

"When you say it pays its way, then you mean that it pays for cleaning and service and that the meals are not served at an actual loss?"

"Yes."

"You are new to philanthropy?"

"We must all begin," said Mr. Hilgay.

"Just so," said the Coroner. "You think you are alleviating the poverty of London by your venture?"

"Certainly."

"Ah! What is your age, Mr. Hilgay?"

"I do not see"——

"How old are you, sir?"

"Twenty-six."

"You have identified the body of the deceased?"

"Yes; it is the body of Captain Pollexfen, who took a room in my house about ten days ago."

"The exact date?"

"The tenth October, I am nearly sure."

"What was his Christian name?"

"I do not know."

"Of what ship was the Captain?"

"I do not know."

"He had retired from service?"

"I believe so."

"What were his habits?"

"For a week past he had been unwell and stayed in his room, except occasionally for meals."

"Did he strike you as being poor—in reduced circumstances?"

"I imagined him to be like most of my boarders, hard put to it, but respectable."

"He did not talk much?"

"He didn't talk at all."

"Never chatted with you?"

"Never, except about the weather. He would usually mention the precise direction of the wind."

"At meals did he join in the conversation?"

"Very little."

"And he had no friends, no acquaintances?"

"There was a negro named Coco, who came to see him sometimes."

"In his room?"

"Yes."

"Do you know if he had just come from a voyage?"

"I do not."

"When did you last see him?"

"On Tuesday evening about eight o'clock."

It was at this point Mr. Hilgay wept.

"Where?"

"He came into the house and went upstairs. His room was on the first floor."

"You said he had not been out for a week."

"That was the first day he had been out. He had been out twice. Once in the afternoon about five, and again in the evening, after our dinner."

"How do you know that?"

"I saw him come in each time."

"Where were you?"

"In my office to the left of the hall. The door of my office is of glass, and from my desk I can see every one who comes in or goes out."

"How long did he remain the second time?"

"About half an hour."

"You saw him leave?"

"Yes. I went into my office after dinner, about seven, and I was either in my office or the hall continuously till four o'clock the next morning—Wednesday."

"Did you receive any new lodgers that day?"

"No. The house was full."

"And your old lodgers behaved as usual?"

"Absolutely."

"How many went out after Captain Pollexfen came in at eight o'clock?"

"None."

"Now mind what you are saying, Mr. Hilgay. You told us that no one could leave your house without your knowledge, and that you saw no one leave it after the Captain came in. Here he is in the house, presumably in his room, at eight o'clock at night, and yet early the next morning his body is found in the sewer-trench. How do you account for that?"

"I cannot account for it."

"Either he was murdered in your house"—

"Impossible, sir! Impossible!" protested Mr. Hilgay.

"Nothing is impossible, sir," said the Coroner. "Either he was murdered in your house and his body carried out, or he left your house alive and was murdered outside. You think no one could have crept past your office door unseen by you?"

"I think not."

"Where are the stairs?"

"They begin just at my office door, and are in line with the hall."

"There are no other stairs in the house?"

"There are the back stairs," said Mr. Hilgay. "Used exclusively by the household staff."

"Ah! There are the back stairs. What is the household staff?"

"Five boys and two female cooks."

"Where do the back stairs lead to?"

"To the back of the house. The kitchen. There is a back yard."

"Any door to the back yard?"

Here the policeman, with an air of apology to the Coroner, lighted the gas, after having struck two matches.

"Yes," Mr. Hilgay answered, blinking in the new glare. "It gives on Little Girdler's Alley. It is bolted at night."

"What time?"

"After dinner—about 7 o'clock."

"Bolted on the inside?"

"Yes."

"So that anyone could open it from the inside?"

"Yes."

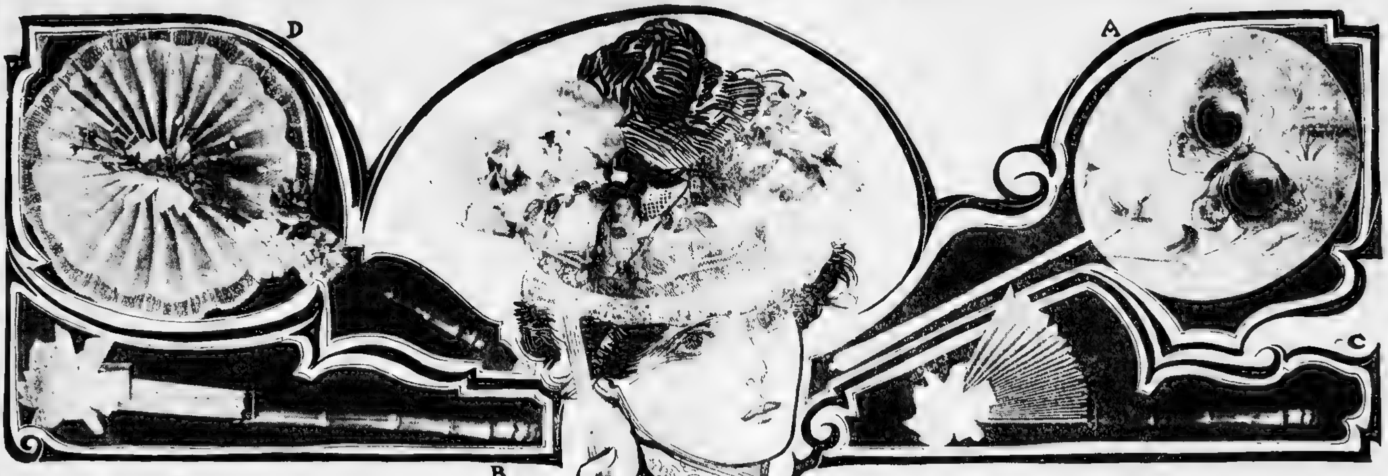
The Newest and Prettiest Toy of Fashion Is the Queen of Spain's Maisette.



A—The Automobile Maisette With the Goggles of Glass in the Spots on—a Butterfly's Wings.

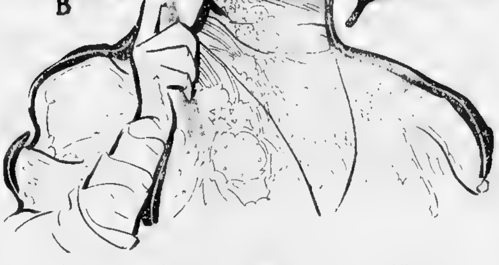
D One of the Maisettes of Lace and Flowers Open.



One Example of the Fashionable New Sunshade Made of Lace and Flowers.

ONCE more we have the proud distinction of originating one of the smartest fashions of the day. The exquisite maisette, which Queen Victoria of Spain has made so fashionable, was created by a New York firm who originate in their foreign factories some of the most exclusive novelties of the day.

"You have to make a thing fashionable in Europe, first," said the senior member of this house, "before American women will adopt it.

"We made some very handsome maisettes for a smart London house; the Queen of Spain bought them there and has created in Spain a furore for these useful little articles, which were already the rage in London.

"Where they are made of precious metals and enriched with jewels, orders are taken for these embellishments, otherwise the maisette is made with handles of wood, ivory, tortoise shell and decorated silver."

No more do we see abroad, among fashionable women who attend outdoor sports, the wrinkled foreheads and squinted eyes induced by watching field sports under the glare of the sun. The eyes are protected and wrinkles banished by the most bewitching creations ever provided for this purpose. These dainty things are called maisettes, and are just large enough to shade the eyes and prevent those painful sun headaches from which so many women suffer who attend outdoor games. Now that outdoor games form so important a feature in the social life, the necessity for just such a dainty eye shade as the maisette becomes obvious.

Women knew this when they adopted it with such enthusiasm. Well they understood that the maisette is more dangerous in the hands of a pretty woman than even the Spanish fan in the fingers of a Spanish senorita. It's long handle, much longer than that of the lorgnette, lends it grace, while it may be shaped at the top like a round, oval or folding fan—the latter is the most usual style—or else in the form of an eye shade covered with charming decorations, and just the prettiest thing imaginable for bright eyes to peep from under.

The maisette comes in three distinct styles. One, the flat shield for the face, is painted and trimmed to suit the gown of the wearer, and furnished with two large goggles in the upper portion. This is mounted upon a long handle of ivory, and is usually of satin. It is a favorite shape of maisette for the automobilist. The fair autoiste is supplied with a shield for the entire face, which at the same time does not conceal it from her companions. She sees the landscape through the attractively inserted goggles, which are arranged so as to appear part of the decoration on the fan, and the coloring of her eye shade gives an additional charm to her toilette. The bows and artificial flowers upon a motor car maisette may be changed with every costume, while the pretty, long handled fan retains the same neutral color tint. So simple is this form of shade that a woman who cannot afford the pretty toy may mount a fan upon a little rattan cane, and tie a bow on the handle. Wire frames, stretched over with chiffon and decorated with lace or ribbon or a few rosebuds, form bewitching motor shields, and it is a simple matter to insert a pair of motor goggles in the upper part of the decoration.

The folding maisette, however, offers the greatest charm. A woman, by loosening the metal clasp, may swing the folding fan at the top in all manner of graceful movements and may coquette with it in a thousand new and attractive ways.

The curved eye shade too is a most bewitching little charm in the hands of almost any woman. It curves across the forehead, just as a student's shade does, but in no other respect does it resemble a student's shade. A delicate frill of lace shades the eyes of the woman who carries this sort of maisette, and this little foam of lace softens the whole expression, while the coloring of such flowers and ribbons as may be used upon the shade lends a brightness to the face and an additional charm to the costume.

The smart fad is to decorate the maisette so that it appears part of the gown worn with it. If the gown is black a black [illegible] covered maisette adorned with gold and perhaps decorated with a few flowers, adds a wonderfully bright touch to the ensemble. With such a maisette a long stick of gold or tortoise shell would be the correct thing.

And then who could [illegible] rosy young f[illegible] beneath the [illegible] of a maisette [illegible] a froth of [illegible] touch of pink? [illegible] carved ivory is [illegible] thing [illegible] sort of [illegible] with turquoises is [illegible] for a [illegible] fection created of [illegible] blue flecked with white or silver.

The really smart woman on the Continent has one of these toys, dress accessories to match every dressy outdoor gown, and it will be admitted that nowhere else do women dress quite so elaborately when [illegible] outdoor sports.

This is one of the fashions that may be [illegible]. The fluffy and becoming parasol [illegible] excluded the view from [illegible] has been abolished in favor of this pretty trifle, which is just large enough to shade the face of the woman who carries it and [illegible] with her neighbor's enjoyment [illegible] of [illegible] being its own [illegible] shade. The eyes is [illegible] wonderfully effective in [illegible] woman, and saves [illegible] from pain and untimely wrinkles around the eyes.

The lining of the maisette may be made of some color particularly becoming to one's face, so that in this reflected glow a woman may make herself look years younger and ages prettier than she could otherwise hope to be.

It is necessary, of course, for the maisette, in any of its three forms, to have a [illegible] which really excludes [illegible] is quite hidden beneath [illegible] of chiffon lace, [illegible] other [illegible] Ribbons [illegible] effective [illegible] both upon the [illegible] itself and [illegible] handle, usually as a complement to the color scheme of the gown or its trimmings.

A[illegible] flowers, both of ribbons and in the usual forms, are also attractively used [illegible] pompadour effects are [illegible] these [illegible] of pastel [illegible] with anything.

While every fashionable woman cannot afford sticks of carved jade, mother of pearl, ivory, gold and silver on her maisettes, every one can get a smart wood handle. The economical woman will have a pretty wooden handle with a plain maisette upon it. On this foundation she will mount the decoration required for the costume she intends to wear, or her maid may perform this office for her. Almost any decorative scheme may be followed, [illegible] taste and becomingness being the main consideration.

The reason that this new novelty of the fashionable world is made with a long handle is not because this style of handle tends to gracefulness, but because the end of the handle may be rested upon the body and so make it no exertion whatever to support the little article.

Together with the maisette the tiny sunshade has become very popular. Women carried these little Eugenie parasols a good deal last season, because they are so extremely convenient when motoring or driving. The [illegible] little [illegible], may be carried without inconvenience to one's companion in the carriage and may be held at any angle since the handle is jointed for that purpose. It is so small that it is readily carried and, altogether, is as pretty as it is useful.

A dainty, lace trimmed motor parasol of this kind is just la[illegible] to shade the face, and is pretty enough to prove an attraction to any woman. Of course they are only carried when one is dressed for calling or [illegible] for exercise, not when long motor trips are in progress. For motoring many of these parasols have been fitted with little goggle windows so that a woman who dislikes veils can shield her face from dust and sunlight by merely holding one of these fetching little parasols in front of it and looking through its tiny windows upon the surrounding scenery.

These little parasols are seen everywhere this Summer, but the maisette is just making its bow to American society. The rage for it is so great abroad, however, that in the course of a few weeks it is safe to predict that smartly attired American women will all appear carrying this favorite eye shade of the young Spanish Queen, and that a clever American invention will return to us, via the Continent, covered with royal honors and, therefore, wholly acceptable in our eyes.

How to Give a Really Smart Garden Party at a Small Expense.

PROVIDED the clerk of the weather treats the affair with becoming consideration, a garden party is one of the pleasantest and least expensive ways of entertaining one's friends, and, provided also that the hostess can strike out some popular form of entertainment, the success of her enterprise will be doubly assured.

As for a dance or dinner, cards of invitation are sent out a few days before, with the word tennis, or the name of some other feature likely to prove attractive, written at the bottom left hand corner. And it is usual for guests to intimate acceptance or "regrets" immediately.

Refreshments should be as varied as possible, and should certainly comprise tea, coffee, sandwiches, fancy cakes and [illegible] crackers, and whatever fruit is seasonable. Fruit salads are also extremely acceptable on these occasions, and ices should be certainly added.

Several tables should be spread in shady spots at the selected venue, with a separate one for serving tea and coffee only, where the cups and saucers may be as dainty as possible. Many guests will partake of nothing else, and their presence at a table loaded with "good things" incommodes others.

It is not vulgar ostentation in a hostess [illegible] with the best silver, [illegible] porcelain ware her house [illegible] compliment to her guests, and the floral decorations should [illegible] brilliant and effective as [illegible]. Roses are admirable for this purpose [illegible] the tables should be decorated [illegible] masses of these, toned [illegible] greenery.

[illegible] color scheme for each table [illegible] spare the time. For a hot August [illegible] arrangement in white and green [illegible] delightfully pleasing to the aesthetic [illegible] and palms placed in white pots, masses of white blossoms in green pots, [illegible] of feathery grasses scattered [illegible] are wonderfully effective, and will provoke admiring comments most gratifying to the heart of a hostess who is desirous only of pleasing her friends.

Fruit nestling among fresh leaves should be arranged on dessert dishes, and when fruit [illegible] is served it should be handed in china bowls. [illegible] sandwiches and [illegible] salads [illegible] most suitable for such an [illegible] cake and dainty crackers should be served in [illegible] as for afternoon [illegible]

The advantages of a garden party are almost too obvious to need mention. One can in this way invite people one would not care to bring together in the narrow limits of a drawing or dining room, and the delightful informality pervading the affair makes guests less constrained and more festively inclined than is possible at such solemn functions as dinners, where one is on one's most superlative behavior.

Then, too, the cost is surprisingly moderate for so much pleasure and so many guests. For, roughly speaking, fifty cents a head a highly enjoyable party of this nature has been arranged, including such luxuries as [illegible] etc., [illegible]

Let there be no suspicion whatever of stint if you wish to make your garden party an unqualified success, and the pleasure and satisfaction you will see around you will determine you to repeat the experiment at an early date.

A Valuable Little Sermon on Hands and Gloves.

ONE of woman's greatest charms is in the beauty of her hands, members which are truly adorable when their smallness is combined with other indications of fine breeding; but even if they are large, they may still be beautiful if they are shapely, finely made, and white, with blue veins, taper fingers and rosy nails, slightly arched. The women of North America are claimed to have the smallest hands in the world, and next to them come the Austrian, Spanish, Italian and English ladies. Those of the fair Spaniard, however, are often spoiled by coarse fingers rounded at the tip. Russians have long, but beautifully formed hands. The hands of Englishwomen of rank are aristocratically shaped, but they are long, and sometimes too dry. The French grande dame takes the best care of her hands of all the world over. Germans are generally endowed with large and flat ones, with enormous fingers.

Most Parisiennes wear six and a half or six and three-quarter gloves. These are not the smallest sizes for a pretty hand, but are those worn by many of the fairest of the sex, nevertheless; for a tight glove is a perfect abomination. It makes the hand look larger instead of smaller.

When putting gloves on, always begin by buttoning the second button; then, when buttoned to the top, you can easily fasten the first button without tearing the kid. Never remove the gloves by pulling the fingers, but by drawing the part covering the wrist over the hand, and leave them thus wrong side out for some time before turning them to their proper shape. Always lay gloves lengthwise; never roll them. Light-colored gloves should be placed between two pieces of white flannel. There is nothing better to perfume gloves than a tiny tablet of concentrated scent or a small sachet within the hand. A glove thus scented never loses its perfume.

And, by the way, while on the subject of gloves, it may not come amiss to know that if you want to make a neat job of mending your glove fingers, turn them inside out, and putting the edges carefully together, overcast them with cotton thread, fine, but firm. Silk thread cuts the kid. If the glove shows an inclination to break in the palm or about the fingers, and you have no old gloves to mend them with, take a bit of ribbon the color of the glove and put it over the break on the under side, and darn the glove down on it.

CHAPTER XXI

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY of BUSTER BROWN

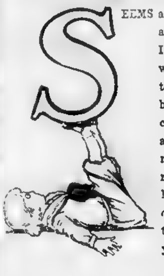
by R. F. Outcault.

Copyrighted, 1906, by the American-Journal-Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

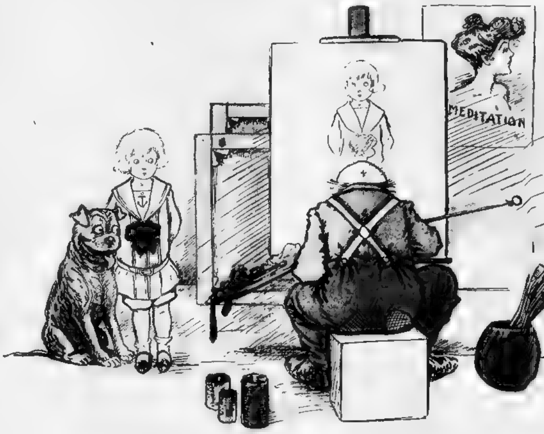


SEEMS as though we just couldn't get away from Great South Bay. I just love to hang around the water—so does Tige. We used to go with a captain of a fishing boat and watch him fish. I didn't care so much for watching him fish as I did for the sail. I am simply mad about sailing. The captain's name was Smith—is yet, I suppose. Nearly everybody's name is Smith on that part of Long Island. Smithtown sends forth a new crop each year.

The funniest Smith I knew down there was an old painter by the name of Smith. He was a portrait painter by profession, but he really painted more fences and signs than portraits. In the Summer when every one was working he had his slack season. The natives were all busy getting all the money they could out of the visitors during the Summer months, so the old man used to make baseball bats for the boys. For nothing? No, sir! He sold them for ten cents apiece, which was cheap considering that it took him a week to whittle one out and sandpaper it down. It took a nickel's worth of sandpaper to each bat.

The Old Portrait Painter

He painted my portrait that Summer. It looked more like me than I did, and I had to make up like it after that so I would look like myself. But ma was pleased with it and paid him for it. He said



He Painted More Fences and Signs Than He Did Portraits

he hadn't painted a portrait for a long time except portraits of a few boats and a cow's head on a butcher's sign. He had a lot of ideal subjects around his richly furnished atelier. They were all named something they didn't look like. A vapid looking, silly schoolgirl was named Meditation, for instance.

But that's the way with most painters. They paint something and then call it a name. I'd feel like calling them some pretty hard names after they had hung around for three or four years without selling.

One day I was walking along the beach with my crab net over my shoulder when I met old uncle Joe. He was carrying the biggest lobster I ever saw. I wanted that lobster. I could see how beautiful he would look if he were boiled and then his shell were mounted on a handsome board and put up in our dining room.

"How much will you take for him?" I asked.

He said he wouldn't sell him, said I couldn't afford to pay his price for him anyway. I asked him to name his price, and he said it was no use, because I couldn't pay it.

"Well, perhaps I can," I said. I made up my mind from what he said that it would take at least ten dollars to buy that lobster.

"Now, uncle Joe," I insisted, "please tell me what you want for him."

He stuck to it that I couldn't pay his price until finally I asked him to just say it anyway to hear how it sounded.

"Wal, boy," he said "I wouldn't sell that there lobster for less than a quarter."

I told him that that was a good deal of money, but the lobster now adorns a panel above our sideboard. His insides made one of the finest salads I ever had the indigestion from.

DISCOURAGED

LIFE is like a long street through which we must all pass. It is narrow. The far end, where our journey began, is dark and obscure. The other end, ahead of us, glows faintly with the light of hope and rest.

The walls are high, and it seems to us always dark and gloomy just where we are.

"Go, get him for me."

Quickly the imp crossed the street, silently and lightly hopped to the man's shoulder. Close in his ear he whispered:

"You are discouraged."

"No," said the man, "I am not discouraged."

The imp repeated

"You ARE discouraged."

The man replied this time: "I do not THINK I am."

Louder and more decidedly the little imp said again:

"I tell you, you ARE discouraged."

The man, dropping his head, replied: "Well, I suppose I am."

The imp hopped back to Satan and said proudly. "I have got HIM. He is discouraged."

Another man passed. Again old Satan said:

"Get him for me."

The proud little demon of discouragement repeated his tactics.

The first time that he said, "You are discouraged," the man replied emphatically, "NO."

The second time the man replied, "I tell you I am NOT discouraged."

The third time he said, "I am not discouraged, YOU LIE."

The imp of discouragement returned to his master crestfallen.

"I couldn't get him. Three times I told him he was discouraged. The third time he called me a liar and that discouraged me."

Upon that story this picture and editorial are based.

There is really nothing worth while in a man, IN ANY OF US, except the mind, the will, COURAGE.

A man is WHAT HIS SPIRIT AND HIS DETERMINATION ARE. The body is nothing but a machine to carry out the orders of that mysterious, impalpable force that lives in a man's skull and that controls his destiny.

Nothing hurts us except that WHICH WEAKENS OUR MINDS BY WEAKENING OUR COURAGE.

We can survive anything except the breaking of the mainspring in the heart and mind, AND THAT MAINSPRING IS HUMAN COURAGE.

Friends may be lost. We can make others if we deserve them.

Money may be lost. More can be earned through industry.

The world may take from you the honors that it gives. You may be misunderstood, ridiculed, despised. But while you keep your courage and say "NO" to the imp of discouragement at your ear, you have not lost your fight. Truly the old German poem says.

> "Courage lost, everything lost;
> Better you were never born."

Look at a man's eye if you want to know what his chances are. If it wavers, if you read discouragement there, pity him and help him before it is too late. Courage to the mind is like blood to the body or air to the lungs. THERE IS NO LIFE POSSIBLE WITHOUT IT.

Remember that every man whose work has been worth while has had this little devil of discouragement talking on his shoulder. Iron is improved by hammering, the cold diamond is made brilliant by grinding and cutting. Misfortunes, discouragements, IF WE ULTIMATELY RISE ABOVE THEM, make the character of men and women.

Man should say, "I will STAND what comes, I WON'T GIVE IN. I am going through this street of life from one end to the other just as well as I know how. And whatever else may happen, I am going out at the other end with just as much courage as I had when I began the journey. Blackness shall not frighten me, and the length of the trip shall not make me give up."

All the lives of great men, and the histories of great nations, are simply repeated stories of courage triumphing over difficulty, AND THE CHARACTER MADE BY COURAGE.

See the great French nation, now a triumphant, well-established republic.

What discouragement was ther[illegible] There was horrible suffering for the masses [illegible] by the dreadful inevitable outbreak of [illegible]

The [illegible] Revolution was drowned in the triumph of Napoleon. Another republic, another king [illegible] came to follow the rulerships of old. And then a republic that promised so much was wiped out by the conspiracy of the dull Napoleon Third.

The republic seemed to be dead. Then came the disastrous war with Germany, the bloody Commune. It was a day of humiliation, suffering and danger.

Discouragement that might well break any spirit had lasted well over a century. But the men of France are brave men. And the word "DISCOURAGEMENT" cannot force its way into their minds.

They fought on and on, AND THEY HAVE CONQUERED AND THEY RULE THEMSELVES.

In this land we are discouraged sometimes by the successful conspiracies of criminal corporations. We are cast down by the apparent powerlessness of the voter.

BUT WHAT RIGHT HAVE WE TO BE DISCOURAGED? If we saw our republic fall as the French saw theirs fall, if we saw tens upon tens of thousands of men put to death because they had dared to demand liberty—as the French saw their brothers put to death, AND AS THE RUSSIANS SEE THEIR BROTHERS KILLED TO-DAY, we might have cause for complaint.

But in this nation we have no right to be discouraged, no right to breathe the word "discouragement."

We are united, WE ARE FREE IF WE CHOOSE TO BE, the ballot is ours, and if we will take united action, the political bosses, the little imps with which the big Satan Trust does his hunting, will go back and say, as did the little devil in our story, "I am discouraged."

It is with the life of the individual as with the life of a nation.

What could have been more discouraging than the experience of Christopher Columbus when he married the daughter of a sailor, inherited a sea captain's charts and instruments, and started out with the wild hope of sailing around the world?

Could anything have been more discouraging than his reception? Could anything have seemed more hopeless?

But he did not listen to that word "discouragement." He found this country, proved the truth of his theory and the quality of his manhood.

What if Columbus did die in prison? WHAT IF GUTENBERG, WHO GAVE US THE ART OF PRINTING, DID DIE IN MISERY?

Those men were not discouraged. And their lives in poverty and in jail were infinitely more glorious than any easy existence.

Do you suppose that the fire ever went out of the soul of Christopher Columbus, or that human stupidity, ingratitude or the jail could daunt him? Do you suppose that old Gutenberg, realizing THAT HE WAS THE TEACHER OF THOUSANDS OF MILLIONS OF MEN, ever felt his spirit break in the wretchedness forced upon him?

No. The man who succeeds does not know discouragement. Sorrow cannot make him feel it, failure he does not recognize, AND THAT IS WHY HE SUCCEEDS.

Make up your mind, reader, that the little demon whispering discouragement in your ear shall always get from you the answer, "You lie."

Remember that suffering, temporary reverses, are good for the spirit, strengthening to the mind, not calamities, but REAL BENEFITS IF WE RECEIVE THEM IN THE PROPER SPIRIT.

To conclude this sermon on courage, and the good effects of misfortune, we quote by permission of the Cosmopolitan Magazine a poem by Charlotte Becker, published in the current number. It expresses beautifully the important thought that suffering educates the spirit, that COURAGE CONQUERS MISFORTUNE.

Till poverty knocked at his door,
He never knew how bare
The uneventful days of those
Who have but want and care.

Till sorrow lingered at his hearth,
He never knew the night
Through which all troubled souls must fare,
To gain the morning light.

Till suffering had sought his house,
He never knew what dread
May wrestle with, nor what grim fears
Of agony are bred.

And yet, till these unbidden guests
Had taught him to possess

GROWING OLD

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

TO grow old is never an attractive thought to a woman. Young girls think of it as a dreadful goal, in a remote period; and matrons approach that goal by gradual steps, and often arrive at Old Ladyhood Station without knowing it.

The first time a woman hears herself referred to as "The Old Lady" is said to mark an epoch of sorrow in her life, which can never be forgotten. I mean when the reference is frank and sincere, not jocular

Many men have the habit of referring to young wives by that term; but that only accents the youth of a very young woman, as a grandma's cap makes a youthful face more piquant. But to be seriously called for the first time, in the terms of greatest respect, "The Old Lady," even with an endearing prefix, is another thing.

Perhaps the reason for this feeling so prevalent with both men and women, this dread of knowing that they are regarded as Old Ladies and Old Gentlemen, is not because the years are so terrible, but because the old men and women we know are, as a rule, so terrible, so bitter in their judgments, so severe in their ideas, and so lacking in sympathy with the very faults and weaknesses they possessed when young There are beautiful exceptions—but they are exceptions to the general run, I fear, of elderly people.

The following letter is somewhat extreme in its accusations against old ladies, but the writer has evidently suffered much at their hands, and his indignation has accumulated until it became a tidal wave:

> "Wont you please take the old ladies by the ears and scold them? Business has taken me among them a great deal, and I am amazed and disgusted at their foolish and sinful ways.
> "Isn't it possible to have put in the prayers of every church 'to grant we may grow old gracefully and peacefully.'
> "Old folks are more trying than the most peevish infant.
> "They hate every one whose ideas on religion differ from their own, deliberately misconstrue every good intention and positively crucify a young woman of good looks and animation.
> "They are not lovable, they are not affectionate, they gossip dreadfully, and their natures are mean and conniving. This is far more noticeable among old folks in smaller towns.
> "How is it their religion has not made them a gentle benediction? It has some, but they are distressingly few."

If this letter seems unjust, sit down and try to recall the names of the admirable old ladies of your intimate acquaintance.

Do not include those you simply know in an afternoon call; women of all ages (past five years) rarely show their real natures or habits to callers.

You must live under the roof with them for several months to be really capable of judging them. Or you must be at least on intimate terms of friendship in the home where they abide.

Old men are no better, I fear, than old ladies, save that they are a trifle broader in their judgments of their own sex; but they have even less remembrance of the needs of restless youth.

It is the grandma, not the grandpa as a rule, who helps the young folks plan a good time when the parents are overstern.

I recall only a few old ladies in the list of all I have ever known who seem to me the ideal creatures old ladies ought to be.

Life was sent us, with its trials and sorrows, and hardships and pains, its joys and pleasures and opportunities, as a school in which we are to develop CHARACTER. The very foundation of character is sympathy, and the cornerstone charity.

How many old ladies or old men do you know who possess this foundation with its cornerstone?

Alas and alas, that we can point to so few: alas and alas, that so many old ladies delight in gossip, and are more cruel than the grave in their judgments of the young!

An old lady should be as attractive as an old tree. Her expression should be one of serenity. If her nature is full of enthusiasm still, let it shine through this serenity as the sun shines through the haze of an Indian Summer.

She should avoid aggressiveness and overanimation of manner; and life ought to have taught her that repose is more forceful than nervousness.

She should have a modulated voice; her words should soothe and strengthen the listener; they should calm the passion-tossed souls of the young who come to her for counsel and sympathy.

She should be the Universal Mother; every son and daughter she meets appealing to her sympathies and stirring the mother nature in her. Out of her own sorrows, disappointments, losses and despairs, out of her joys and raptures and triumphs and realizations, she should have distilled a wonderful elixir of LOVING SYMPATHY, to give thirsting souls to drink.

There must, too, be a humorous side to her nature, that she may be able to turn tears sometimes into laughter; to make the over-anxious person merry at his own expense and to smile at his own worries.

She should be as charitable as God Himself; as patient as Time; as trustful as the Solar System, that leaves itself in the hands of Universal Law. If life has not made her all this she has lived in vain

Has life taught you this?

Are you treating other women's daughters as you would like your own treated by the world?

Are you an encouragement to the struggling souls, a solace to the sad ones, a strength to the weak ones of earth?

If not, to what does your life of pretended Christianity amount, and what will you say to the Giver of Life when you are asked to "Cash in"?

A Short Cut to Fame (The Song Writer) By William F. Kirk

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner

I MET him in a cafe on Forty fifth street, one of our favorite resorts.

"This one," he said, after giving the waiter our order, "is going to be a love song, if I can only get the right kind of a melody to go with it."

"Well," I retorted, "didn't you like that melody I framed up for 'Lorenzo, Leave That Potted Ham Alone'?"

The Song Writer betrayed no great enthusiasm

"It was rather a sweet tune," he admitted, "but I believe you can do better. I have seen a meadow lark start heavenward with every appearance of being in good voice, and its song has fallen grat[illegible]y on my sensitive ears. On other days I have seen that same lark start for the sky in an apparent grouch, and the flood of melody that followed was nothing if not George M Cohanesque. You are like a meadow lark—you can do better."

"What is your new lyric?" I asked.

"There is a beautiful love motive," said the Song Writer, enthusiastically scratching his upper lip. "It seems that a young heiress falls in love with a German delivery boy. In order to see him daily she insists on doing the housework The music, of course, must be sad, because an heiress doing housework isn't the most cheerful thing in the world. Can you write sad music?"

By way of answer, I reminded the Song Writer that I had composed the music of that exquisite ballad called

"And meeting there a heiress placed some pork chops in her hand."

"I Stole That Pie to Feed My Starving Sister." Further I reminded him of my other masterpiece, "Dear Father, Leave That Faro Bank Alone," music by me, words by Harry Williams.

"Perhaps you can make good on this ballad," he remarked, but this is sad beyond the ordinary brand of sadness. There must be two sobs and three tears in every staff. When you go home and get on the job to-night work yourself into a state of sadness before sitting down to the piano. Think of your debts; think of the way the Giants have been playing; think of anything that will bring the little blue devils."

That night, in my apartment, I unrolled the Song Writer's manuscript. I didn't have to look far for things to make me sad. The sideboard might have belonged to old Mother Hubbard, countless cockroaches were stealing bases around the floors, and three creditors had left their cards. The atmosphere being right, I read the following lyric:

"I LOVE YOU MUCH, THOUGH YOU ARE DUTCH."

I.

A HANDSOME youth named Heinie Blotz was driving through the street
Behind a poor old sorrel horse, delivering some meat,

"I lo'be you much, though you are Dutch and ain't got no swell clothes."

And meeting there an heiress placed some pork chops in her hand.
And, turning then to Heinie Blotz, this sentence she did spiel:

CHORUS.

"I love you much, though you are Dutch, and ain't got no swell clothes;
I swear it by the freckles that you see upon my nose.
My parents say that I shall wed the first great Duke they see,
But you are my deliverer, and I shall fly with thee."

II.

Her gallant young deliverer turned wearily away—
He had delivered half a ton of steak and chops that day.
"Light of my life," he whispered, "I love you through and through,
But can't you grab a bank roll just before I marry you!
I hope to quit delivering as soon as we are wed,
So you will have to show me, though I loved you when you said:

CHORUS.

Mirandy on the Equality of the Sexes ❧ ❧ By Dorothy Dix

"BRER JENKINS," remarked Mirandy, "what is mighty fond of preachin' dat woman is de weaker vessel cept' at dem times when he wants de Daughters of Zion to give a ice cream festival to raise money to pay his back salary, was a readin' in de paper de odder day 'bout dat English lord whut says dat men is superior to women, an' dat dere ain't no use in flatterin' a woman up by tellin' her dat she is de equal of anything dat wears britches.

"'Dar now!' schiims Brer Jenkins, a-pushin' his spectacles up on de top of his forehead, dar now! Dem jes prezactly de ve'y wards I done say myself Dat noble Englishman sho'ly is hit de nail on de haid dis time. Women is inferior to me in ev'y way. Dey ain't got de brains, nor de strength, nor do reason of men, an' de proof of dis is dat dey ain't done none of de great things in de world'

"Den Brer Jenkins stuck his hand in de bosom of his weskit an leaned back in his cheer, an' call out Show me a woman Paddyrusky!'

"'All de Paddy dat I know aroun' dis neighborhood is Paddy O'Sullivan,' I spons, 'an' hit suttinly am a treat to see de way dat Mrs. Paddy wipes up de kitchen floor wid him when he hands her any back talk.'

"But Brer Jenkins let on lak he didn't hear me, an' goes on:

"'Whar is yo' woman Rockyfeller!'

"'Well, spons I, 'I can't jest call to mind her name an' address at de minute, but I ken pint you out about fo' million women dat makes one dollar do all de work of five ev'y day of deir lives. Yassir, a woman can splurge on de money dat a man starves on.

"'I done took notice dat as long as a man handles his own pay envelope he mos'ly has fringe around de bottom of his pants, an' gits his exercise dodgin' de bill collector; but des as soon as he gits married an' his wife takes hold of de money puss, he gits a Sunday suit, an' somethin' tucked away in de savin' bank. A woman kin support six children an' save money on de wages a man couldn't live on an' keep out of debt—an' put Busted Brown clothes on de chillen to boot.

"'But dat ain't high finance, Sis Mirandy,' says Brer Jenkins.

"'Maybe not,' says I, 'but hits whut stands between mos' of de men in dis country an' de po' house.'

"'Hit ain't dat I is down on women dat makes me say dat dey is inferior creeturs dat ain't de equal of man,' Brer Jenkins went on; 'fur from it. Women is all right in deir place—but deir place is away back, settin' down, an' when dey comes forward an' flops deyself down in de front pews alongside of men, dey upsots de plan of creation.

"'Never forgit, Sis Mirandy, dat man was made fust—den woman'

"'Dat's so,' spons I, 'an' de Lawd turned out a better job as he went along, an' got mo' experience. As fur as my opinion goes I has always thought dat considerin' dat man was a first attempt dat he did pretty well.

"'Cose Eve was a improvement on Adam, who has always seemed to me a mighty po', shiftless sort of a feller dat was satisfied to jest lounge aroun' de gyarden an' do nothin', and not know nothin' ontell Eve found out an' told him.

"'An' dat's de reason dat I's glad I is took after her side of de fambly an' is a woman instead of a man.'

"But Brer Jenkins ain't notice whut I say, an' go on expostulatin'.

"'Even in yo' humble spear of life, Sis Mirandy,' he say, 'de superiority of de male is still manifest. You can't lif' half de heft dat Ike kin'

"'Maybe not,' spons I, 'but when hit comes to havin' twins I is got Ike beat a block.'

"An' at dat Brer Jenkins fetch a groan, an' put on his hat, an' santer down de street to find one of dem meek women to talk to whut always say 'Amen' when a man tells 'em how much smarter he is dan dey is

"But dat's de way I look at hit, an' dere ain't no wuss foolishness dan argyfyin' bout whedder men an' women is equals or not.

"I'se seed men wid scrambled brains an' women wid horse sense, an' I'se seed men dat was ole man Solomon ev'y time, an' women dat abused de prevelege of bein' a fool. I'se seed plenty of women support husban's dat couldn't make a livin' fer deyselfs, an' I'se seed a man take a prize at a fair fer a crocheted tidy, an' when de whole thing am' biled down hit des comes to dis—dat some men is smarter dan some women, an' some women is greater dan some men

"An' dar you is. An' I reckon dat ef de good Marster hadn't needed women smartness an' work as well as He did men's He'd a kinder let up on de job after he created Adam, an' called hit a day's work as hit stood

"Cose men kin do some things dat a woman can't do; but, landsakes, think of de things dat a woman can do dat he can't.

"I ain't 'sputin' dat a man kin stand up on one foot wid de odder foot on de rest of de bar and swaller down liquor longer dan a woman kin, but when hit comes to walkin' a baby wid de colic of a cold night, one mother kin out promenade a acre lot of fathers.

"Nor is I a contendin' dat women is as smart' about pickin' out de hoss dat ought to a won in de race ef only he had a done hit as men is, but hit's de mother dat figgers out some way to get de money to send her chillen to school, ev'y time.

"Nuther am I a-sayin' dat women knows, off hand, as much about politics as men does, but I ain't never met up wid a man yit dat could work out a cut paper pattern at sight lak a woman kin.

"I heerd a man speechify once dat dey told me had done diskivered de North Pole an' dat sink hole in Africky whar all de missionary money goes, an' his wife said she had to go along wid him bekase he couldn't find a clean shirt in his trunk for hisself.

"Now which is de smartest of dem two—de man what found de hole which he couldn't fetch home wid him, an' didn't have no use fer, anyway, or de woman what could put her hand on de thing he needed in de dark?

"Maybe hit's so dat men writes finer books an' plays better music dan women, an' knows mo' 'bout makin' money, but hit's women dat buys de books an' makes up de audiences at de concerts, an' takes keer of de money, so hit's broad as hit's long

"Hit looks to me lak men were smart in one way, an' women in anudder, an' hit takes all de gumption bof of em' is got to run things—an' we ain't settin' things on fire even den

"Yassum, all dis heah talk 'bout women not bein' men's equals makes me tired. Hit's plumb foolishness.

"You tell me whether de hen dat is little, an' weak, an' kinder hysterical is worth as much to de world as de elephant dat is big, an' strong, an' intelligent, an' I'll tell you whether woman's work is equal to man's.

"De elephant looks mighty grand in de parade when de circus comes to town—but my Lawd, think of breakfast widout no aigs!"

"But when it comes to walkin' a baby wid de colic of a cold night, one mother kin out promenade a acre lot of fathers."

"I ain't 'sputin' dat man kin stand up on one foot wid de oder foot on de rest of ae bar and swaller down liquor longer dan a woman kin."

Prettiest Girls Of Summer SOCIETY Along The Board Walks

SOCIETY WOMEN SEEK NEEDED REST IN CONVENT "RETREAT"

By a Society Woman.

Right in the midst of the maddest, merriest season that the social history of New England records, a wave of reform and mysticism is sweeping over the most fashionable Summer haunts and the smartest of society leaders, a bit wearied of worldliness, are turning to convent and "other-worldliness."

Whether it be a pose or a genuine passion, this seeking of solitude and silence when Summer gayeties are at their zenith, puts those who "retreat" in a new and interesting light. To the socially driven women of Newport has come the call to the "higher life" and in the new and severely simple little convnt of the Cenacle, where an eight-day retreat is being conducted, many a society leader, conspicuous by her absence from the brilliant functions where it is her want to be, may be found enjoying profound silence and utter seclusion, and in a state to all appearances bordering on ecstasy.

This retreat is practically the initiative of such women as Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Harry Lehr, Mrs. Delancey Kane, Mrs. Charles Oelrichs, Mrs. George A. Huhn, Mrs. John Lafarge, Mrs. Cameron McRay Winslow, Miss Lyman, Mrs. Harry O. Havemeyer, Countess Annie Leary and Mrs. Herman Oelrichs.

A clever leader of the Boston colony, who is more of a practical than a religious or mystical turn of mind, gives as her reason for making the retreat, its power to restore poise and tranquillity to overwrought nerves. As a rest for the brain and in order to attain the serenity which is a woman's chief charm, she seriously suggests that it is the duty of women to band themselves into a "silence" league and promise that for one hour every day they will not speak a single word.

There are those who, attempting to be facetious, have hinted to this fair reformer that while this silence creed might be popular with the husbands of the devotees, the (supposedly) more talkative sex would never pin their faith to such an uncongenial cure.

Engagement of Prettiest Bride Expected

Among the tales being whispered about concerning the numerous conquests of the Summer girl is one which has for its heroine the very daintiest and most popular of all last Winter's bouquet of buds, who, immediately upon her presentation, was taken under the wing of the exclusive Vincent Club and given a prominent part in the production of "The Merry Marquis." The hero is a prominent young club man of Brookline, the son of a wealthy and widely known physician. His pursuit of the fair damsel has not been an easy one, for far from being the typical managing mamma is her handsome mother whose "managing" all lies in the direction of keeping even the most eligible and ardent suitors at bay and who sees to it that on all occasoins her much-admired daughter is most severely chaperoned. Nevertheless it is expected that before the Summer is over the handsome matron will surrender and the engagement be formally announced.

Carters to Be Lions of North Shore

North Shore society matrons are astir with plans and preparations for the various entertainments to be given in honor of Sir Gilbert and Lady Carter during their stay in Nahant, where the interesting young pair go the coming week for the remainder of the Summer. Since returning from the Adirondacks Tuesday they have been the guests of Lady Carter's mother, Mrs. Francis V. Parker (Mary Codman) of Beacon street. They will vary their stay at Nahant with occasional visits to Newport, Bar Harbor and other fashionable resorts, and will return to Barbadoes, W. I., late in September. Lady Carter, before her marriage in 1903, was Gertrude Codman Parker, a Back Bay belle and an enthusiastic member of the Vincent Club. Her clubmates, many of whom are now mistresses of magnificent North Shore mansions, are planning all kinds of reunions with her as guest of honor.

Zerrahn-Clark Wedding in October

A brilliant Autumnal wedding will be that, late in October, of Miss Clark of Dean road, Brookline, and Carl Zerrahn, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Zerrahn and grandson of Carl Zerrahn, the well-known musician and conductor. It will be a church affair, and the musical element of society will, of course, be much in evidence. The honeymoon will be spent in sunny Italy.

CUPID ON VACATION; ENGAGEMENTS FEW

That of Miss Alice Morse and Edgar A. Achorn Among the Ones of Interest.

The merry little archer must be on his vacation, for there has been very little doing in the realms of romance the past week.

Owing to the dearth of engagements that announced on Wednesday of Miss Alice G. Morse and Edgar A. Achorn of Newton Highlands created a pleasant little ripple of excitement. Miss Morse is a daughter of the Hon. and Mrs. Robert M. Morse of Jamaica Plain and has only recently returned from a European tour with her parents. She is as clever as she is pretty, and is a prominent and popular member of the Footlight Club. Her brother, Robert G. Morse, a Harvard '96 man, is a composer of considerable note. Her sisters are Mrs. Louise Whiting and the Misses Margaret and Ellen C. Morse. Mr. Achorn is a lawyer, practicing in Boston.

An engagement in which Boston feels a deep interest is that just announced of Miss Christina Sawyer Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Taylor of Morristown, N. J., and well known in Boston, where she often visits, to Claud Groesbeck Sterling of New York, who is well known among the Summer colonists at Newport. Miss Taylor is popular in Morristown society, and since her debut has had almost every variety of entertainment given in her honor. The wedding will likely be an event of the early Autumn.

At a reception given in her honor by Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Ackler of Dorchester, Miss Ella P. Eldridge's engagement to David Rees of Providence was announced.

The engagement is announced of Miss Otelia V. Kohler of Roxbury, to Paul J. Ober of Brookline.

Mrs. Annie Campbell Ross has announced the engagement of her daughter Christina A., to Henry Howard Sullivan, M. I. T. '98, both of Brighton.

Frank Waterman Humphrey of St. Louis has announced the engagement of his daughter, Adelle, to Frederick C. Maynard, of Winchester.

An engagement of more than usual interest is that of Miss Katherine Mary Andrews, daughter of Walter E. Andrews of Edge Hill road, Brookline, to Hilary Lofting, the son of John Brien Lofting of London, England.

SUNAPEE LAKE.

Newport, N. H., Aug. 4.—The society matrons are taking great interest in the entertainment which is to be given at the Granliden, Friday evening, under the direction of Mrs. Grace Lydia Marix, for the benefit of the Darrach Home for crippled children, which has a Summer home near Lake Station. The best talent around the lake has been offered and all the influential Summer residents are doing their utmost to make it a success. The patronesses are Mrs. E. W. General Peter Leary, U. S. A., retired, of Baltimore, is a great guest at the Ben Mere Inn.

Rev. Dr. F. L. Smart, pastor of the Congregational church of Newtonville, and Mrs. Smart arrived at their cottage on Great Island, the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Gale of Boston have opened their cottage at Great Island.

SUNSHADE LATEST LURE OF BEWITCHING SUMMER GIRLS

Lo, the conquering heroines come!

The Summer girl of 1906, tired to death of the same round of conventional doings, has broken the [illegible] and devised a new little pastime of her own.

Out of her [illegible] the bewitchingly coquettish and fetching little "fad of the seductive sunshade" was born, and with this tough weapon the possibilities of which she has just discovered, her power is absolute and many "mere man" as many of him as there may be at these resorts finds life made more than interesting for him.

Each enchantingly dainty little lingerie linen and silken sunshade, real Parisian confections, to match each gown, is now the requirement of the up-to-date Summer girl. While there is no special code, the subtly flirtatious possibilities of the sunshade appeal to and suit the demure New England maid, and she is learning to wield it with the same incomparable skill and grace that her Spanish sister displays with the fan.

As is her mood so is the Summer girl's manner of carrying her sunshade. In retreat or advance it serves equally well. What could be more alluring than a pair of pretty eyes looking archly from beneath the lacy edges of a smartly tilted parasol? What more discouraging and disheartening than that same sunshade, with one little twirl, so tilted as to cut off all view of a pretty, pouting face, with down-dropped eyes. There are few more charming devotees of this beguiling fad than Boston girls.

There is coy and dainty Mary Josephine Amory, who leads this interesting band at Beverly and who was one of the stars in the Watteau fete held recently at Beverly Farms. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis I. Amory of Commonwealth avenue and one of the foremost buds of last Winter. She is a member of the Vincent Club, and in the pretty operetta last Spring took the part of Lady Gray.

Dangerously interesting is the [illegible] sunshade in the pretty hands of Miss Annie Lyman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Lyman of Commonwealth avenue. She, too, is a Vincent Club girl and is spending [illegible] Beverly Farms.

At Pride's Crossing another ardent follower of the fad may be found in the ever alive and interesting Juliet Higginson, who recently returned from an extended stay abroad and by some is thought responsible for the innovation.

Another of the sunshade brigade is pretty Constance Bacon, the youngest of Mrs. William B. Bacon's charming trio of daughters. She is spending the Summer at their Lenox estate, Rock Lawn, and was prominent among the Summer girls, taking part in the vaudeville given in Sedgwick Hall late in July for the benefit of Miss Folsom's Berkshire Farms retreat.

Katherine Roosevelt, the bright blonde daughter of Mrs. James Bowlker of Beacon street, with a goodly share of the Roosevelt pluck and independence in her make-up, was one of the first to adopt the fetching fad. She sailed with her brother James Tuesday for Europe, where she will spend the remainder of the season with her sister Mrs. Orme Clark. She was a bud of last Winter and figured prominently in all the doings of her set.

Elizabeth Porter, she who wielded the baton with such skill at the last Vincent Club show, is equally graceful in wielding the sunshade. She is spending a part of her Summer with her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander S. Porter, Jr., at their Manchester-by-the-Sea home. Others skilled in the pleasing art are Miss Pauline Shaw and Miss Myrtle Souther.

EUROPEAN EXODUS STILL CONTINUES

Scores of the Socially Prominent Now Seeking Diversion on the Other Side.

Unabated, the exodus to Europe continues and each outgoing vessel bears away scores of socially and otherwise prominent personages.

Miss Katherine Roosevelt, daughter of Mrs. James T. Bowlker of Beacon street, and one of last Winter's most conspicuously pretty and popular debutantes, with her brother, James A. Roosevelt, a student at Harvard, sailed on Thursday for Europe where they will visit their sister Mrs. Orme Clark (Elfrida Roosevelt), in England. Young Roosevelt, who is a member of the Dedham Polo Club and an all-round fine horseman, will do some hunting in England and Ireland before returning to America.

Others sailing on the Arabic at the same time were General Charles W. Bartlett and Mrs. Bartlett, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Eder, who spend their Summers abroad, and Frank S. Steele. They will tour the Continent together and return in the late Fall. Others on board were George Bullard of the Union Club and the Rev. Dr. James DeNormandie of the Eliot Square Church, who will spend a month together in Europe; E. Pierson Beebe of the Somerset, Country and other prominent clubs; Richard F. Bolles of Commonwealth avenue, and his interesting daughter Dorothy, a Vincent Club girl, and Alfred Bullard of the Union and Exchange clubs.

Samuel D. Warren, Jr., eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel D. Warren of Marlboro street and Dedham, sailed on Tuesday and will spend the late Summer in European travel.

Arthur Foote of Dedham is planning to sail for Europe on the seventh, going directly to Paris, where he will spend some time with his sister, Mrs. Tileston. He will later return to London for a short visit among friends in the musical world there and from there he will go to Alt Na Criche, Aviemore, Scotland for a brief visit with George Henschel.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Little of Brookline sailed Tuesday from New York on the Kronprinz, for Cherbourg and Bremen.

The Hon. Nathan Matthews of Beacon street and his daughter, Miss Nathalie Matthews, are to sail early this month for a few weeks abroad.

Senator and Mrs. W. Murray Crane are to sail for Europe the seventh, via the North German Lloyd line. They will remain abroad six weeks.

CHATHAM

Chatham, Aug. 4.—The town is now full of Summer people and the season is fast nearing its height. Old Home week has contributed to increase the number of visitors, and the home-comers are enthusiastic over meeting their old schoolmates and friends of former days.

The annual reunion of the Chatham High School Association was held in the High School building Friday afternoon and was largely attended. After the business meeting, calling hour was observed, when the friends and children were welcomed.

The grand concert and dance of Old Home week given in the Town Hall Wednesday evening was one of the events of the season. The clam bake which was to take place on Rink Hill Wednesday, was postponed until Thursday, but as the weather was still unfavorable, it was abandoned for this year.

The Chatham baseball team and a team composed of Summer residents are having a series of games. The second game, played Monday, was won by the Chatham boys, 8 to 7.

Admiral and Mrs. C. H. Rockwell are entertaining Mrs. E. M. Brooks and Miss Ethel Brooks of Manchester, N. H.

Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Vincent and family of Campello are summering at their old home at Old Harbor.

NEW YORK YACHTSMEN GUESTS OF VANDERBILTS THIS WEEK

Newport, Aug. 4.—Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt will open her entertaining season with the New York Yacht Club Squadron, of which her husband is commodore, on August 6, by a luncheon company on board the steam yacht North Star. This will be followed by a large dinner party at Beaulieu that evening, with another on the seventh and still another on the eleventh. Mrs. Vanderbilt for weeks has been acting under her physician's advice in the matter of diet, for she wishes to avoid embonpoint at all hazards. She has even resorted to batting, and abandoned a number of social functions. [illegible] society women in Newport want to retain their sylph-like [illegible]. Mrs. Vanderbilt has for some weeks been receiving a gorgeous [illegible] from London and Paris.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

The sensation of the week was the appearance on Bellevue avenue of Ethel Barrymore, the great society favorite, for a few fleeting moments. As Robert Walton Goelet has just arrived from Europe, and used to follow her over the New England theatrical circuit, gossips placed their own construction upon the appearance of the lovely actress, who is now in mourning. No less a sensation was the appearance of Charlie Greenough of Narragansett Pier, successful hero of the greatest jewel robbery Newport ever knew. Mrs. Ogden Goelet, fresh from social European triumphs, is also at Newport.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Contributions by the Summer cottagers to the Newport Carnival, August 6-11, have been so generous that the committee has decided to devote one day of that week to the smart set and give a grand society circus on the "basin" grounds as being best suited to society's liking.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

It is said that Rear Commodore Charles L. F. Robinson has actually purchased Elm Court from Frank Work, notwithstanding that the rumor has been denied. Mr. Robinson is colonel of the Newport Artillery, the oldest active military organization in the United States. The Kay street place of the Robinsons will be put on the market, it is said.

Admiral Robley D. Evans, commander-in-chief of the Atlantic squadron, was entertained at luncheon by Mrs. Hamilton Fish Webster at Pen Craig, Harrison avenue, on Tuesday, and brought with him the members of his staff, who were presented to the younger society maids and matrons of Newport's smartest set.

Mrs. Richard Gambrill is giving a garden party Monday afternoon at her villa on Bellevue avenue, where Admiral Evans and his staff are invited. Mrs. Gambrill's villa, which was recently erected upon the site formerly owned by James R. Keene, is one of the handsomest in Newport. The view from Bellevue avenue, however, is entirely shut off by a line of trees set close to the fence along the avenue.

Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, Miss Maude Wetmore and Mrs. Royal Phelps Carroll opened the Russian tea season at the Newport Golf Club by giving an afternoon tea, followed by bridge. Some of those present were Mrs. J. DeForest Danielson, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. William G. Weld, Mrs. Blair Fairchild, Mrs. George R. Fearing, Jr., Mrs. Joseph E. Widener, Miss Sallie Thayer, Miss Cornelia Thayer, Mrs. Edward R. Thomas, Mrs. "Ollie" Belmont and Mrs. William B. Leeds.

Miss Hester Bancroft of No. 61 Mt. Vernon street, Boston, has arrived at Newport from England for the remainder of the Summer. Miss Bancroft and her sister, Mrs. Carl Finch, are heirs to The Bluffs on Easton's Point, long known as the Bancroft summer estate.

Mrs. "Jimmie" Lorillard Kernochan is the equestrienne seen most frequently on the avenue. Mrs. Kernochan, who is interesting at all times, is right at home in the saddle, being a fine cross-country rider.

Mrs. "Reggie" Vanderbilt, who is just back from Europe with a fresh supply of Doucet robes and Virot hats, has taken up her position once more in the beauty line and is receiving her share of the admiratin.

The new sun pavilion at Bailey's beach is the biggest kind of a success. It is crowded every noon by those who like to see the bathers disport themselves in the water, but who do not go in themselves.

Hunter is the central figure, is arranging for a grand "pow wow" in the form of a clambake to celebrate the political victory of last Spring. The bake will be at Southwick's Grove, the Newport Military band will be in attendance and the occasion will mark the opening of the fall campaign in Middletown.

Mrs. Louis Haggin is shortly expected back from Italy, where she went with her daughter, the Countess Festetics, to visit Mr. and Mrs. James B. Haggin at "Areleigh" in Newport, and Mr. and Mrs. Ben Ali Haggin at Narragansett Pier.

Munson Morris is registered at the Newport Casino. Miss Helen Dorothea Kane has gone to Bar Harbor for two weeks. The net proceeds of the Venetian Fete will amount to something more than $6,000 for the benefit of the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A., and for the Women's Aid Society to the Newport Hospital.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Wysong are in Germany and not expected to return to this country till September when they will go to the mountains. Their residence, Greystone, on Ochre Point, in Newport, will be opened this Summer.

VINCENT CLUB NOTES IN BRIDAL CHORUS

SOCIETY BUDS CAKEWALK IN LENOX STREET

Pretty Girls in Costumes Worn at Tableaux for Charity Amuse the Residents

Lenox, Aug. 4.—A dance and jollification that followed the presentation of tableaux for charity was the liveliest affair that has taken place in Lenox in a decade. The participants in the dances and tableaux were invited to supper at a hotel near the hall, and went down arrayed in the costumes in which they had appeared. Following supper the whole company formed in line, and, headed by a band composed of a bass drum played by Guy Ward and a snare drum played by Joseph W. Burden, turned out into the street and gave a very creditable exhibition of cake walking. There was a dance in the hotel parlors and the affair wound up at the Lenox Club where the men of the party made things lively until well toward morning. Those who took part in the merry event were Miss Adele Schenck, Miss Constance Bacon, Miss Emily Bacon, Miss Nina Gaither, Miss Yvonne Shepard, Mrs. S. Warren Sturgis, Mrs. Samuel Frothingham, Miss Cornelia [illegible], Joseph W. Burden, Clark Voorhees, [illegible] Lanier, Walter L. Cutting, Richard C. Greenleaf, Miss Juliana Cutting, Marshall Kernochan, Herbert Shaw, Guy Ward, Samuel Frothingham and David T. Dana.

Colonel and Mrs. Walter Cutting are to entertain the Berkshire hunt at their first breakfast on September 1. The hunt will meet at Meadow Farm at noon and the run will be ten miles in the Housatonic Valley. Mrs. Walter L. Cutting will ride this year, as well as Miss Heloise Meyer, Miss Durand and Miss Kate Cary.

Miss Maude Adams, the actress, has been visiting Charles Lanier and Miss [illegible] Bigelow at Allen Winden this week. Mr. Lanier is one of the warm personal friends of Miss Adams and she has visited him several times at his country home, this being her second visit this year. She was entertained by automobile rides about the hills.

Miss Nina Gaither of Baltimore is spending the Summer with the Misses [illegible] and Miss Rosamond Dixey. Miss Gaither is an accomplished actress and was a valuable aid to the charity entertainment, appearing in the tableaux and in the dances.

Joseph H. Choate is in better health than at any time in many months. He has been entertaining George G. [illegible] of New York at Naumkeag this week.

Among the young people who have made Stockbridge interesting of late are Miss Jane Minot Sedgwick of New York and Miss Ellen Buckner of New York. They have been foremost in tennis and other sports.

* * *

Mrs. Robb de P. Tytus, who is one of the most indefatigable hostesses in the Berkshires, has been entertaining Miss Royal Whitman of New York this week at Ashintully Farm.

John Hall McKay of New York is the leader of all the amusements at Hotel Aspinwall. His coaching parties to the Shakers, trolley rides and clock golf matches are diversions which are interesting a very large hotel colony.

There have been many changes in Lenox this week, the opening of August being the beginning of a migration to the shore and the return from the Adirondacks and other mountains of cottagers who have been at the camps for a taste of the wilds and fishing. The story of a month of fog along the Atlantic coast has held back many who would have been at Newport and Bar Harbor had the shore been brighter. As it is, Lenox and the Berkshires have had the most interesting season. July broke all records for the hotels in the hills and no one ever saw a livelier month in the cottages. The echo of the tableaux and dances held last Saturday and again Monday for charity is still heard in and about the cottages. No one anticipated that the show would meet with such a success and it may be repeated in September when the autumn visitors gather for the horse show.

The Berkshire hunt, which is now the leading factor in out-of-door amusements in Lenox, announced this week the program of its annual races to be held at the Lee Pleasure park on Labor Day, September 3. This year there are new and important races on the bill. The Lenox Horse Show Association presents a stake for an open race, the president of the Berkshire hunt offers a cup for a steeplechase for horses owned by members of the Berkshire hunt, the Lenox Club has offered a purse of $100 for a two-mile steeplechase open to all and there are three other races of equal interest. The stewards at the races will be Frank K. Sturgis, Clinton G. Gilmore, Samuel Frothingham, David T. Dana, Giraud Foster, Guy Ward and Joseph W. Burden.

Tennis experts, including the former international player, Dwight Davis, played a match at the Lenox Club to-day, the Wyantenuck Club of Great Barrington meeting the Lenox Club. Throughout the week there has been much playing at the courts in preparation for a tournament to be held later.

Bridge whist and luncheons have been a matter of daily record. Driving between 4 and 6 o'clock is again in fashion, and the streets of the village are made lively by the fine equipages and traps that pass and repass for two hours in almost a procession. Lenox still loves the horse and Mrs. William D. Sloane, Mrs. William B. O. Field, Miss Elizabeth Remsen, Miss Kate Cary, Mrs. A. L. Edwards and a host of others are seen every afternoon driving.

No one can yet say what the Lenox garages will do with the automobiles during the Fall season. This Spring every garage in the Berkshires was enlarged and rebuilt, but there has hardly been room for the machines which are arriving daily and increasing with the lengthening of Summer. The Housatonic Valley is the popular run out of New York, and the tourist business has made a great increase in resort hotels.

One of the liveliest resorts is Hotel Aspinwall, which has had the largest business since it was opened. The Secretary of the Navy returned to Washington this week, and is to make several shorter visits later in the Summer as Mrs. Bonaparte will remain until Autumn. Mr. and Mrs. Pliny Fisk of New York are at the hotel for the season. Mr. Fisk brought a carload of horses, automobiles and servants, and has settled down to the enjoyment of motoring and driving. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred de Cordova will arrive there next week. Mr. de Cordova has been spending several weeks at the hotel, returning to New York to meet Mrs. de Cordova on her return from abroad.

Alexander Griswold of New York, who has been in the Berkshires for a year for his health, started this week on a European trip for a change of air and scene. Mr. Griswold went by one of the slow boats, and after visiting several places in Europe will return to Lenox.

The Thespians of Pittsfield are to give Oscar Wilde's comedy, "The Importance of Being in Earnest," on September 11. In the cast will be Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Hawkins, Mrs. Henry L. Dawes, Dr. Frederick S. Coolidge and Miss Mary L. Hinsdale.

Hamilton W. Cary of New York is with his sister, Miss Kate Cary, at the Roadside cottage for August. Mr. and Mrs. Philip [illegible] of Concord, Mass., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. French at Chesterwood. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur [illegible] of [illegible] are visiting Mrs. Oscar [illegible]

Cupid Playing Havoc in the Ranks of Famous and Exclusive Organization.

VINCENT CLUB girls are marching to the rhapsody of Lohengrin strains, and within a few months matrimony has depleted their ranks of some of the fairest. Little Mr. Cupid has not only used his darts with deadly effect, but has appeared in the guise of a cowboy and "roped" many Boston belles out of the corral of maidenhood to appear before the hymeneal altar.

It has been a notable season for weddings for Vincent Club members. Several already are brides and many others are elect. Wedding bells are due to ring vigorously in the circles of Boston's elite for some time to come. The young Lochinvars are mostly from the East. Boston girls seem to show a decided preference for young men of their own set.

A brilliant event to which society is looking forward in pleasant anticipation is the wedding of charming "Peggy" Perkins to Charles P. Greenough, 2d, which will take place in October. Miss Perkins is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Perkins of Exeter street and is a stellar member of the Vincent Club. The wedding will take place in town and be a church affair. Mr. Greenough is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Greenough of Cleveland.

Miss Rosamond Pierce, who is to marry "Tom" Barbour of New York in October, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Pierce of Brookline and has the distinction of being the youngest Vincent Club girl. She was engaged before she was eighteen or had made her debut. Mr. Barbour is not much her senior. He was graduated from college in June last. The wedding will take place during the first week in October and be a brilliant affair.

That golden month will also see the wedding of Miss Mary C. Bigelow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Bigelow of Commonwealth avenue and Cohasset, who is to wed Dr. John Bremer of Beacon street. He is a Harvard '03 man and prominent in clubs. The wedding will take place late in the month at the Cohasset home of the bride's parents. Miss Bigelow is tall, has dark brown eyes and hair and an exquisite complexion.

Pretty Miss Susan Jackson is to become the bride of Ralph Williams upon September 6. She is as clever as she is good looking and is at present in Europe with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Jackson, where she is selecting her trousseau. The ceremony will take place at King's Chapel and will be followed by a reception at the Jackson home on Beacon street. Miss Frances Jackson, younger sister of the bride-elect, will be among her attendants. Mr. Williams is the son of Mrs. Thomas B. Williams (Alice Weld) of Beacon street. He is a member of the Union and several other clubs.

Miss Beatrice Blake, daughter of Mrs. A.

Wedding Bells Have Called Many and Will Chime for Others in the Autumn.

W. Blake of Brookline, who is to wed William Nickerson of Dedham, has decided that the wedding shall take place on August 11 at the home of her only sister, Mrs. Frederick L. W. Richardson, in Devonshire, Eng. Miss Blake and her mother are now there. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. Francis Lee Whittemore, rector of St. Paul's Church, Dedham, who will cross the sea for the purpose. The bride will be attended by her cousin, Miss Olivia Thorndike, as maid of honor. Miss Blake is devoted to tennis, golf, riding and driving, and is very popular in the smart set.

Miss Rosamond K. Little, who is to wed Carl de Lattre in October, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David M. Little of Salem, and with her sister, Eleanor, now Mrs. Talbot, made her debut at a ball given for them by their grandmother, Mrs. David P. Kimball, at the Somerset last Winter. She was the first of the season's debutantes to become engaged. It is expected that Miss Little's wedding will be a church affair.

Miss Elizabeth Shattuck has decided that her wedding to Harry Bigelow shall take place in August at the Shattuck Summer home at exclusive Islesboro. The prospective bride is the older daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Shattuck (E. P. Lee) of Marlboro street. The bride's only attendant will be her sister, Miss Clara Shattuck, who has recently returned from Paris, where she spent the Winter. Mr. Bigelow is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Bigelow of Commonwealth avenue, and a brother of Miss Mary C. Bigelow.

Another Vincent Club girl, who has selected October for her nuptials is handsome Caroline Dabney, whose engagement to Augustine H. Parker was announced on the eve of her departure for the Azores. Miss Dabney is the daughter of Mr. Lewis S. Dabney of Beacon street, a Harvard '61 man and prominent member of the Somerset, Exchange and other clubs. She is rather petite, with exquisite brunette coloring and charming manner. Mr. Parker is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Parker, (Rose Guild) of Somerville, Mass., and a graduate from Harvard class of '97.

Other prominent members of the club to marry soon are Miss Edith Rotch, who weds Channing Frothingham in October, Miss Clara Rotch whose marriage to Chandler Ferguson will take place at the same time as her sister's; Louise Lincoln, who has not as yet decided upon the date for her marriage to Jeffrey Lewis; Emily Nies Lockwood, who weds William Wood in October; Dorothy Allen who will wed Chandler Hovey in November; Louise Rust, who is to marry Charles Theodore Russell; Elizabeth Devens, who will become the bride of Gerald D. Boardman in October; Helen Scaife, whose wedding to Reginald Robbins will not take place for some time, and Susan Emmons, whose engagement to Irvin Garfield was announced a fortnight ago.

Among the Vincent Club girls who have become brides within a few months are the beautiful Dorothy Q. of this day. Of a former one it was written:

"Dorothy Q. was a lady born!
Ay! since the galloping Normans came
England's annals have known her name,
And still to the three hilled rebel town,

Most of the Fiances and Grooms Are from the East, Many Being Harvard Men.

Dear is the ancient name's renown."

It was on February 7 last that Dorothy Quincy became the bride of Frederick Russell Nourse at one of the most brilliant and elaborate weddings ever held in Emmanuel Church. This dainty and charmingly unaffected young matron, who just two years prior to her marriage was the loveliest of buds, is spending the Summer at the country estate of her mother, Mrs. Henry Parker Quincy, in Dedham.

Brenda Fenollosa, the dainty and distinguished daughter of Mrs. Ernest Fenollosa, was married to H. Morris Johnson of New York, July 11. The wedding was a quiet one at the bride's home, Riverbank court, where she and her husband now occupy a handsome suite. The pretty young matron is a graduate of Bryn Mawr and this year finished a course of study at the Institute of Technology. Mr. Johnson is a graduate of Cornell.

Disappointing all her friends, who had anticipated a brilliant church wedding, Rosamond Saltonstall chose instead that hers should be a quiet home affair. On June 19, at the residence of her brother John, with whom she has lived since the death of her parents, "Fair Rosamond" became the bride of the popular New York clubman, Charles C. Auchincloss. Only the immediate families and a few intimate friends witnessed the ceremony. At the close of the Summer Mr. Auchincloss will take his bride to New York to reside.

STRENUOUS PACE IS SET FOR SOCIETY ALONG NORTH SHORE

Manchester-by-the-Sea, Aug. 4.—The whirl of social activities is now at its height on the North Shore. Starting with the musicale at the Manchester Town Hall Monday afternoon, in aid of the South End Day Nursery, and ending to-day with the recital at Magnolia, given under the management of Mrs. J. Russell Selfridge, the week has been one of the busiest of the season.

A fashionable gathering of the colony flocked over to Manchester Monday for the musicale. From Beverly, Pride's Crossing, Magnolia and in fact, all along the shore came scores of the smart set. The cottagers are alive to the support of any charitable affair, as is well demonstrated on all occasions when the opportunity of this sort offers. Mrs. Stanley P. Clemens of the Westminster, Boston, an active worker for the nursery, was in direct management of the affair.

Wednesday the Essex County Club attracted another large gathering. The broad piazzas of the clubhouse were alive with pretty girls and society matrons from all over the North Shore. A baseball game on the polo field between the club nine and a picked team from the townfolk was an interesting feature of the afternoon's pleasure. This was won by the latter. Tea was served on the clubhouse piazza, among those entertaining being Mrs. Mortimer B. Mason, Mrs. S. Parker Bremer, Mrs. T. J. Coolidge, Jr., Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby, Mrs. Gardner M. Lane, Mrs. W. J. Boardman, Mrs. R. C. Hooper and others.

Mrs. Walter Denegre is planning one of the swellest functions of the season, a dance to be given at "Villa Crest," her delightful Summer home at West Manchester. The affair is to be given on Wednesday, August 15. Invitations will be sent out for over four hundred. The dance will be held in the large carriage house, on the further side of the court adjoining the house. This court will be resplendent in a glow of electric lights and decorations. A long table will be spread on one side of the court and lunch will be served the guests from this. Though Mr. and Mrs. Denegre are not to give a dinner-dance they will entertain a number of friends at dinner that evening, and a large number of little dinners are being planned in other cottages.

Miss Mary Eliot, Miss Edith Fitz, Miss Helen Read and the Misses Wigglesworth will preside over the tea cups next Saturday after the sports at the Manchester Yacht Club, the day of the annual aquatic sports.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Walker entertained a party of friends at dinner at their West Manchester cottage Tuesday.

Magnolia

Library Hall was crowded this afternoon with a representative audience of North Shore society folk to hear Campanari and Mrs. Rider-Kelsey, both of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York. The recital was the third in the series given under the management of Mrs. J. Russell Selfridge and the large number of the smart contingent who came from all along the North Shore bespeaks the popularity of the series. After the recitals the verandas of the Tea House nearby were alive with people and some stayed to dinner.

Because of the marriage of Miss Mitchell and Mr. Shaw on the 25th, the recital planned for that day will be held in Library Hall on Friday, the day previous.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Perkins of New York, Dr. Rudolph H. Hefheinz of Rochester and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Pettoborn of Hannibal, Mo., are among the week's arrivals at the Hesperus, Magnolia.

At the Aborn this week have arrived for the balance of the season Mr. and Mrs. William Smith, Mrs. G. R. Kemper and two sons, Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Stevenson and Mrs. Andreas Burkhart of Cincinnati.

Beverly Farms

Miss Katherine Tweed returned from Oyster Bay the first of the week, after a delightful visit with the Alexanders and the Roosevelts. Miss Margaret Roosevelt returned to the North Shore with her, and will remain here for a fortnight's visit. Harold Tweed went to Narragansett Pier with the Myopia Hunt Club polo team Monday.

Among the attractive young society belles being entertained here at present is pretty Miss Gertrude Gerdes of New York, who is a guest of Mrs. D. Herbert Hostetter at "[illegible]" for a week or two.

Miss Dorothy Upham, who is spending the Summer with the Oliver Wendell Holmses, is at York Harbor on a short visit with friends.

Pride's Crossing

Society was out in force yesterday afternoon for the recital given at the home of Mrs. Washington B. Thomas, the second in a series being given under the management of Mrs. Russell B. Tyson and a committee of North Shore society women.

Yesterday morning Mrs. Robert S. Bradley threw open her house for a reading from Shakespeare by Hon. William Everett.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. King spend much of their time on their fifty-six-foot sloop Ranger this Summer. They are planning on a cruise along the coast to Bar Harbor.

Gloucester

Despite the foggy weather of the past week, Cape Ann continues to be overrun with Summer people. The sojourners are now anxiously awaiting the return of Admiral Evans's fleet. Many of the wives of the officers have remained at the Rockport hotels in preference to going to Newport for a short time.

Mrs. Nagle of Brookline has leased the [illegible] cottage, Annisquam.

Miss Annie Annis of Beverly is spending her vacation with friends in this city.

Mrs. Margaret Wood and children of Brookline have returned after spending several weeks in Lanesville.

THRONGS WATCH POLO EACH DAY AT NARRAGANSETT PIER

Narragansett Pier, Aug. 4.—This week was marked at the Pier by the opening of the three weeks' polo tournament at Weld Field Farm, the home of the Point Judith Country Club, where daily matches have been played. On Monday the Myopia Third and New Haven fours lined up for the freshman cup, Myopia taking the game. Tuesday Dedham contested with Meadowbrook in the Narragansett Cup series, the latter winning by three-quarters of a goal. Wednesday New Haven administered a crushing defeat to Myopia for the Narragansett Cup. Thursday the Bryn Mawr and Point Judith fours had it out in the same series, the former winning. On Friday occurred the first game for the Point Judith Cup, Dedham and Myopia being the contestants, and to-day Bryn Mawr and Meadowbrook tried conclusions for the same trophy.

All of the six teams entered made their appearance in a contest during the opening week before a filled parkway and an interested gathering of society folk that bespoke for the tournament a place in the social annals of the season. Newport and Watch Hill have been well represented at the games this week.

There will be but three polo days next week. Monday the winners of the first two games in the Narragansett Cup series, the Meadowbrook and New Haven teams, will try conclusions. Wednesday Dedham will meet the victorious Myopias in the final for the freshman cup, while on Saturday the winners of Monday's game will meet the winners of last Thursday's match in the final struggle for the Narragansett Cup.

The Saturday evening throngs at the Casino are becoming brilliant in numbers and make-up. The hop of last week, following a series of elaborate dinners, was the most dazzling event that has ever taken place there. Sunday was another big day, the patronage at luncheon being large and the scene full of gaiety, while a delightful dinner in the evening brought out some of the most prominent people at the Pier.

Following the polo tournament the horse show will command undivided attention. The dates are announced as the 22d to the 24th, inclusive. W. J. Biltz of New York, who has successfully managed this feature for several years, will have charge, and last week arranged the preliminaries at the Country Club, coming from New York for the purpose.

Last evening curious society thronged the Mathewson, where it was announced that Miss Maud Madison, the New York dancer, would introduce two of her latest creations, a moonlight dance, and her original conception of an East Indian nautch dance. A vaudeville entertainment preceded the features of the evening, which furnished the critics with a prolific topic of discussion for days to come.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Marsh and daughters of Worcester arrived at the Atlantic Wednesday for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Turner and family of Chicago are at the Mathewson.

The midweek hop at the Casino Wednesday evening was slimly attended, the wet weather coming very near making it a failure altogether.

Thursday evening the first of a series of table d'hote dinners was spread at the Country Club and proved a successful and brilliant affair.

Senator Crane to Build Home for Bride

Senator W. Murray Crane and his bride, who will sail for Europe on Tuesday, will devote much of their time abroad to selecting furniture, pictures and other appointments for the magnificent new home they are planning to build at Dalton in the Berkshires. The senator has selected as a site an eminence some distance back from the highway and not far from the residence of his son, W. Murray Crane, Jr. Architects are already at work upon the sketches. It is understood by Senator Crane's friends that he intends to have one of the most beautiful and costly homes in the famous Summer resort region of western Massachusetts.

Scarcity of men at Newport makes the arrival there the past week of three of Boston's eligibles most welcome. William Stackpole of the Somerset, Tennis and Racquet and other clubs; Walter Hunnewell Jr., of Wellesley and George R. Fearing Jr., are the three and all are registered at the Casino. A pretty bit of gossip has been going the rounds regarding Mr. Stackpole and a winsome Vincent Club star, and it is confidently predicted that the engagement will be announced before the close of the season.

Among the Boston matrons most prominently identified with the fashionable set at Newport is Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer of Fairfield street. ## SUITS OF NEWPORT BATHERS STARTLE FATHER NEPTUNE

Society affairs at Newport and other shore resorts are taking a decidedly aquatic turn, and girls of the smart set, as sirens and sea nymphs, abound in the surf at Bailey's Beach and are almost perpetually "in the swim."

Bathing suits in startling styles and colors add life and charm to the invigorating water sports. Newport leads in the display of amazing styles in bathing suits.

Miss Edith Deacon, the most popular girl at this resort of the fashionables, looks demure in a bathing suit of black mohair, which has a circular collar and cuffs of white and a wide black taffeta girdle. Her skirt is plain, but very short.

The blase set sat up and took notice when the fair Nathalie Schenck-Collins appeared on the beach in a flaming red bathing suit in princess effect, with yoke of lace, lace sleeve bands and cap to match. It is in this smart and costly creation that the popular young matron takes her daily dip, utterly regardless of the comments of the less startlingly arrayed bathers.

Blanche Oelrichs is another water sprite and is seen in a different bathing suit almost every day. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Oelrichs of New York and made her debut as an amateur actress recently in the Berkeley Lyceum. Most of her time, when not in the water, is spent in her father's fine touring car.

* * *

"The dolphin," they call Miss Vera Pierrepont Gilbert, for she swims and floats as if to the water born. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Gilbert of Riverside drive, New York, and was introduced at Newport two years ago. Her bathing suits are creations of the most stunning styles, and, like Blanche Oelrichs, she has an endless array of them.

One Playhouse Has Opened For Its Fall Season.

A SURE sign that Winter is approaching is the opening of the theatres for another season. First of these is the Grand Opera House, which opened last evening in A. H. Woods's newest melodrama, "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl," with Edith Browning in the name role. The Boston, Park, Colonial, Hollis, Columbia, Majestic and Empire are scheduled to throw open their doors very soon, and lively times for playgoers will be on by Labor Day.

The new productions this week are "A Gambler's Daughter," at the Bowdoin Square, "Martha," at the Castle Square, and "A New Magdalene" at the Globe. "The Man From Now" begins the last three weeks of its engagement at the Tremont and Keith's new theatre presents an entirely new variety bill. At the Palace two new burlesques are scheduled. Austin & Stone's Museum has a new list of features.

Summer ocean and trolley trips are now at the zenith of their popularity, and the parks and shore resorts are crowded.

Greenroom News of Local Interest

CHANGES made at the Empire Theatre during the Summer make it one of the most attractive playhouses in the city, and it will be ready early in September for the new policy of high-class vaudeville under the management of Percy Williams, who already has six vaudeville houses in Greater New York. The local manager is to be D. L. Robinson, a former newspaper man and formerly connected with the "booming" end of the New York Journal here in Boston. The orchestra floor of the Empire, which hereafter is to be called "The Orpheum," has been lowered to the street level, five new exits have been made from it and it will be much more comfortable with better ventilation and better opportunities for seeing the stage than ever before.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's only appearances on the Boston stage were made at the Columbia a few seasons ago. Frances Belmont and Camille Clifford, both now married into the British nobility, made their debut at that handsome theatre. Mabelle Gilman and Fay Templeton, whose names are now occupying much newspaper space, also made big hits when they played at the Columbia. Manager Farren has now a corps of [illegible] beauties rehearsing at the Columbia for the season's opening on [illegible] which he [illegible] are "as pretty [illegible] set foot [illegible]"

Thomas [illegible] doing a funny "little [illegible]" at the Globe this week, has just bought a fine old mansion in Cambridge on Dana street. "Of all the cities in the East, Cambridge is my ideal," he says.

Richard Carle is to be "The Spring Chicken" next season. Klaw & Erlanger are to put him out in the musical comedy of this name, and he will have to put aside for a time "The Hurdy Gurdy Girl" which he has been at work upon for some time. Emma Janvier goes with him.

"I wish they'd run opera all Winter at the Castle," was the remark the dramatic man overheard one afternoon last week at the theatre. Perhaps Manager Mason will take the hint.

Miss Leah Winslow, who returns to local stock work at the Globe Theatre this week, has just finished a very successful season on the Pacific Coast and has signed for next season to play leads at Keith's, Pawtucket, R. I., house.

Plans of the management of the Castle Square Theatre for the coming season include the first plays released by the Henry Irving estate after Irving's death for American production. They have been sold to the Castle Square Theatre for next season's use. These are the celebrated Irving version of "Faust" and "Olivia," the charming dramatization which Wills made of "The Vicar of Wakefield." Edward Wade, who has been winning golf matches during a strenuous Summer, Mark Kent and Leonora Bradley will return to the company.

What Is Going On

There is one more attraction offered this week than has been the case since June, and more are to follow. The amusement places now open are these:

Keith's Theatre

The vaudeville programme at Keith's for this week is a typical Summer one, and up to the Keith standard. The Zingari troupe, one of the best mixed organisations of vocalists in the varieties, will be the big novelty, presenting an excellent skit pretty [illegible] of gypsy life with special scenery and handsome costumes. There are eight people in the act, five women and three men. This will be the first appearance in Boston. Estelle Wordette, assisted by her company, will present the delightful one-act playlet, "A Honeymoon in the Catskills," which has been scoring a big hit in the other Keith theatres. This will also be its first appearance in Boston. The surrounding show contains the Four Everetts in a new equilibristic exhibition; Clifford and Burke, blackface comedians; Ray Cox, Southern dialect comedienne; Donat Bedini, acrobat, exhibiting an equally clever canine; Dixon and Anger, "The Baron and his Friend"; Bert Boyce, comedy cyclist; Roy Broad, broadface comedian; Malvern and Thomas, singers and dancers, and Marion, Temple and Morton, in an acrobatic specialty. The Fadettes will have an entire new programme and new motion pictures will be exhibited in the kinetograph.

Grand Opera House

The Grand Opera House opening its season last evening with A. H. Woods's domestic melodrama, "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl." It is a sensational scenic production of life in New York City, whose heroine works in a sweat shop and goes through almost incredible adventures. A review of this attraction and of the opening of the season will be found in another column. "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl" will continue every evening this week and at Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday matinees.

Castle Square Theatre

"Martha" at the Castle Square Theatre this week will be musically one of the principal events of the short opera season. Flotow's beautiful music has an irresistible charm for all classes of playgoers. For two generations they have crowded the theatres to hear "The Last Rose of Summer" and the other tuneful numbers of the score. There is a brightness to the work that will keep it before the public for two generations more, and it is doubtful if at the end of that time it will have reached the limit of its long life. The opera has always been popular with singers. The cast includes Miss Mary Carrington as Martha, Hattie Belle Ladd as Nancy, Otis B. Thayer as Tristan and Harry Luckstone as Plunkett. George Tallman and Harry Davies will appear alternately in the part of Lionel.

Globe Theatre

Patrons of the Globe Theatre will be treated to a revival of "The New Magdalen" this week, and that the play even as lately as last season was immensely popular one has but to call to mind "Zira," which Miss Margaret Anglin used, and which is the same play in slightly altered form. The play is now some thirty or more years old, and when it was first adapted from Wilkie Collins's novel it had as great a success on the stage as did the book with the reading public. The play has not been seen in this city for three years at a stock house. The principal roles will be played thus: Mercy Merrick, Miss Lillian Lawrence; Julian Gray, Thomas MacLarnie; Horace Holmcroft, William Humphrey; Surgeon Ignatius Wetzel, William H. Evarts; Max Klauber, Frederic Sullivan; Lady Janet Roy, Miss Leah Winslow; Grace Roseberry, Miss Gertrude Berkeley.

Tremont Theatre

With the performance to-morrow night at the Tremont Theatre, Harry Bulger and his associates in Henry W. Savage's production of the musical oddity "The Man From Now," will enter into the last three weeks of the engagement in Boston, and when the Bangs, Bryan and Klein offering leaves Boston on Saturday night, August 25, it will carry away the palm for the most successful Summer production Boston has enjoyed in years. The one hundredth performance will be celebrated during the last week of the engagement here and it will be fittingly commemorated.

"Cape Cod Folks" Coming

A plain, wholesome tale is that told in the new play, "Cape Cod Folks," which comes to the Boston Theatre Monday evening, August 27, and which carries with it one of the most important mechanical novelties ever seen upon a stage, a storm upon the Cape, during which a ship is driven on a shoal and wrecked. Two of the principal characters of the play are aboard the doomed vessel and are heroically rescued. Nothing so spectacular has been placed upon the stage in many a long day.

Return of "Prince of Pilsen"

The Prince of Pilsen, the most popular and successful musical comedy of recent years, is scheduled for an engagement at the Tremont Theatre after the departure of "The Man from Now." It had its first production here and is now in its fifth season. Jess Dandy is at the head of the organization, having played the part more than a thousand times. Pauline Guzman will sustain the role of Mrs. Crocker, the flirtatious widow, and Jeannette Bageard returns to the role of Sidonie, the French maid. Marie Welsh, Albertine Bensen, George Lydecker, Henry Coote, J. Hayden Clarendon and Wilmer Bentley are among the others. The engagement will open on August 27.

Palace Theatre

With the addition of new comedians and girls, the stock company at the Palace Theatre is stronger and better than ever. The curtain raiser will be "In Vacation Time," while the burlesque will be a laughable satire on Hiawatha. Both skits will afford the ensemble plenty of opportunity to display their versatility. The olio has Allan Wightman, a wonderful sculptor in clay; the Wilsons, colored performers; Amatelle Roscoe, contralto and character comedian. There will be a series of moving pictures in the Palacescope.

Austin & Stone's Museum

"Darkies from the South," a great production of music, fun and dancing, will bring to Boston on Monday an aggregation of half a hundred colored folk who will appear at Austin & Stone's in an up-to-now [illegible] show. [illegible] of the party is the real [illegible] and a feature will be the chorus singing. Again this week the "Minstrel Maids" will hold forth in a lively musical and dancing production and in the olio will be Tom Bateman, Adams and Mack, Welcome and McDade, Gorman and Lenaels, and a notable new feature, Pearl Hudson, in illustrated songs.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

"A Gambler's Daughter," one of the modern sensational plays, will be offered at the Bowdoin Square Theatre this week. One of the great scenes is called "The Wheel Pit," and there is seen a modern gambling hell. The cast is headed by Gertrude Bailey as Kate Merrick, the heiress, Charles Miller as the hero, Henry Alexander as the "bad man," and Edwin Denison as the pliant one. The usual daily matinee will be given and bargain prices will rule for lady patrons.

Miss Hunt's Testimonial

Another brilliant testimonial bill will be offered for Miss Charlotte Hunt at the Bowdoin Square Theatre next Friday afternoon and night, with many volunteers in vaudeville [illegible] and playlets and the entire [illegible] stock company in the melodrama "Beware of Men." The play has [illegible] by the young star [illegible] she can display her [illegible] Regular prices will rule.

Local Out-of-Door Attractions.

Wonderland

"Bigger, busier, better," these three famous political alliteratives may be aptly applied to Wonderland this week, for the programme has been lengthened, strengthened and augmented all along the line. Fred A. Bennett, director of Wonderland's free attractions, has reached out to France and brings Mlle. Lenlet, a young woman devoid of fear, who from a high platform will guide an automobile down a sharp incline at express speed, take a flight through mid-air, cross a threatening gap, and around the [illegible] surrounding the lagoon. This act has been well named "The 'Dip of Death.'" Comedy will be furnished by [illegible] Parisian Circus," the Sisters Carre, in their equestrienne act, and Fritz Bene, the funniest clown in the land. The daily ascension of "Wonderland," the biggest balloon ever made, will be resumed tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, and will continue throughout the week. "Happy" Canfield will make his double parachute jump.

Norumbega Park

People who have the Norumbega Park habit have it bad, and the best evidence of how many there are who have it is found in the crowds who throng the covered open air theatre every afternoon and evening. Threatening weather or even showers have no effect on the zeal of Norumbega Park patrons, who find [illegible] programme for this week includes Hallen and Fuller, stars of farce and musical comedy stage, in "Her Sunday School Boy"; Chester Blodgett Johnstone, sensational trick bicyclist; Bellman and Moore, in a new comedy sketch; Jennings and Renfrew, black face favorites. The Komograph offers the highest achievement in moving pictures, "The Elopement."

Still Greater Paragon Park

Greater Paragon Park is growing in greatness every day. Manager Dodge on Wednesday added the free tub race, and during the coming week this will be one of the amusing free attractions just after the [illegible] act in the free open air circus. The [illegible] is open to all, with prizes for the winners. Another free feature added last week was Hunting the Pelican. A real pelican is permitted to float upon the lagoon and there is a chase after him by men in bathing suits. Nothing funnier was ever [illegible].

In the free open air circus this week the [illegible] shows a trio of big acts. Will [illegible] who does such funny things on a wire 125 feet in the air; La Belle Blanche [illegible] her thrilling "Slide for Life"; Professor Darling's trained dogs and ponies.

The Tripful Trolley

[illegible] trolley riding is more popular this year than ever before is the statement ventured by the Passenger Department of the Boston & Northern & Old Colony Street Railway Companies, and the statement seems to be verified by the crowds that daily throng their offices at No. 309 Washington street in search of trolley information and [illegible] about the cool, long and short trips that can be taken on the [illegible] of the company. Just now the trips to Gloucester on one side and to Old [illegible] other are rivals for popularity. On the Plymouth trip the eye will be pleased with the cool, restful and pastoral view of the pretty old villages, meadows and lakes on the south coast displayed on the way to quaint old Gloucester is a strong attraction.

Gloucester and North Shore

There's no trip by land or sea, these uncertain, but smiling days, equal to that by the steamship to quaint old Gloucester and Cape Ann. [illegible] comfortable steel steamer Cape Ann [illegible] its sister ship, leaves the north side of Central wharf daily and Sunday for picturesque Cape Ann and Gloucester. Week day starting time is 10 o'clock, but on Sundays the boat leaves at 10.15.

All Eligible for Prizes

Every person, old or young, rich and poor, bond or free, Republican or Democrat, is eligible for either the ladies' or the gentlemen's gold cash prizes offered by the management of the fishing steamer King Philip, which daily and Sunday leaves Commercial Wharf at 10 a. m., if the weather permits. Captain Edward W. Dixon, as commander, offers the same liberal cash prizes amounting to $150 in gold as last year, for the biggest haddock or cod caught during the season. Lines, bait and chowder are furnished free.

Plant Line to Halifax

Now that the magnificent 3,500-ton steamship Petoria has been added to the Plant Line fleet of steamers sailing between Boston and the Maritime Provinces, vacation seekers bound for Halifax and other places in Nova Scotia have their choice of three sailing days each week—Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, at noon from Commercial Wharf. The Plant Line is the only all-water route to the "Garrison City by the Sea," as Halifax is called, and the trip is made in less than thirty hours from Boston. Full particulars regarding Plant Line ocean trips may be obtained at the City Ticket Office, 298 Washington street, or of A. W. Perry, general [illegible] Commercial Wharf, Boston.

Harbor Trip to Bass Point

For the remainder of the Summer season there is hardly a day on which some society or organization is not scheduled for an outing at Bass Point, Nahant. Church picnics, lodges, secret orders and others have trips scheduled, leaving Boston on the steamers of the Nahant Line, sailing from Lincoln wharf, foot of Battery street, and returning from the point late in the evening.

Rail and Boat to Bass Point

No trip out of Boston presents as many pleasurable novelties as this combination rail and boat trip to the Point. Trains connect with the steamers of the Lynn Steamboat Company for Bass Point. The trip entire takes fifty minutes and costs but twenty cents. Dancing, bathing, boating, fishing, roller skating, shore dinners and licenses at the hotels are some of the attractions.

Flocking to Nova Scotia

Every outgoing steamer of the Dominion Atlantic Railway Line is carrying full lists of tourists bound for delightful Nova Scotia and the Provinces. There the days are warm enough to be comfortable and the nights deliciously cool. There is nothing that can be compared to the pure ozone of Nova Scotia to build up the run-down, tired worker from the city. The steamers Prince George and Boston leave Long wharf, foot of State street, daily (except Saturday) at 2 p. m. The company city office is No. 228 Washington street.

The Portland Recalled

The mystery of the loss of the steamer Portland in the great blizzard of November 27, 1898, has never been wholly solved. The shores of Cape Cod were strewn with wreckage and the life savers at the Tip of the Cape agree that the Portland undoubtedly went down about two miles northeast of the tip of Cape Cod. Provincetown people have many tales to tell of that dreadful storm which have much to [illegible] steamer Cape Cod, which makes daily trips from Bay Line Wharf, No. 400 Atlantic avenue, at 9 A. M.

Stage Notes

Among the more notable "legitimate" actors to be seen in vaudeville at Keith's within the next few weeks will be Murray Carson, the noted actor-manager and playwright of England. Mr. Carson is the author of "Rosemary" and many other plays, which have won big success in this country. He will present a romantic play from his own pen entitled, "The Point of the Sword."

Bessie Dunne, Etta Drew and Bertha Metcalf are the three latest Boston recruits to the support of Harry Bulger in "The Man from Now," at the Tremont Theatre. These young women entered the cast on Monday.

Some curiosity has been expressed as to the exact locale of the new play "Cape Cod Folks," which Messrs. Liebler & Co. are to present for the first time at the Boston Theatre on August 27. The scenes are to be laid at Hyannis on the Cape, and a number of prominent local characters of the place are to be featured.

The daily tub races in the lagoon, which is one of the new free features at Paragon Park, are said to be very funny.

A great orthnological wonder, now on exhibition in Europe, has been secured by Messrs. Stone & Shaw for Austin & Stone's Museum, where it will be shown as a leading feature about the middle of the month.

The play at the Globe Theatre next week will be that brilliant comedy of Pinero's, "The Gay Lord Quex," which never before has been done at popular prices in this city. It will afford two splendid roles for John Craig and Lillian Lawrence.

Boston Girls Seeking the Quick Road to Health Become Mermaids

Men Find Fair Rivals at Speed and Distance Swimming at All the Beach Resorts. Rules for Young Women Who Seek Natatorial Skill.

BY A SWIMMER.

SWIMMING as a sport for girls is more the vogue this season than ever before and the number of young women who have become expert natators is quite astonishing, considering the feminine fear—bred through ages—of the water.

Englishwomen hitherto have been the best feminine swimmers in the world, aside from the dusky ladies of the South Sea islands. The women islanders of the Pacific can swim as well as the men. Whalemen and traders while edging to windward to gain harbor into some cocoanut shaded lagoon, are often surrounded by a bevy of Marquesan or Kanaka belles who have swam out through the surf for two or three miles to welcome the strange ship and sailors.

But civilized woman has left skill in swimming to the exclusive enjoyment of savage sisters until recently. Outdoor life at the seashore and the growing custom of girls to take part in every pastime of their brothers has brought about a great change. Newport's elite circles are graced by a number of beautiful heiresses who can swim as well as most of the men who frequent Bailey's Beach. This is true also of Narragansett Pier and resorts of lesser social fame.

Boston Girls Good Swimmers.

In and around Boston there are scores of girls who swim bravely and well. They can be found at the L street and City Point beaches, Wood Island, at Nantasket, and at Revere, not to mention other places along the shore which are popular with bathers. Not only can many Boston girls swim with ease in surf and for a short distance along shore, but there are not a few who "can go a distance." They are accomplished as to stroke and diving; they float and perform all the feats which brothers and sweethearts affect.

Every girl who goes to the shore for a sojourn takes a bathing suit as well as walking shoes. Once upon a time a parasol was the most essential article. But now the sun rays are courted, and to be "a nut brown maid" is quite the thing. She returns to town well tanned and with an elasticity of step that makes her a moving thing of grace. Health and beauty are both acquired. Swimming, in fact, is the healthiest of all sports for both sexes and all ages. It is an exercise which calls every muscle into play, chest, arms and legs, abdominal and back muscles [illegible] the effort so evenly that the product is a physical symmetry not to be acquired otherwise.

Makes a Good Figure.

A good girl swimmer is almost sure to have a fine, well curved figure. There is no over-development of muscle anywhere in her physique, but all play like elastic bands beneath a smooth, fair, glowing skin. As a beautifier no cosmetic can compare with a plunge in the sea. Even lake and pond swimming will do wonders for the health, although salt water has a tonic effect not to be obtained from fresh water. In days of yore the girl who could swim a few strokes in any fashion was accounted rarely accomplished in the water. But nowadays she is not content until she has mastered all the strokes—breast, side, overhand, and even trudgeon. She learns to swim fast and to swim far, and finds that she can do both as well as a man. She finds that when she can breathe properly in the water she is as enduring as one who has much greater brute strength.

The one handicap that woman as a swimmer has to carry when compared with man is shortness of limb. The longer the arm or leg the more power to the stroke. But the lass of lithe figure may not be put at even this disadvantage. Breathing is the chief secret of success in swimming for both women and men. The sport is of inestimable advantage because it so increases lung capacity.

Breathing an Essential Point.

When a girl learns to breathe as easily and naturally while swimming as she does when walking she has mastered the great secret of success as a mermaid. Wearing corsets is very much condemned by all medical schools, and when a woman tries to swim she finds that contracted lower lungs and weakened abdominal muscles are hurdles difficult to jump in the water. But a little practice will enable her to breathe deep and to fill every air cell to the bottom of her lungs with the buoyant air which not only keeps her afloat but feeds and purifies her blood.

Fresh air is now conceded to be the only cure for tuberculosis, and to be thoroughly healthy, whether she swims or not, a girl must learn to beathe deep and do it habitually. After she has learned to swim she will do it unconsciously all the time. The benefit she takes back to town will not be only the temporary stimulation of an outing at the seashore. She will have acquired a habit which will prolong her life and beautify her complexion all her days.

How to Learn to Swim.

How to learn to swim cannot be told. Some acquire the art as naturally as most animals. Others never can. The latter are the exception. Most persons can learn the breast stroke easily, if they will give it earnest effort and are not afraid. Confidence is everything in learning to swim and afterward. But the best course for every girl to pursue is to seek instruction. There are instructors at all the most frequented beaches, and at others there are always friends who would delight in serving as such. Once the [illegible] passed expertness rests with the girl herself. She has only to observe and practice. But she should learn to swim in rough as well as smooth water. It is far more exhilarating to plunge and swim through surf than stand with hands upon a life line and bob up and down like a jack in the box to the accompaniment of little feminine squeals, in which fear plays no little part.

Many instructors first teach a swimming pupil to float before any attempt is made to impart knowledge of a stroke. Being able to float gives a girl great confidence. She realizes that if properly poised her body cannot sink, and once that fact is firmly in the mind self propulsion through the water is both natural and easy.

To be able to float is of the utmost advantage to the most expert swimmer. It enables her to rest as comfortably as if upon a bed of down when fatigued. If ever so unfortunate as to be caught some distance from shore in a strong current it would enable her to keep afloat when strength waned until assistance came. When the art of swimming in a bathing suit has been acquired it is well to practice it while dressed in a walking skirt. It can easily be done if the "kick" is learned.

Peter McNally, when instructor at the North End Park, astonished the girls who bathed there when he suggested it, but upon trial they found it just as easy as he said. Jack Glens [illegible] Newport society girls the same [illegible] are rescued [illegible] danger of drowning [illegible] swim. The list of such heroines is a long one. They have acquired a confidence and presence of mind which is an invaluable moral adjunct.

Pointers for Boston Girls Who Wish to Be Expert Swimmers

Acquire confidence in the water and remember that a properly poised body cannot sink.

Learn to fill the lungs to the fullest capacity with each breath. To breathe properly is vital.

Learn to float in the water. This feat enables the tired swimmer to regain strength by perfect rest.

Always wet the head first when going into the water. That is a first aid to perfect circulation.

Learn to swim in a walking skirt as well as in a bathing suit. It is all in the "kick."

Songs of "Hope Deferred"

Illustrated by the Song, "Waiting, Waiting for the Day That Ne'er Will Come," Printed on Other Pages of This Newspaper To-Day.

WRITERS of popular songs evidently have learned the same lesson that distinguish the writers of popular melodramas—they recognize the commercial value of the tear compelling sentiment.

The finest constructed farces and comedies, masterpieces of dramatic art which made you shriek with laughter survive for a year or two, gaining their [illegible] support from the fifteen or twenty per cent of playgoers who esteem their intellect more highly than their emotions. But the pale, sad faced, wronged heroine of pure melodrama can hold her own with the great mass of theatregoers year after year.

Songs which touch that same popular chord of sympathy for the unfortunate—particularly the unfortunate in love—seem to win their way easily, while immeasurably finer examples of the song-writers' art fall by the wayside.

By way of illustrating this point there is printed on other pages of this newspaper to-day a song which might have for its text, "Hope deferred maketh the heart sick," with the appropriate title, "Waiting, Waiting for the Day That Ne'er Will Come."

There are dozens—indeed hundreds—of ways in which such a theme may be developed for song purposes. Imagine, for instance, the young husband or lover who has gone to the wars to be included among the nameless dead found on the battlefield. The wife or sweetheart waits longingly for his return, not knowing that she waits in vain.

The particular song used by way of illustration has even a more effective variation on this theme—the sweetheart who waits vainly for the lover who is false to her. These popular song writers are a bit careless about the literary quality of their work, but one can imagine how tears must flow when a sympathetic voice sings the minor melody set to words like these:

"She was happy and fair, of a beauty most rare,
And by all called the pride of the place.
To that town came a lad, in the finest clothes clad,
Who at once swore he'd win her sweet face.
To his words she fell prey, to his power gave way,
For she thought him to be without stain,

Col. Kennedy of Wonderland in Reminiscent Mood, Tells of the Charms of Prairie Life.

BY ELEANOR AMES.

A WHITE man is worth $1,000 more than an Indian—at least that is the distinction in value made by an Osage Indian squaw, according to Wild Bill Kennedy of the Wonderland Wild West show, and if any one knows, Wild Bill ought to. Ever since the day that he could toddle, Colonel Kennedy has lived in the wildest part of the wild West, with Indians for his neighbors and cowboys for his comrades.

Consequently what he doesn't know about the West and Indians and ranch life isn't worth knowing.

He likes the Indian as far as he knows him, and he believes the future holds much of promise for the red man.

As an example of what the modern Indian is accomplishing and may be expected to accomplish he points to the Osage tribe, which represents more strongly than any other the mixture of races, the aboriginal and the modern civilized product. The Osage tribe is prosperous. It averages $4,000 per head in the bank and a per capita possession of 642 acres of land.

It is this prosperity which has caused the marital commingling of the East and the West.

Nearly all the Osage Indian women have married white men—"squaw men" such husbands are called, and in consequence have adopted the manners and modes of civilization.

Houses have replaced tepees and blankets have given way to up-to-date gowns.

"Nickle-plating" is the name given to the courtship of one of these white men and Indian maidens, and because some most unhappy matches were made, ending in deserted and impoverished wives, the government placed a fine of $1,000 on each woman who said "yes" to the ardent white suitor.

"But that didn't stop 'em," drawled Wild Bill, as he chewed reflectively on a bit of straw and tilted his broad felt hat brim protectingly over his eyes. "An Osage Indian squaw says a white husband's easy worth $1,000 more'n an Indian, so they pay the thousand and get married just the same. Women are a queer lot, you know. And, anyhow, with $3,000 left and the 642 acres of land, a pair can rub along pretty comfortable. It don't take an awful lot to live on out there."

"And most of the marriages are happy?" I asked.

"Can Get Along All Right."

"Well, yes, so you might say," replied "Wild Bill," with a flashing twinkle of his eyes. "I guess some folks in high society would call 'em pretty near ideal by comparison. If the man understands the Indian nature even a little bit, he can get along all right. You see, civilization is wearing to an Indian, even to the most civilized Indian.

"It takes a good deal of courage for an Indian to adopt the white man's way of living. The old Indians don't approve of it.

"But about the Osages. The squaw man who understands his wife will know that she has to go back to being a real Indian every now and then, and so two or three times a year he sees her pack her duds and go off to the reservation to live like her [illegible] for a month or so. He knows after that she will come back and be contented for three or four months until the wild fit takes her again."

Wild Bill Kennedy likes the Indians, and they like him, because they can depend upon him and believe in him. And yet he confesses that he doesn't know the Indians at all well.

"No white man does or can know them," he declared, as he switched the straw through his fingers and looked away past me, as though across the wide plains of Oklahoma. "W[illegible] Take the sun dance, for instance. As well as I know the West and the Indians, I've never seen a sun dance, nor I don't believe any other white man has. I've offered to buy a ticket—an Indian loves money—I've offered to furnish beeves for the barbecue—next to money an Indian loves to eat—but it's no use. 'No good white man see sun dance. Indian, he all right. White man heap too much sabe,' is the way they've always refused me."

A Genuine "Wild West."

In bringing the Wild West show to Wonderland, its proprietor, "Wild Bill" Kennedy, has been faithful in details and strictly truthful in color. It is not a show for effect. It is not a stage Wild West, made up for the occasion.

It is a genuine, true to life bit of the old West cut from the prairie sod and transplanted in Boston.

"The setting might be the K. B. ranch, [illegible] acres in Beaver County, Oklahoma, Mr. Kennedy's home, but the actors and the "stunts" would be the same.

"It's just as near to the real thing as we can get it," declares its owner, with his inimitable drawl and soft slurring of words. "I don't see how we could make it any nearer reality. We wanted to put on the opening of the Cherokee strip—my, that was the greatest thing I ever saw—but people wouldn't understand it and get excitement enough out of it. And what's the use of fixing up something that never happened."

Why, "Wild Bill" Kennedy, you ask? So did I, after having tried vainly to make the name fit this slender, wiry, alert and always affable man, with his honest smiling blue eyes and his pleasant, sunburned face.

And he can't really tell why, except to explain that in his country every one is nicknamed and that he has known men for years by their nicknames whom he never knew by their real names.

"It ain't the name in our country, it's the man," he said. "There's Shorty, for example, of the Hundred and One ranch. I've known him for years, but I don't know him by any other name than 'Shorty.' They call him that because he's so tall. Why, he'll stand over six feet three."

He smiled, then chuckled at the recollection of "Shorty."

"Don't you ever tire of the West?" I asked. "After being so much in the East, don't you catch the eastern spirit and feel that you'd like to stay here where life is easier?"

I blush for my narrowness of vision.

"Life is harder here," replied "Wild Bill," "and I'd die of homesickness if I had to live here. I s'pose it's all right for Eastern folks, but a little of it goes a long ways for me.

"I'll be mighty glad to get back to the ranch, and so will the whole outfit. The boys are all tired of this cramped way of living. They're counting the days till they can jump a western-bound train.

"The East is all too much crowded up. Why, I say that the folks in jail out our way have more liberty than the people here do who are at large."

I asked Mr. Kennedy about the "onward sweep of progress" which is eating up the prairies.

"Yes, it's getting too closely settled," he confessed. "We're going to move this Fall. We're going to sell the K. B. ranch and go out to Idaho, up near Caldwell, where I've got 3,500 acres of land including some timber, all picked out. Why, in Oklahoma the farmers are taking up the land so fast that it's getting to be too high priced to raise stock."

When the Kennedy brothers get established on their new ranch, "Wild Bill" tells me they are going to raise spotted horses. There is lots of money in spotted horses, because they are so scarce. Years ago when there were so many spotted horses you couldn't count them nobody cared much about them. Now there are only a few left they have jumped up and doubled and trebled in value.

Roping a Wild Steer.

"It's the contrariness of the world," explains Mr. Kennedy. "Indians always preferred spotted ponies, but it's only recently that other people have wanted them. Why, I can get from $150 to $200 any day in Oklahoma for a good spotted horse that will weigh 1,000 pounds.

"I've got a fine spotted stallion, who is a son of the one that General Grant had presented to him by the Sultan of Arabia."

"Speaking of animals," I ventured, "do you know how excited people were over your roping of that steer?"

Mr. Kennedy grew serious.

"Yes, and I'm sorry about it," he replied. "You see, they don't understand. Now we throw that steer so easy it is no worse than throwing a pet dog over as you might in playing with him. Of course, out on the plains we hurt 'em sometimes because they're so wild and they kick around so. But we handle these steers awful quiet and easy. It don't hurt 'em any."

By the way, Anna Schaeffar, whom Mr. Kennedy says is by all odds the most daring and clever plainswoman he has ever seen, has come to Boston to ride the wild steer.

"Afraid? No," he laughed. "She'll handle him as you would a kitten."

"Western girls ain't afraid of much and if ever there was a real western girl, bone and blood, its Anna Schaeffer."

FACT and FICTION

COSMOPOLITAN for August is the issue of FACT and FICTION. Every article, story and poem is entertaining; some are instructive as well, and some just fascinating.

STORY OF ANDREW JACKSON

By Alfred Henry Lewis.

This is an historical novel that is true—every word of it. Andrew Jackson—who does not know him as one of the greatest of Presidents, but who knows him as a lover and, incidentally, as a duellist? When you know his private life as intimately as Mr. Lewis tells of it, you will know one of the most romantic characters in history.

THE TREASON OF THE SENATE

By David Graham Phillips.

Senator Elkins, of West Virginia, one of the powerful lieutenants of the "merger," and Senator Knox, of Pennsylvania, whose record is one of devotion to the men who exploit the American people—both are scourged in the August issue with facts about their deeds that patriotic citizens will read with horror and surprise. This instalment of "The Treason of the Senate" shows Elkins's connection with the infamous crime of "rebating," and how Knox betrayed Roosevelt after the President had retained him as Attorney-General.

CAUSE OF THE GREAT EARTHQUAKE

By David Starr Jordan.

Much has been written about what the earthquake did, but practically nothing has been said about the cause which underlay the whole calamity. Mr. Jordan, a scientific investigator, well qualified to write on this subject, shows how and why the terrible force locked in the bowels of the earth wrought this frightful destruction of the "Queen City of the West"—and, indeed, the whole Pacific Coast. This article is written in a popular style. Every one will be the wiser after having read it.

CAST AWAY ON FEATHER'S FOLLY

By Norman Duncan.

Every one who loves the adventure of the sea admires Norman Duncan's strong, virile stories, and this one is in his best style. The story runs breathlessly to the end, and the reader himself will scarcely breathe until he has finished it.

INGRATITUDE OF MR. ROSENFELD

By Bruno Lessing.

Lessing is the one humorist who is able to present to magazine readers the ordinarily sombre life of the New York east side Ghetto in garb of lighter hue. Lessing's characters are inimitable and, moreover, true; they have all the strength and reality of a master story-teller and observer of human nature.

ANGELS' VISITS

By W. W. Jacobs.

Every one who has read Jacobs's short stories, which have been published from time to time in the Cosmopolitan, says that this wonderful English humorist suggests Dickens. He has all of Dickens's best manner of word caricature, with all the fidelity to nature that made that great novelist the greatest. "Angels' Visits" will certainly teach the laughless how to laugh.

A HONEYMOON IN A CANOE

Extracts from a Bride's Log Book.

By Winifred Fales.

Those who would like a delicious little tid-bit of literature written almost in a whisper of words, ought to read "A Honeymoon in a Canoe." It makes dainty, entertaining reading, and might, perhaps, suggest to prospective brides and bridegrooms a delightful way to avoid the crowd on the momentous "trip" and of obtaining quiet and time for "honeymooning."

BOLD SENATOR BAILEY.

An intensely absorbing article telling of the effrontery and cheap logic of Joseph Bailey's reply to the "COSMOPOLITAN" on the floor of the Senate. A true statement, showing how the Senator failed utterly to answer the charges that he helped Standard Oil into Texas, that he received a $200,000 fee for his services in negotiating loans in oil and timber lands, and that he regularly works for the "interests" and against the people.

No magazine to-day presents to its readers such a fine galaxy of authors as DAVID GRAHAM PHILLIPS, JACK LONDON, W. W. JACOBS, HENRY D. THOREAU, DAVID STARR JORDAN, H. G. # MORAN ON DOUBLE PROBE

Violators of Food and Civil Service Laws to Be Haled Before Jury.

CALLS ON THE STATE BOARDS FOR THE FACTS

Harrington's Report Believed to Pave Way for Quick Action.

Two brand-new investigations have been started by District Attorney John B. Moran.

The first has to do with criminal violations of the food laws and is the outgrowth of the recent report of the State Board of Health on adulterated foodstuffs, particularly meats and meat products.

The second is in regard to criminal violations of the civil service laws.

State Board of Health
State House, Boston, Mass.
Gentlemen:

The recently published articles relative to the food laws indicate that you are in possession of evidence of violation of criminal law.

If you have any evidence of violation of the criminal law committed in the Suffolk District I request that you furnish me such evidence without delay that I may present it to the Grand Jury at its sitting next week.

Yours,
JOHN B. MORAN,
District Attorney.

Civil Service Commissioners,
State House, Boston, Mass.
Gentlemen:

For certain violations of the civil service laws and rules a criminal penalty is provided. These criminal provisions have in the past been ignored.

I request that you furnish me a concise and accurate statement of all violations of the civil service laws and rules as soon as they are brought to your attention hereafter in order that I may present the evidence to the Grand Jury.

Yours,
JOHN B. MORAN,
District Attorney.

Will Lose No Time.

Mr. Moran, it is understood, intends to lose no time in investigating the violations of the food law, and will present the evidence to the Grand Jury next week, as his letter states. That he will have plenty of evidence seems certain from the report made by Dr. Charles Harrington, secretary of the State Board of Health.

This report declared that many of the canned goods sold in Massachusetts contained dangerous preservatives. "Boned turkey" and "boned chicken," it was stated, contained very little meat, being mostly skin and feathers. Some kinds of devilled meat were found to contain scraps and refuse. Borax and acid preservatives were found in many cans.

The report was the result of the examination of 150 different kinds of canned meats and meat products. Most of the products which the board characterized as dangerous were made outside the State, largely by Western packers. The following is quoted from the report:

Fraud Is Common.

"Certain preparations the manufacture of which involves comminution or grinding, are very largely fraudulent in character, in that they are not what they purport to be. These preparations include the various potted tongues, chicken, beef and ham, and devilled chicken, turkey, ham and tongue. Preparations of the so-called roast beef, pressed beef, corned beef and whole tongues are naturally difficult to counterfeit so far as material goes."

A long list of manufacturers and products was given with the analysis of each product showing exactly what it contained, both as to material and preservatives.

The report also contained the result of inspection of a number of slaughter houses and packing houses in various parts of the State. Some of them were praised, while others were unqualifiedly condemned.

A day or two later in an interview given the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, by Dr. Harrington, he declared that the selling agents were liable to criminal prosecution as to sell adulterated goods was a criminal offence. It is possible that it is along these lines that the district attorney intends to proceed.

May Be Fined $1,000.

In his other investigation Mr. Moran is seeking violations of section 35, chapter 19, of the Revised Laws, which reads:

"Whoever makes an appointment to office or selects a person for employment contrary to or wilfully refuses or otherwise neglects to comply with the provisions of this chapter or of any rule hereunder shall, unless some other penalty is specifically provided, be punished by a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $1000 for each offence."

Lists Are Purged.

The Civil Service Commissioners have been conducting an investigation of their own of the applications filed in the labor office at the State House for positions in the labor service of Boston. They have stricken from the lists many names because of insufficient, inconsistent or false certificates presented by applicants. In addition, they have voted to abolish a number of separate lists.

Among the names stricken from the lists are these applicants for positions: Bracers, 10; derrick men, 12; brick slingers, 7; rammers, 6. The separate lists abolished are plasterers' helpers, roofers' helpers, carpenters' helpers, harness makers' helpers, boilermakers' helpers, brick slingers, wharfmen.

The Grand Jury investigation of the ice trust, which was dropped by District Attorney Moran last Wednesday in favor of the Chelsea graft cases, will be resumed during this week. The investigation is practically completed. Only a few unimportant witnesses remain to be called.

ROCKEFELLER TOO ILL TO ATTEND PRAYER MEETING

Oil King Suffering from Attack of Fever at Cleveland Home

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 4.—John D. Rockefeller is suffering from a slight attack of fever as the result of his trip from New York to Cleveland. It is not severe enough to necessitate the service of Dr. Biggar, but caused the Oil King to remain away from prayer meeting at the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church last night.

"Mr. Rockefeller cannot be seriously ill," said Dr. Biggar to-night, "for I would have been called. The trip to Europe left him in the best of condition physically."

The doctor admitted that he had not seen the Oil King since his arrival from New York Tuesday morning.

Clean Out Place at No. 293 Washington Street by Shrewd Work.

One of the biggest gambling raids made in Boston in a number of years was successfully executed just before twelve o'clock last night, when twelve men were arrested in a room on the top floor of No. 293 Washington street. They are charged with being present where gaming implements were found. Four team loads of furniture, including a couch bed and sewing machine, were taken from the premises. All those arrested are believed to be professional men who gave fictitious names.

For a long time the officers watched the place, but never seemed to be able to get the evidence needed, and finally came to the conclusion that someone effectually tipped every approach of the police.

Last night Sergeant Fetridge waited until the elevator reached the street floor, when he seized the boy and gave him in charge of one of the officers. The sergeant, with the rest of his men, then ran the elevator to the top floor and hid in the entry until one of the men arrested came up and knocked on the door and gave the private signal and password, which was "Knox." After he was admitted the officers gave the same signal and password and were admitted. Hands of cards had just been dealt to the twelve men and the officers at once put them under arrest.

Two of them are said to be prominent physicians and the rest professional men of high standing in Boston.

The names given were Henry Walker, thirty seven years; Charles H. Chapman, forty-seven years; John B. Wilson, thirty three years; John R. Nelson, twenty nine years; George H. Williams, thirty six years; Albert V. Young, forty four years; Frank Mitchell, thirty-six years; Charles Anderson, forty years; Thomas Everett, forty six years; Edward W. Wallace, thirty two years; Joseph L. Bradford, forty five years, and Fred Hayes, thirty-five years.

They were all bailed out.

MRS. SAGE OVERWHELMED WITH BEGGING LETTERS

Millionaire's Widow Gets 700 Appeals for Aid in Week at Long Island Home.

New York, Aug. 4.—Mrs. Russell Sage has been overwhelmed with begging letters from all over the United States and from foreign countries. Some of them show from their postmarks they were mailed as soon as the news of the death of Mr. Sage was made public.

Mrs. Sage to-day at her home at Lawrence, Long Island, authorized the statement that she will pay no attention to begging letters. She does not read them beyond such perusal as is necessary to establish their character. None of them will be answered and it will be useless to enclose stamps.

More than 700 letters asking Mrs. Sage for aid reached her at her Lawrence cottage this week, and several hundred more were addressed to the Russell Sage offices. The clerks at the office throw these letters into the waste basket. Mrs. Sage never sees them.

BY MEAT SCANDAL HARVARD MAY LOSE BEEF BARON'S GIFT

Nelson Morris Buys John Harvard Home at Stratford-on-Avon but Holds It from College.

New York, Aug. 4.—A cable dispatch from London says:

Nelson Morris recently told a London friend that he had purchased the John Harvard home at Stratford-on-Avon with the full intention of presenting it to Harvard University.

He hesitated, however, to tender the gift on account of the prejudice that had lately been aroused against the American meat packers. He seemed to think that for the present he could not gracefully carry out his intention.

While speaking of the canned meat scandal, Mr. Morris stated that his firm had already suffered a net loss of $2,000,000 in its foreign trade on account of the outcry raised against the products of the Chicago packing houses.

HIS DEMISE HASTENED BY FEAR OF "BLACK HAND."

Continually Under Guard After Life Had Been Mysteriously Threatened.

HAD GIVEN LARGE AMOUNT OF MONEY TO CHARITY

Springfield, Aug. 4.—A self-confined prisoner in his $2,000,000 castle, Daniel Baird Wesson, the famous multi-millionaire revolver king, was found dead late this afternoon.

For months Mr. Wesson had lived in deadly fear of the Black Hand Society, which last Winter threatened him with death. He had guarded his famous mansion with all kinds of electrical devices, and for months had not dared to step outside of his home. Death was caused by heart failure, according to his physician, Dr. J. H. Carmichael, superinduced by neuritis.

Mr. Wesson's wealth is estimated at $50,000,000. All of his money was made in the revolver business.

In 1890 he built the famous $2,000,000 palace on Maple street. He moved into it in 1899, with his wife, Cynthia Maria Hawes, of Worcester, who died July 18 of this year.

Mr. Wesson had lived in his palace but a year or two when he was stricken with neuritis. The management of his great revolver business passed into the hands of his sons, Joseph and Walter Wesson, and the old man became a prisoner in the mansion. His life was happy enough until last winter, when he began to receive threatening letters from the Black Hand. There was always a private guard about the Wesson palace, but when the "Black

The map shows the water environs of Cronstadt and the scene of the Baltic mutiny, where sailors from Russian warships and barracks captured Fort Constantine. It was retaken by the Czar's loyal warships after a terrific bombardment in which many of the rebels were slain. The mutineers lost possession of one warship, which they had captured after slaying the captain, by allowing part of their number to go ashore to confer with mutineers on land. Types of the captured mutineers, who are now imprisoned and awaiting the death which will follow a drum head court-martial, are also pictured.

55,000 WORKMEN NOW OUT ON GIGANTIC STRIKE

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Aug. 4.—Reynolds Newspaper in a sensational article this morning states that several of the great European financiers heavily interested in Russian securities are secretly offering to furnish money with which to place the Russian revolutionary movement on a business footing.

The bankers having reached the conclusion that the sooner the Czar's regime is ended the better, are ready to hasten the same. To insure payment of the Russian loans the bankers want to become the friends of the revolutionists.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 4.—Heavy firing heard in the direction of Cronstadt this afternoon indicates a renewal of fighting in that quarter.

Telegraph and telephone lines connecting this city and the fortress have been cut and there is no communication with the scene of recent mutiny and bloodshed.

MOB OFFICER TO SAVE FRIENDS FROM JAIL.

Sergeant Patrick Byrnes of the Roxbury Crossing Station was badly beaten last night by a crowd of young men while he was attempting to arrest two youths on the charge of larceny of a team belonging to M. O'Keefe, who runs a grocery store at 1120 Columbus avenue.

Byrnes intercepted John Fay, twenty two years, of No. 61 Longwood avenue, and Michael Quinn, twenty-one years, of No. 18 Phillips street, Roxbury, at the corner of Conant street and Huntington avenue with the team and after bringing them to a patrol box, was set upon by a large crowd who tried to rescue the prisoners. Byrnes was struck with clubs and stones and cut severely about the head and neck, but managed to hold on to his prisoners until the arrival of the patrol wagon.

CAR KNOCKS HORSE FROM STREET ON WOMAN.

A horse thrown from the street to the sidewalk by a trolley car fell last night on Mrs. Mae Richendorf, of No. 10 Rodman Park, Roxbury, who was walking with her husband at the time. In pulling his wife from under the horse Mr. Richendorf was struck in the back by the shaft of a wagon to which the horse was hitched.

Shocked, bruised, but not grievously hurt, husband and wife were taken home in a patrol wagon, which did service for an ambulance.

The collision between the car and the horse took place in front of No. 2802 Washington street. A. L. Ober, of No. 2708 Washington street, owns the horse. A friend of Ober's named Leroy H. Keniston was driving the animal at the time of the mix-up.

FAIR WEATHER IS PROMISED FOR TO-DAY.

A sharp thunder storm, which struck Boston about 7 o'clock last night, was the first storm of the week to have any perceptible effect on the atmosphere. Immediately after the shower broke the air cooled and a brisk breeze came up from the harbor, which assisted greatly in clearing away the last of the heavy fog. The storm lasted only about half an hour.

Several places about the city were struck, but little damage was done.

The local forecasters promise fair weather to-day with a gradual rise of the mercury. The excessive humidity, which registered 97 per cent. yesterday, was the great factor in causing the suffering. This is 27 per cent. higher than normal and falls short of the precipitation mark but 3 per cent.

MILLIONAIRE WESSON FOUND DEAD IN CASTLE

THE LATE DANIEL B. WESSON AND $2,000,000 MANSION.

End Hastened by Fear of "Black Hand," Whose Threats Kept Him Prisoner in Great Mansion.

"Hand" letters arrived Mr. Wesson asked for police protection. Special officers were assigned to that part on Maple street near his palace and no one was allowed on the grounds after dark. His private bodyguard was doubled and it was next to impossible for anyone to get into the grounds after dark.

The threatening letters were mostly from New York, and they worried the old man considerably. He went into a decline, and it was impossible for any but intimate relatives to talk with him. His wife sank rapidly after the "Black Hand" letters were received, and her death in July was a severe blow to him. He had been so weak for the last month or so that he had to be lifted about and carried from room to room by a nurse.

Mr. Wesson gave a great deal of money to charity. He endowed a hospital at a cost of nearly $1,000,000. He was a benefactor of many private charitable societies and there were few public charities that he did not patronize. He leaves two sons and a daughter, and thirteen grand children.

DEFIES POLICE AND DOZEN MEN TO ARREST HIM

After a desperate fight with a dozen men and a policeman William N. Cain, aged thirty nine, of No. 171 Dudley street, Roxbury, was arrested last night in the saloon of William Devine at No. 52 Broadway Extension [illegible] the Lagrange street station [illegible] charged with [illegible] loaded revolver.

Patrolman Littlefield says Cain went into the saloon and [illegible] trouble with the men there. Proprietor Devine asked him to leave. A general fight started. Devine was doing all he could to restore peace and to get the man out of his place when Patrolman Littlefield rushed in. He seized Cain, who drew a revolver. Littlefield disarmed him.

ACCURACY OF ALL ICE SCALES TO BE TESTED.

The accuracy of all scales of ice dealers is to be tested according to the latest order of Mayor Fitzgerald to Henry B. Lovering, sealer of weights and measures. A suspicion that some of the scales used by retail ice dealers are not in good condition gave occasion for the Mayor's action. The letter to Sealer Lovering is as follows:

Dear Sir:

Please arrange to test at once the correctness of all scales used by ice dealers in weighing ice sold by them to the public.

Every ice dealer is required by law to provide scales for each wagon used by him for the delivery of ice. This requirement, I understand, is complied with by the dealers in ice, but there is a suspicion on the part of some people that some of the scales supplied by them are not in good condition, and do not give the correct weight, and this suspicion is [illegible] to be strengthened by the fact that in some other cities this has been found to be the case.

If the scales used by dealers in this city do not give the correct weight, that fact should be ascertained and proper action taken to protect the interests of the public; and, on the other hand, if the scales are correct, that fact should be ascertained, in order that these suspicions may be allayed. Please, therefore, proceed with all possible despatch and ascertain the exact facts and see that no incorrect scales are used hereafter.

CRONSTADT IS ISOLATED, HEAVY FIRING POINTS TO FRESH REVOLT BY SAILORS

mayed from lack of knowledge about four large warships. It is feared they have joined in a new mutiny and that the guns of the Cronstadt forts may again threaten the Peterhof and St. Petersburg.

There was a serious clash to-day between troops and strikers at Donetz, the centre of the mining district. Carrying red flags and singing the "Marseillaise," 6,000 men paraded the streets and gathered at the residence of the governor-general to demand the release of a number of orators who had been arrested. The attitude of the men, who were armed with clubs, became so threatening that troops were called and charged the mob with drawn sabres. More than a hundred of the strikers were seriously wounded and they were finally dispersed. Further riots are feared.

THIRTY KILLED BY BOMBS.

Thirty workmen were blown to pieces and a large number wounded to-day by the explosion of a bomb. They were holding a meeting and when told that a detachment of troops had been ordered to disperse them they prepared to receive them with bombs. In the hurry of the moment one of the bombs was ignited and blowing up detonated a number of others. This was a terrific explosion and many of those killed were literally blown to bits. None of the soldiers was injured. For a time there was tremendous excitement in the city and all sorts of rumors were in circulation.

CALL JEWS TO ARMS.

Bloodshed is looked for at Warsaw. All the Jews in the city have been asked to arm and appear in the streets ready to fight to the death at a preconcerted signal. The authorities have been warned and are conducting a house to house search for firearms. A large number of rifles and revolvers have been seized.

It is conservatively estimated to-night that more than 55,000 men are out on strike, but the response of the men has not been as prompt or as general as had been hoped. The railroad men in particular hesitate about going out. They declare that the time is not ripe for a strike on their part. The only ones to walk out thus far are the employes of the St. Petersburg line, who struck this evening.

The greater part of the street cars and river steamers have stopped running. Most of the streets of the capital are not lighted.

The strike is not expected to become general until Monday, because Saturday is pay day. There was some fighting to-day between troops and strikers in the suburb of Narva.

The lighter men at Odessa have gone on strike and the work of the port is tied up. There is general unrest in that city.

OUTBREAK AT SEVASTOPOL.

It is reported that there is an outbreak at Sevastopol similar to the one at Cronstadt. Two infantry battalions have been sent there from Odessa.

A bomb hurled in the Jasan railway station at Moscow late to-day resulted in the death of two persons. No particulars have been received here.

A delayed telegram from Libau says that a train on the Warsaw, between Libau and Hafenpot, was held up to-day and robbed of $40,000 in coin belonging to the government. There was a sharp fight between the train guards and passengers on one hand and the robbers on the other.

That the Czar is in terror at the present crisis is emphasized by reports that he is about to turn the government over to Grand Duke Nicholas, as military dictator. This step is opposed by Premier Stolypin, who fears that if martial law is declared the people will rise almost en masse against their rulers.

The fear of a land drenched in blood is voiced by the Novoe Vremya, the only unofficial paper published in this city. It called to-day upon all citizens to aid in preventing an expected reign of terror.

Desperate efforts are being made by officials to keep the railroad men at work. If the trains stop running it will be impossible to send troops to subdue uprisings in cities and districts where garrisons are overpowered.

CZAR PLANS TO CRUSH OUT REVOLUTION BY IRON HAND

St. Petersburg, Aug. 4.—The situation all over Russia is so ominous that the Czar believes that the only possibility of smothering the revolt which is smouldering in many districts and has broken out in others is by the use of such drastic methods that the populace will be terror stricken and driven into apathetic acceptance of the iron rule they wish to break.

The mutiny at Cronstadt showed that the navy is not to be relied upon and that the Czar's only hope to-day is the army. He is said to believe that his soldiers will defend him with their lives despite official reports which state that many regiments are honeycombed by revolutionary sentiment.

Masses Await Leader.

After the Czar drove the Duma out of St. Petersburg the radicals believed that the time had come to strike back, but so far the man of the hour has not appeared to direct the revolution. If the crisis develops a great leader of the people, millions of Russians who are now afraid to risk life and property in resistance to the autocracy as the situation stands will take courage and join in the revolt.

The revolutionary propaganda which has been going on for months has been successful in arousing the populace in all parts of Russia, but it has lacked time and money to thoroughly arm the people.

Mutiny Forces Fighting.

Leaders had planned to delay fighting until later in the year, when agrarian troubles would be likely to incite the peasantry to immediate resistance to tax collectors and all government officials because of immediate distress. But the mutinous feeling in the navy was too strong to be checked.

The Czar's sailors were sent forth to fight the Japanese in ships which should have been in dry dock, but which were unequipped owing to the grafting done by Russian officialdom, and the survivors of the fights at Port Arthur and in Japan Sea told stories which inflamed their present shipmates to blood madness.

The revolt at Cronstadt lacked leadership. It failed for that reason. But it sent a thrill of terror through the autocracy which will lead to fearful vengeance upon the mutineers as soon as the Czar and the Grand Dukes feel that a wholesale slaughter will be safe. They are debarred now from glutting their vengeance by the fear that it will still further inflame the Russian populace.

Disorder at Cronstadt.

Although it is reported here that the revolt at Cronstadt is over, that is not believed by those who have inside information. There is disorder in many parts of the city. Firing is almost constantly heard and there are warships in the surrounding waters which are reported to be in the hands of mutinous crews. From all accounts, official or otherwise, the sailors of the [illegible] Naval contingent which left their barracks and attacked the home of the port commander, the arsenal and Fort Constantine, acted upon momentary impulse, and the report of the outbreak was a surprise to revolutionary leaders here.

The fact that when the mutineers arrived at the latter stronghold a red flag was flying from its ramparts is thought to indicate that the revolt in Cronstadt, so far as it was directed at all, was the result of Nihilism. It is said that the mutineers did not surrender, although for hours under a terrific bombardment, until their ammunition was exhausted. Had not the attack upon the arsenal failed, the assault on the fort by the loyal forces of the Czar might not have prevailed.

Fought in Blind Rage.

While many sailors and soldiers doubtless acted in collusion during the revolt at Cronstadt and Sveaborg, there was no unanimity and no evidence that there was a directing hand behind it. The common sailors and soldiers fought in blind rage and apparently were reckless of life.

Although a number selected as ringleaders have already been shot, several thousand other prisoners show no fear of being put in line and killed in droves. The barracks at Reval, Cronstadt and Helsingfors are crowded by disarmed sailors, sappers and artillerymen who expect death, but will not ask for mercy.

In Sullen Black Despair.

The whole naval force of the Czar is oppressed by a mood of sullen, black despair. That is what has temporarily saved the lives of at least 2,000 prisoners. They expect to be slaughtered sooner or later. If the revolt which is expected to become general throughout the Empire fails to occur they expect to be killed at once with the bare formality of a drumhead court martial as the only delay.

Mutineers now imprisoned in the barracks say that they would have been able to hold Fort Constantine and all other points seized but for the explosion of the arsenal on Mikhael Island. The second disaster was their failure to capture the main island, where the food they expected to use while withstanding a siege was stored. Had the sailors on the warships, which turned their guns upon the fort after it was taken by the mutineers, joined the revolt, as the defenders believed they would do, the outbreak at Cronstadt would probably have been successful.

Red Guard Broken.

The Grand Dukes believe that the crushing of the mutiny has broken the power of the Red Guard, which is a strong secret organization with ramifications extending throughout the navy. The Reds had many of their number aboard the cruiser Pamyat Agona, who revolted and killed the captain, but when several boat loads of them went ashore to parley with comrades sailors on the warship who had not joined the revolt drove the mutineers aboard into the forecastle, converting the place into shambles in the slaughter which followed.

News travels slowly among the Russian people and it will be days before the story of the Baltic mutiny is told in all the provinces. It is expected by revolutionists that it will add fuel to the flame which is threatening to sweep the Czar's entire dominion.

The great strike, which is eminent, is regarded by the Grand Dukes as even more serious than the revolt in the navy. All the labor leaders are being watched by the secret police and wholesale arrests may come at any moment.

Intimidate Strikers.

The Russian officials are trying to intimidate organized labor by this move and by posting great bodies of Cossacks around buildings where strikes are threatened and in the quarters inhabitated by working men.

The barricading of stores and houses here by merchants and citizens is significant of the feeling that there will be bloody fighting in St. Petersburg streets next week. The government is doing its utmost to garrison arsenals, cartridge and small arm factories so thoroughly that they cannot be captured by revolutionists.

Heavy reinforcements have been poured into Sestorvetzk for fear that the guns stored there may be seized. Telephone and telegraph wires and stations are being guarded with the utmost vigilance. The government dreads having communication cut off from districts where uprisings are threatened.

Mobilize All Troops.

All through the Empire troops have been mobilized at points which will enable them to be sent quickly by rail to any point in the territory to which assigned. If Russia were at war with a first class European power, no more careful campaign plans for defence could have been made. But the sullenness of the troops is a daunting sign to the officers entrusted with the task of keeping Czar Nicholas on the throne. They are fearful that the soldiers may at any moment follow the example of the Baltic mutineers and turn their guns upon their commanders.

Miners Attack at Donetz.

Reports of small uprisings in different parts of the country are continually reaching St. Petersburg. Six thousand riotous and striking miners at Donetz attacked the residence of General Hartung and demanded the release of leaders who were arrested because they urged all miners throughout the district to stop work. Troops charged the strikers and cut down scores. The prisons are crowded with other strikers.

As an answer to this governmental outrage the 25,000 strikers throughout the district formed a regiment armed with rifles and a bloody battle between it and the soldiers is expected within a few hours.

It is believed that the Stolypin cabinet will be dissolved within a few days and a virtual dictatorship established by making Grand Duke Nicholas, the uncle of the Czar, commander-in-chief of the entire army.

Grand Duke Dictator.

He is the man who has advised the Czar to crush all signs of revolt by fire and sword and is said to be the most reactionary and cruel of all the ruler's relatives. The cowardice of the Czar is said to have led him to virtually shift his power to the Grand Dukes and to be willing to have the empire reigned by martial law.

Premier Stolypin is understood to regard such a step as sure to provoke a bloody struggle between the people and the authorities everywhere and his resignation is expected if Grand Duke Nicholas is given supreme power.

CONCRETE EXPERTS SAY FOUNDATIONS ARE ALL RIGHT.

Substitution That Made $1,376 for Contractors Authorized by Commission According to Report Made to the Mayor

The Schoolhouse Commissioners say they have investigated the Normal and Girls' Latin schoolhouse foundations, and that they are all right despite the evidence presented by District Attorney John B. Moran "reflecting on the honesty of the work done by the George W. Carr Company."

District Attorney Moran made the charge to the Mayor that the full amount of cement called for by the specifications had not been used in making the concrete, and that the foundations were unsafe.

Commissioners R. Clipston Sturgis, Charles Logue and Thomas A. Mullen inform the Mayor that the architects have investigated and report that the cement is all right and that three engineers have also looked into the matter and pronounce the foundations safe.

Substitution Authorized.

In regard to the District Attorney's charge that the contractors have saved $1,376 by substituting Roxbury pudding stone for trap rock the Commissioners say the substitution was authorized by the board acting upon the advice of the architects.

"Under these circumstances," say the commissioners, "we feel that we can assure your honor that the concrete construction has been thoroughly well executed in accordance with the terms of the contract and specifications and is in every respect a proper and adequate foundation."

Engineers Approve.

The report of Engineers J. R. Worcester, George F. Swain and Sanford E. Thompson is appended to the opinion of the commissioners. The engineers say:

"We are satisfied that the foundations are amply sufficient to carry the loads which are to be placed upon them."

The architectural firms of Peabody & Stearns, Maginnis, Walsh & Sullivan and Coolidge & Carlson report to the Mayor:

"As far as we know nothing has been done in the work which was not according to contract and to our instructions."

Professor A. W. French, of the Worcester Polytechnic Institute, was employed by the Carr company to report on the composition of the concrete work. He says that the concrete work is thorough and honest and the variation too small to amount to anything.

According to a statement given out in his office last night, Mayor Fitzgerald thinks that these reports dispose of District Attorney Moran's charges. The Mayor indorses the Schoolhouse Commission and says he can see no necessity for further action on his part.

MILLIONAIRE IS KILLED IN A RUNAWAY.

NURSE AND CHILD ARE SERIOUSLY INJURED

BAR HARBOR, Aug. 4.—Edward Coles, a millionaire broker of Philadelphia, was instantly killed in a runaway accident on Main street to-day. His two-year-old grandchild and a nurse were seriously injured.

Mr. Coles was endeavoring to turn the team of spirited horses while waiting for his wife, who was shopping. The horses jumped and broke the whiffletree, letting the pole down on their heels. Both bolted, and after a dash down the street collided with a telephone pole. Mr. Coles was dashed against the pole and his life was crushed out.

Wife Prostrated by Shock.

The child and nurse were hurled into the street and were picked up dazed by the force of the collision. It is not thought that they will suffer any permanent injuries.

Mrs. Coles is prostrated by the tragic death of her husband.

Mr. Coles made his Summer home at the "Aldesea" for the last twenty-five years.

He is survived by a widow and two daughters.

When the horses started on their mad flight a druggist, Fred Chandler, followed on his bicycle. He was on the scene of the fatal accident almost as soon as it happened. He assisted in ministering to the aid of the nurse and the child, after a hasty examination revealed that Mr. Coles was dead.

Nurse Saves Child.

Only the fact that the nurse held the child close to her bosom saved it from death.

The horses continued to run for a half mile, when they crashed into an express team and both were badly cut.

The entire colony of Summer visitors at Bar Harbor are stunned by the sad accident, for Mr. Coles was a general favorite. Telegrams of condolence are pouring in to the family of the dead man.

CATARRH OF THE INTERNAL ORGANS OFTEN THE WORST FORM OF CATARRH

Miss Helen Spencer, of St. Louis, Was Afflicted For Years With Catarrh of the Liver. Pe-ru-na Brought Relief.

MISS HELEN SPENCER.

Miss Helen Spencer, 3924 Cook Ave., St. Louis, Mo., writes:

"I gladly recommend Peruna to all those who are troubled with catarrh of the liver. That was my trouble for years and I know all about it. I was tired, despondent, had a bad taste in my mouth in the morning and felt generally used up nearly all the time. I took Peruna because I had taken about everything else and felt so badly that it seemed imperative that I should still keep on taking.

"I am like a new person and feel perfectly well and happy. I never saw anything work like your valuable Peruna and it is a pleasure to recommend it to others."

Catarrh of the liver is a new phrase to many people. Many will say, "I never heard of catarrh of the liver," but the very people who say this may be afflicted with the disease.

A catarrhal condition of the stomach may spread to the duodenum and then continue through the large bile ducts into the liver.

This partly obstructs the bile ducts and produces sluggishness of the liver.

Sometimes the ducts are so obstructed as to produce a stoppage of the bile, in which case the bile is thickened and forms into concretions called gall stones. Bilious colic is the result.

Most cases of bilious colic depend upon catarrh of the liver. For this condition purgatives are generally used. These give temporary relief, but do not cure.

The correct thing to do is to remove the catarrh. Then the liver rights itself.

If, after taking one bottle, relief is experienced, it should be followed by a thorough course of Peruna until complete relief is obtained.

YOUNG MAN ACCUSED OF TRESPASS BY WOMAN ESCAPES POLICE AT JAIL DOOR

All Trace Lost of Arthur H. Cole, Dorchester Youth, Who, Handsome Mrs. Oppenheimer Asserts, Made Life Miserable for Her by His Constant Annoyances.

UNSIGNED LETTERS WRITTEN HIM ARE FULL OF "LOVE AND KISSES"

Breaking away from the probation officer who had him in charge just as he arrived at the Charles street jail, to which he had been committed in default of $100 bail, Arthur H. Cole of Dorchester, charged with trespassing, disappeared and the police are still seeking him.

The charge of trespass was preferred by Edward I. Oppenheimer and the maximum penalty that could have been inflicted had Cole been convicted would have been a fine of not more than $[illegible].

The charge was made by Mr. Oppenheimer, who lives at No. [illegible] street, Dorchester, because, he alleges, Cole had annoyed Mrs. Oppenheimer. The latter is a stunning looking woman, about thirty, half the age of her husband.

Cole has not [illegible] home at No. 10 Harold street [illegible] among his effects there were found a number of unsigned letters, written by some woman, with whom Cole evidently was carrying on a desperate love affair.

"Cautioned Him to Remain Away."

Mrs. Edward I. Oppenheimer said to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter at her home yesterday:

"I have only known this fellow Cole since last Summer, and once I supposed him to be a gentleman. After hearing a great many things concerning him, I cautioned on the telephone and used [illegible] words of insulting language to me, and said that he was coming that night. I told him that I would notify the police to guard my house and that if he did come up I would have him arrested. I did not see him after that until this morning in court. I am afraid almost to death of him. I don't dare go out at night for fear he will do me some harm.

"When my husband came home Wednesday morning I told him the whole story and he had Cole arrested."

Cole was arrested down town by patrolmen of the Dorchester police station. He was taken back to Dorchester and arraigned yesterday in the Dorchester court. In default of bail he was started for Charles street jail in charge of Probation Officer Alvah Phillips. They rode in a carriage driven by John Mitchell.

At the jail entrance the two men got out of the carriage. Cole wrenched his arm from Phillips' grasp and ran up Fruit street. Phillips, who is an elderly man, pursued him as far as North Anderson street, where he lost sight of him.

Say Arrest Due to Trap.

The case has aroused great interest in Dorchester, where both Cole and the Oppenheimers are well known. Cole's arrest is alleged to have been due to a trap set for him by Mrs. Oppenheimer. She is said to have telephoned him to meet her, and when he kept the appointment he was placed under arrest.

him to remain away from our house. My husband also has said on several occasions that he did not want him around the house, but he persisted in annoying me until my husband refused to stand it any longer.

"Last Monday night at about 9 o'clock my telephone rang. Cole was at the other end, and asked me if my husband had gone to New York. He said if he had he would come out. I told him not to dare to come to my house and that if my husband was at home, or wasn't, it would be just the same.

"He left the telephone then and went to the garage where we keep our machine, to try to find out whether my husband had gone. About 10 o'clock he was at my front door, ringing the bell and trying to get in. I would not open the door nor answer the ring. He stayed there fully three-quarters of an hour, ringing my bell, and I was scared to death. He shouted through the door: 'If you don't open the door I'll break it down!' I did not sleep a wink all night, I was so frightened.

"Tuesday morning he called up again

Mrs. Oppenheimer at once drove to the Dorchester station where her husband arrived a few minutes later. Husband and wife held a long conference with Captain Hunt, the object of which is said to have been to decide whether or not to place a more serious charge against Cole. It was finally decided to accuse him of trespass.

Mr. Oppenheimer is a tailor, having places of business in Boston and New York. He usually goes to the latter city each week, leaving Monday and returning Wednesday. He declared yesterday that his wife had complained before of being annoyed by Cole, but that she had taken no action because she dreaded the publicity.

"But," said Mr. Oppenheimer, "when I came back from New York last Wednesday my wife told me that Cole had been at the house, had been refused admittance and had threatened to smash things. He hung around until midnight. I decided to have him arrested and my wife agreed."

Took No Notice of Cole.

Mr. Oppenheimer swore out the warrant Thursday. When the case came up in court yesterday Cole appeared cool and confident. He is a good-looking young fellow, twenty-four years old, and in court was dressed in a dark suit, straw hat and patent leather shoes.

Mr. and Mrs. Oppenheimer and Mrs. Nora Simpkins, a friend, arrived at the court house in a large touring car. Mrs. Oppenheimer wore a dark, tailor-made suit which fitted her fine figure to perfection. She and Mrs. Simpkins swept into the courtroom followed by Mr. Oppenheimer and none of them took the least notice of Cole.

When the case was called Cole asked for a continuance and it was granted despite Mr. Oppenheimer's objection. The whole matter did not occupy two minutes. Cole was held in $100 and ordered remanded to jail in default. It is understood that at the time he escaped his mother was on her way to the jail to furnish bail for him.

After the hearing Cole said the whole affair was due to spite.

"Always a Welcome Guest."

"Why, I have been going to their home for two years, and have always been a welcome guest," he said. "I have eaten, drank and slept at the house. I won't be made a blackguard of, and will see the thing through to a finish."

A sister of young Cole said that when she read the papers this morning telling of her brother's arrest on a charge by Mr. Oppenheimer she immediately went to the telephone and called up Mrs. Oppenheimer. She said she did this because she had often heard her brother talking to her over the phone and imagined that she would know of the trouble.

"Mrs. Oppenheimer said she did not care to talk to me because she did not know me," said Miss Cole, "but when I pressed her for the reason of the arrest she finally said that Monday night Arthur came to the house and insisted upon coming in. Mr. Oppenheimer was there at the time. When refused admittance he made a terrible racket and things were said.

"I know that Arthur had gone there many times before to see Mrs. Oppenheimer and that they were good friends and had often gone riding in autos and carriages.

"I am sorry Arthur ran away, but I am sure he will be in court Monday."

The letters found among Cole's effects, although [illegible], are rather interesting. [illegible] three of them, the first [illegible]:

Friday Morning.

Dear Arthur:

Of [illegible] heartless men in the world I think you are the worst. My God! I would [illegible] to show what you are [illegible] [illegible]. I [illegible] like [illegible] [illegible] either I was to [illegible]. I had never [illegible] you for [illegible] between [illegible]. Oh, it is [illegible]. I don't know what [illegible] I am getting so [illegible] and I will end it all for I can't stand it.

I haven't closed my eyes for two nights and have cried all the time. I'd think [illegible]. Well, I am in a way [illegible] I am heartsick. You can [illegible] pick at me [illegible] we are alone, and your continual cry is that you have other girls and are going with them. Well, it breaks my heart, but I say I don't care. When I left you last night I thought I would drop through the floor, but you know how stubborn I am and you are too. We are alike in that respect. I can't help acting as I do when I am with I'd, for it is my bread and butter and you know it, so I don't see why it should make you sore. If you care for me why don't you try and use me a little bit better, not try to quarrel all the time. Anybody I care for I couldn't quarrel all the time. Why, it breaks my heart when you talk as you do, and what's more, I think I have proved

"Could Have a Good Cry."

The second letter, which is complete, follows:

Thursday, 2 P. M.

Dear Arthur: Oh I'm good and mad. You're a fool.

I waited at the Adams House until 12.30 and you didn't show up and so I came home. It's just [illegible] enough for you not to be on time.

And then I came [illegible] and the telephone was out of order, and [illegible] I tried to get a car up to the [illegible] and of course none came [illegible]. I had to walk and when I did get [illegible] the horse's legs were so [illegible] that I couldn't take her out.

Now what do you think of that for a day of disappointments?

Oh, I could just sit down and have a good cry, only it would make my nose all red and I don't want to spoil my (beauty). Now you don't need to laugh.

Oh, if I had you here now I would give you such a hammering, so there.

Say, I'll tell you a fine scheme. If you ever want to drop me a line address it to Sophia and nobody will ever [illegible].

Hurrah! Somebody is going to N. Y. next week.

If the phone is all right telephone me in the morning, because if you don't call me early I may be gone down town. Good-bye.

x x x x x These are not kisses, so there.

"Love and Kisses."

The third, written on hotel paper, follows:

My Dear Arthur:

I have just received your letter and I [illegible] won't get mine if you are [illegible]. I went down to the P. O. [illegible] day and there was a letter [illegible] yesterday [illegible] a holiday [illegible] I couldn't [illegible] any.

Of course [illegible] you supposed anything [illegible] for I [illegible] how [illegible] you had gone [illegible] you are such a flirt.

Never [illegible] dear you are a darling sweetheart [illegible] you don't know how happy I [illegible] if it was like last Summer [illegible] afraid it will never [illegible]. All [illegible] can do is to live in hopes.

You [illegible] I [illegible] cold and heartless, but if [illegible] knew my feelings! People [illegible] something awful, but it don't [illegible] bit of difference to me.

I [illegible] of yours Wednesday and [illegible] "Say, why don't you keep away from that fellow?" I told him that was my business. It was a particular friend, so you think.

I am writing this in a hurry, so excuse the writing. Hope I will see you soon, and I hope you will be a good boy. Love and kisses.

I mean it [illegible].

Think He Will Be In Court.

Probation Officer Phillips, from whom Cole escaped, agrees with Cole's sister in the belief that the young man will be in court Monday.

"I don't think the lad will stay away," he said. "He was only frightened at the prospect of spending Sunday in a cell, and ran on the impulse of the moment. If I'd been as spry as I was some years ago, he would never have got away. But I had no idea that he would try and I think he was foolish, as the most he would have got would have been a small fine. Why, it was owing to the triviality of the charge against him that I took no more precautions than I did.

"I had him in a closed carriage, and as I opened the door at the jail entrance, he started to run up Fruit street. The crowd [illegible] pleased and took no hand [illegible] it was up to me, and I was within thirty feet of him as he dodged in a doorway on Anderson street and vanished."

Phillips seemed rather hurt at the escape, as Cole is the first prisoner who has managed to get away from him in his twenty-six years experience.

Dear Sir:

"Ever since I was in the Army, I had more or less kidney trouble, and within the past year it became so severe and complicated that I suffered everything and was much alarmed—my strength and power was fast leaving me. I saw an advertisement of Swamp-Root and wrote asking for advice. I began the use of the medicine and noted a decided improvement after taking Swamp-Root only a short time.

I continued its use and am thankful to say that I am entirely cured and strong. In order to be very sure about this, I had a doctor examine some of my water to-day and he pronounced it all right and in splendid condition.

I know that your Swamp-Root is purely vegetable and does not contain any harmful drugs. Thanking you for my complete recovery and recommending Swamp-Root to all sufferers, I am,"

Society Asks, Will Harold Vanderbilt WIN ELEANORA SEARS?

Eyes of Society Now on Miss Eleanora Sears, Boston Girl in Whom Harold Vanderbilt Is Displaying Marked Interest.

TWO REMARKABLE SNAPSHOTS OF YOUNG SOCIETY FAVORITE, TAKEN AT LENOX TENNIS TOURNEY

Society Girl Who Is Expected to Take Essex Tennis Honors Much in the Eye of Young Millionaire.

Not since her return from Europe has Eleanora Sears had such an opportunity to display her prowess in the Summer sports as she will have at the tennis tournament at the Essex Country Club, which begins to-morrow. She has been in training for some time and her Boston friends expect her to carry off the laurels.

Henry S. [illegible] of Beacon street is chairman of the committee and reports a large number of entries from the Montserrat, Myopia and [illegible] clubs. Among other society girls entered who are expected to make things interesting for Miss Sears are [illegible] Margaret and Helen Thomas, Miss [illegible] Jordan, Miss Steven Mitchell, the fiancée of Quincy A. Shaw 2d, and Mrs. [illegible] 2d.

Miss Sears, who is with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Sears, Jr., at their [illegible] Beverly Farms, is at present the object of more than usual interest, due to the attention paid her by Harold Vanderbilt, who is spending a few weeks at Beverly Farms as the guest of Harold Tweed. They are so much in one another's company that predictions have already been whispered as to the probable outcome of the friendship.

Later developments during her stay at Newport, where she goes soon to visit friends, are awaited with interest and as one Newport matron facetiously predicts, "she will give the fair Violet Cruger a run for her money."

VEILED THREAT BY QUINCY AGAINST MORAN

Chairman Joseph Quincy of the Democratic State Committee yesterday sent to the newspapers a long statement of his political attitude since 1884. He says he favors the nomination of William J. Bryan for President and that Bryan's candidacy will soon receive official endorsement of the State and local Democratic committees.

Chairman Quincy says he does not think President Roosevelt will run again, and that no other Republican candidate could beat Bryan. He insists that he has been a consistent Democrat since 1884, that he did not bolt Bryan in 1896, but took no part in the Presidential campaign of that year; that he returned from Europe in October of 1900 and made speeches for Bryan in New York and Boston.

He explains that he had grown fonder of Bryan in 1900 than he was in 1896 because at the later period Bryan was stronger on anti-imperialism than he was on free silver. Quincy makes a veiled reference to the candidacy of John B. Moran for the Democratic nomination for Governor by saying:

"When candidacies which in any event are to be carried to the polls are combined with efforts to secure a regular party nomination the very foundation of political organization is set at naught."

And he adds that such candidacies generally go down to [illegible] defeat.

NO IMMUNITY BATH FOR AUTOISTS IN CHELSEA COURT.

Judge Bosson in the Chelsea Police Court yesterday refused to administer the "immunity bath" for speeding autoists on the ground that in giving information to police men they render themselves immune from punishment for violation of the speed laws.

He fined Hugh Bradford, a chauffeur, of No. 25 Winchester street, Brookline, $20, the maximum penalty, though his counsel, Professor J. F. Keene of Boston University, pleaded that the ruling made by Judge Berry in the Lynn Police Court should be followed and Bradford released.

"I can't see it as Judge Berry did," said Judge Bosson. "If this rule is followed every autoist must be placed in a cell, thus inconveniencing owners of automobiles as well as the police."

MARY HOOPER BRIDE OF ROGER S. WARNER.

Boston Lawyer Weds Society Belle at St. John's Church in Beverly Farms Before Audience of Summer Colonists

At St. John's Episcopal Church, Beverly Farms, yesterday afternoon, Miss Mary Hooper, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Hooper, was united in marriage to Roger S. Warner, a Boston lawyer and a Harvard graduate. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Prescott [illegible] of Christ Church, Cambridge, a relative of the groom, assisted by the [illegible] Huntington, rector of St. John's [illegible] the Farms.

The bride was gowned [illegible] and carried [illegible] roses. There were [illegible] nor maid of honor. The best man was Wells Farley of Boston. [illegible] given away by Dr. W. [illegible] of Boston.

There were only a few of the immediate relatives and friends at the church, where the Episcopal service was used, and the wedding was a very quiet one.

The ushers were James Wood of Cambridge, H. D. Chapin, T. K. Lothrop, Jr., F. J. Perkins, J. F. Curtis, [illegible] Donald, Charles Jackson and [illegible] Riggs, all of Boston and Cambridge.

After the wedding a reception was held at the home of the bride's sisters, the Misses Hooper, on Juniper street, at the Farms. The house was prettily decorated and a number of North Shore people were present to extend greetings.

Mr. and Mrs. Warner will [illegible] honeymoon in [illegible] and on their return will reside in Boston.

ROADS BACK DOWN ON NEW ENGLAND RATES ON OIL.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 4.—Herbert Knox Smith, assistant to Chief Garfield, of the National Bureau of Corporations, declares that the New York, New Haven & Hartford and the Boston & Maine Railroads, the two greatest systems in New England, were found guilty of favoring the Standard Oil but that both railroad lines have now promised to give the independent oil companies equal rates.

Secret Rate Wall.

Under this secret rate, enjoyed by no one but the Standard Oil Company, that company has been shipping over 200,000,000 pounds of oil a year to St. Louis and the Southwest, gaining thereby an advantage over its competitors which is almost incalculable, and yet when that rate was discovered by our agents in the auditing offices of the railroads which participated therein the rate was cancelled.

"For many years the two great systems that control this New England section, the Boston & Maine and the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroads, have built a stone wall around New England on the land side, so that no refineries from the interior, from Pennsylvania, or Ohio, could ship oil with advantage to New England. The only concerns that could ship to advantage were those which had tide water refineries and could land their oil by water on the New England coast, with low rates from the coast inland. The only interests that had tide water refineries of any importance were those of the Standard Oil Company.

Open to Competition.

"Two or three months ago, when the bureau discovered and published this situation, the New York, New Haven & Hartford company broke down this rate wall, and three days before I left Washington I was informed that the Boston & Maine had done the same. Now independent refineries from Pennsylvania and Ohio can ship in New England in reasonable competition with the Standard."

WILLARD WHITE CO.

Dear Sirs: I am writing this to let you know how much I appreciate what your tablets and cream have done for me. Last Summer I had to wear high neck and long sleeve gowns, whereas this Summer I feel proud of my plump neck and arms. I use the cream I rub my hands and arms with every night, as well as face and bust. I can hardly believe I am the same person. My toilet table would be incomplete without both. I have recommended same to my friends. They are using it faithfully and think it as wonderful as I do. My husband is delighted with the change in my form. He states I look so much more stylish in the most simple of gowns. My skin is so soft and white, whereas it used to be rather yellow and hard. No one could hire me to use any other kind of cream or tablets. I belong to a club which is called "Sans-Pareil," which means we have no equal, so I have placed your articles in that same class. I consider them exceptional and far superior to any other. Hoping this will help others, I remain, a well wisher, MRS. GEO. RUNKEL.

Having Passed Allotted Span of Years, Samuel C. Norcutt of Berkley Seeks Separation from His Third Wife

Berkley, Aug. 4.—After having lived for seventy three years, Samuel Burchall Norcutt, married for the third time three years ago, has just made the discovery that wedded bliss is not what its claimed to be and to that end he is suing for a divorce from his wife, Margaret.

He says that he is thoroughly undeceived at last and that as for him, he will abide alone for the rest of his days. He accuses his wife of not conducting herself with proper dignity, and of [illegible] money and household furniture from the home.

Mrs. Norcutt is not to be [illegible] a martyr of [illegible]. So soon as she learned of her husband's suit for separation she hurried to Taunton and secured a lawyer to bring a counter suit in which she alleges that her aged spouse drinks and has treated her cruelly. ## QUICKSAND UNDER BUILDING SENT 13 TO DEATH.

Investigators Into Cause of South Framingham Block's Collapse Find Foundation Laid on Treacherous Ground

South Framingham, Aug. 4.—That quicksand and water extended under the foundation of the George M. Amsden building which collapsed on Tuesday afternoon, July 24, resulting in the death of thirteen men and in the injury of several others, an investigation, which was conducted by a special committee appointed by the town, disclosed yesterday.

It was found that the foundations of the building which was being rushed to completion at an unusually rapid rate, were laid over a bedding composed largely of quicksand, and in which much water was found. Town Engineer Van Valkenburg is outspoken in his belief that this underlying strata gave way under the tremendous weight of the heavy building, and caused its collapse.

A steel pole was forced with comparative ease through the earth at the foundation of the building, and when withdrawn, the presence of quicksand and water was readily discerned.

DEALER OUT OF BUSINESS BY ICE TRUST.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY IS ASKED TO TAKE ACTION

Worcester, Aug. 4.—One independent ice dealer [illegible] out of business by the ice trust.

Asa G. Brown has been unable to secure ice to supply his customers for the past five days. He declares that all his sources of [illegible] the trust because he [illegible] to conform to its prices.

[illegible] to Mr. Brown's testimony, given before the investigating committee to-day, [illegible] was warned by Major Lewis G. White [illegible] of the Walker Ice Company [illegible] would be driven out of business. Major White has made good, Mr. Brown declares.

When the committee met to-night two of its members, Mayor Duggan and John R. Thayer, acting city solicitor, were in attendance. [illegible] District Attorney [illegible] was absent. Mr. Brown was called to the stand and said:

"Ice Supply Cut Off."

"I have been unable to supply my customers for [illegible] days [illegible]. All my sources of supply have been cut off.

"It is only natural for me to suppose that this is [illegible] twice by Major Lewis G. White that if I did not sell out or charge the price charged by [illegible] be driven out of business.

"A year ago Major White offered to buy me out [illegible] would be driven out of business.

"This year he again offered to buy my business [illegible]. He asked me why I [illegible] less than the other companies [illegible] the Walker, and the [illegible] charge [illegible] I laughed and [illegible] I told him I thought I [illegible] my own business.

[illegible] forced to drive me out of business and I guess he has done it for the time being. I understand that all the sources from which [illegible] have obtained ice formerly [illegible] by the interests represented by Mr. White and I can not buy any."

When questioned about the cost of ice to the companies Mr. Brown said:

Tells Cost of Ice.

"If I buy my ice in Maine it costs me $1.75 a ton. To cut and house it about this city costs me 75 cents a ton. The other companies were able to do it for 30 cents a ton.

"A new corporation has been formed here, however, to manufacture ice. It is independent [illegible] on August 15. If possible I shall buy ice of this concern and resume business."

At the close of to-night's hearing it was announced that the committee would turn over its evidence to the District Attorney and request that he act upon it.

At the session of the committee this forenoon [illegible] manufacturer [illegible] testified [illegible] Walker Ice Company [illegible] in 1905 the managers of the People's Ice Company, Isaac D. Acton and Fred F. Townsend, [illegible] told her, while she was trying to get ice from them, that they had an agreement with the Walker Ice Company which they could not break. Her trouble with the Walker company, she said, was the breakage of a [illegible] for which the company refused to pay, and she accordingly refused to pay a bill of $1.90 when the company presented [illegible].

Louis H. Mott, a restaurant keeper at No. 54 [illegible] street, testified that he bought [illegible] worth of ice from a driver for the Walker Ice Company and upon seeing it said that he thought it was short weight. The driver threw the piece back in his cart and drove on. Later Mr. Mott tried to get fifty pounds of the Walker Ice Company and was refused on the ground that the driver had gone to sell [illegible] was a short [illegible] Mr. Mott sent Joseph [illegible] to ask for fifty pounds of ice, which [illegible].

[illegible] to Mott's restaurant to [illegible] with which to pay the bill and when the driver saw where he was going he threw the ice back in the cart and drove on.

[illegible] was given by Andrew Bell, [illegible] a ton and a half of ice [illegible] had been refused ice by the Walker [illegible] the largest in the [illegible] Company, the second largest in the city, because he was getting [illegible] weight.

DENIES MORAN BOOM IN WARD 12 OUTING

Superintendent of Streets James H. Doyle denied to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter yesterday that the [illegible] Quincy next Sunday [illegible] Active Concord Club [illegible] for District Attorney John B. Moran. Politicians had an idea [illegible] because Assistant District Attorney [illegible] as the principal speaker. Mr. Doyle said: "[illegible] Mr. Moran is very strong in Ward Twelve [illegible] of our club is not to be [illegible]. When it comes [illegible] from [illegible] of mine."

PARTY TO-DAY IN OLD CITY OF COLOGNE

Historic England and Quaint Holland Vividly Described In Letters.

SEE NEW WONDERS DAILY

TEACHERS ON EUROPEAN TOUR.

Miss Helen M. Cogan is shown in the upper picture and Miss Annie L. Maguire in the other.

Twenty of the Boston and New England school teachers composing the BOSTON AMERICAN Shakespearean tourists will embark at Liverpool for the home voyage to Boston today. They are expected to arrive here on Tuesday, August 14, and a happier party of young women it would be hard to find in this country or abroad. They have seen old London, the world [illegible] churches, the tomb of William Shakespeare at Stratford-on-Avon and the famous and historic Warwick Castle.

In addition they have crossed and recrossed the English Channel, spending a [illegible] in Paris, the [illegible] of the world and the gayest city in Europe. The Shakespearean tourists have enjoyed every moment of their trip abroad from the time they steamed out of Boston harbor on July 12 on the White Star liner Republic. [illegible] they have enjoyed themselves is shown by the following letter by Miss Helen M. Cogan:

"Our ocean voyage was a delightful one. Two girls had a slight attack of seasickness, but only for a few days. The weather was rather warm, as the [illegible] took a Southerly course to avoid the icebergs. We met very fine people, including Hon. H. H. D. Peirce, minister to Norway.

"We arrived at Liverpool at 4 o'clock Saturday, and at London at 10 o'clock in the evening. We reached St. Ermin's Hotel at 11 o'clock. Sunday was our [illegible] and [illegible] of us spent it in [illegible] and resting at the hotel.

"Accompanied by a guide we all started in a London bus at 9 o'clock this morning, and did the city until 5 o'clock. We saw the interior of St. Paul's Cathedral, St. George's Hotel, the Tate Gallery, the Tower and the Wallace Collection.

"Everything is splendid. London is very interesting and every member in the party is grateful to the BOSTON AMERICAN for giving us this wonderful tour of old Europe."

Ten Teachers in Florence.

To-day the [illegible] of the grand tour are in beautiful Florence, Italy, and will remain there through to-morrow. They will visit the great art galleries, which are considered the finest in the world, and walk by miles of painting by famous artists, which decorate classic walls. Carriage rides are part of the itinerary for to-day and to-morrow, and they will see historic streets and picturesque environs of one of the cities which has done so much to make Italian history.

How this party has enjoyed itself is graphically told by Miss Annie L. Maguire in letters to the editor of the "Queen Quality" weekly. Two read as follows:

Miss Maguire's Letter.

"St. Ermin's Hotel, London, S. W.,
"Sunday, July 15, 1906.

"Here we are in 'dear old Lunnon.' And have I had a good time? Well, [illegible] could have been better. Our [illegible] was all one could wish, we had perfect weather and a jolly crowd. [illegible] Liverpool Friday at 1.30 p. m., where we were met by a guide.

"We took the train for Birmingham where we stopped for dinner, then went on to Stratford-on-Avon, [illegible] little spot. We visited Shakespeare's home, and that of Ann Hathaway, his wife. It all took me back to the sixteenth century. Later we went to Warwick Castle, which is simply beyond description.

"We saw many historical things which I have heard of for years, but I have never appreciated them until now. We arrived in London last night and are situated in a beautiful spot, very near Westminster. Thanks to my many friends I am having the time of my life. With love and greetings, I am Yours cordially,

"MISS MAGUIRE."

Letter From Holland.

Grand Hotel, "Royal," Scheveningen, Holland,
Monday, July 23, 1906.

"Just a few spare moments. We left Brussels this morning at 7 o'clock, after a stay of two days. Brussels is a very pretty city. Its buildings and parks are among the finest. We visited the Palace of Justice, where all the court rooms are. It is a massive building, containing 287 large rooms, fifty-four of which are court rooms.

"The other rooms are used as dwellings for the prominent lawyers of the city. This building is said to be the finest of its kind in the world. We also visited the Art Gallery where we saw the original portrait paintings of Rubens, Belgium's famous painter. We arrived in Belgium just in time for a large celebration, which made it much more interesting for us.

Visit to The Hague.

"Now let me go on to The Hague and this beautiful watering place, Scheveningen. We reached here about [illegible]. We were impressed with the flatness of the country; we rode for miles and miles and saw not even a small rise in the land. The land is irrigated by little ditches. Here and there we saw the famous windmills which are so characteristic of Holland. After a delicious dinner we drove about The Hague, visiting another art gallery where we saw the famous pictures of Rembrandt, Holland's world known artist. From here we went to the church in which Queen Wilhelmina was married. It is a very plain building. Almost any of our little churches at home is more imposing.

"Last but by no means least, we visited the famous Palace in the Woods, known [illegible] the building in which the Peace Conferences are held. It was at one time the summer home of the royal family. Now it is kept as a curiosity. Here are some of the most beautiful Chinese and Japanese furniture and hangings one can imagine, everything is hand made. We stood in the very room [illegible] Peace Conference was held [illegible].

"This evening we visited the beach, a few minutes walk from our hotel. It reminded me a great deal of Revere. There is a pier here, about one-quarter mile long, arched with electric lights. At the end [illegible] building, completely [illegible] it was simply dazzling. [illegible] fireworks also, and thousands of people. It reminded me of home, sweet home more than any place I have seen. Here, too, we saw the true Dutch peasants and fishermen, dressed in their country's costume.

"That of the women is the most attractive, long full skirts, tight fitting basques with short tight sleeves and low necks. Over this they wear the daintiest little white bonnets. I almost forgot, their clumsy wooden shoes which go clitter-clatter on the brick pavements. [illegible] sidewalks are paved in brick. We leave here early to-morrow morning.

"A. L. MAGUIRE."

On the Rhine Yesterday.

The teachers who form the European tour party spent the whole of yesterday sailing on the picturesque and castle-guarded Rhine and witnessed crags and battlements which have stood for ages and make it the most interesting stream on the Continent.

For grandeur and beauty it is said to be rivaled only by the Hudson in this country, and that lacks the aged ruins and the historical associations of centuries of warfare and cultivation which the German river possesses. To-day the European tour party is in the [illegible] German city of Cologne. To-morrow they will go by rail to Brussels [illegible] is second only to Paris in gayety and glitter.

THREATEN TO ABOLISH GOVERNOR'S COUNCIL

Indignant over the action of the Executive Council in [illegible] without [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] known as the Lord's Day [illegible] has sworn vengeance. They are [illegible] now to put the Governor's cabinet out of business.

Incidentally the startling case of "cold feet" developed by Speaker John [illegible] when before the Council [illegible] on to the Sunday observance investigators. They say he should have shown more faith in the committee and should have insisted that the Council suspend judgment on the case worked up in the [illegible] relative to the conduct of the committee at Coney Island until the members could have a chance to be heard.

What makes the action of the Executive Council all the more galling to the committee is the fact that Governor Guild knew all about the trip to Coney and approved of the idea of going there and seeing how the great amusement places are conducted. Therefore, the committee now claim, the trip was not a junket, but a tour of enlightenment, with the indorsement of the head of the Executive Council.

At the last session of the Legislature Senator Silas D. Reed of Taunton proposed a constitutional amendment for the abolishment of the Council. It did pretty well for a short time, but when the Councillors got busy with the "conservative element" it met an untimely death. (Explanation—By the "conservative element" is meant that majority of the Senate which could [illegible] upon to [illegible] and [illegible] tion.)

[illegible] Senator Reed [illegible] back to the Senate he will offer the same bill for [illegible] away with the Executive Council. Senator Reed says the Council is simply a [illegible] of the Sunday laws committee thoroughly agree with him.

Why the meanest criminal in the [illegible] is accorded the right to be heard and to face his accusers before he is [illegible] and sentenced, but the Governor's [illegible] and acted on [illegible] asking us what we had to say [illegible] declares [illegible] McManus of Natick. "[illegible] true and final the stories of the New York papers, they did insult to [illegible] has been done us. This [illegible] put up to the Governor and to the Councillors for an explanation. When an Executive Council is [illegible] that it will accept [illegible] stories made up out of [illegible] and insult an innocent [illegible] committee it is time the Council was [illegible]."

Letters have been quietly sent around to members of the Legislature supposed to have good chances of reelection and to be unfriendly to Speaker [illegible] them to attend a conference in the near future and consider the organization of the next House on new lines.

While many are friendly to the idea no one seems willing to head the movement. The Speaker's failure to "make good" for the Sunday committee with the Executive Council has added fuel to the already smouldering feeling against him.

MACHINE HASN'T YET FOUND OPPONENT FOR MORAN.

Ex-Governor Douglas Practically Eliminated, and Other "Possibilities" Do Not Show Any Inclination to Stand

The Democratic machine has yet to find an available ticket [illegible] District Attorney John B. Moran in the Democratic State convention. The so-called "leaders," in their preliminary canvass of Massachusetts, have found Mr. Moran very strong in every section of the Commonwealth. The [illegible] organized effort in the cities and towns in his behalf will give him the nomination for Governor by an overwhelming majority. The rank and file of Democrats throughout the State are [illegible] over the idea of having for [illegible] the man who is not [illegible] of leaders of wealth [illegible].

Former Governor William L. Douglas has practically been eliminated from the list of possibilities. He does not accept with favor suggestions that he make a convention fight against Mr. Moran. The promise, if he will [illegible] fight, to send the Massachusetts [illegible] to the next national convention pledged to his support for the vice-presidential nomination has failed to win [illegible].

Schofield for Congress?

Senator George A. Schofield, of Ipswich, is another prominent Democrat who does not take kindly to the idea of being a sacrifice in the convention. His strength in Essex county is such that his friends believe he has a [illegible] chance of being elected to Congress, and that he would surely beat "Jim" Shaw in a campaign for re-election to the Senate. As a candidate against Mr. Moran, some of the "leaders" think the [illegible] Henry M. Whitney into the field, or that General Bartlett might be induced to become a candidate again.

The Republican State machine thinks that the ticket for its side will again be Guild and Draper [illegible].

Eugene N. Foss thinks there can be success for the Republican party this Fall only in the combination of Guild and Foss. Judge Henry S. Dewey says Governor Guild is a "dead one" and he thinks that the salvation of the Republican party in the State lies in the nomination of a Dewey and Draper ticket. The Judge does not say so in so many words, but he insinuates along that line. He does say Moran can beat Guild; that Draper is all right for the second place on the Republican ticket and that he would not take the second place on the ticket himself, and he refuses to say that he would not take the nomination for Governor.

Seiberlich and Lane.

Senator Frank Seiberlich says if Foss should decide to withdraw from the fight for Lieutenant Governor and go into the fight for the nomination for Congress in the Eleventh District he, Seiberlich, would get out of the way. Senator Daniel W. Lane says he would stay in just the same. Seiberlich believes that Foss will ultimately shift his plans and make another fight for Congress. He says he hasn't money enough to buck Foss in the district.

If the Eleventh District fight is confined to Seiberlich and Lane, the former will attack the latter on his record on corporation measures and will flood the district with literature on his work and Lane's attitude on the overtime bill.

TAYLOR MAY ENTER RACE AGAINST KELIHER.

Congressman from the Ninth District Looks with Anxious Forebodings on Washington Longings of State Senator.

Although the idea has prevailed that Congressman John A. Keliher would have no fight on his hands for re-nomination in the Ninth District, there is talk there by the friends of Senator William Taylor of putting him into the race.

Senator Taylor has not announced his position but it is believed by some politicians that he might be induced to contest with Mr. Keliher for the nomination if there developed much sentiment in the district in his behalf.

Victim of Gerrymander.

The last Legislature gerrymandered him into a new senatorial district where candidates abound. Senator James J. Mellen of Charlestown is in it and wants to go back. Arthur Dolan, former president of the Common Council, is ambitious for the senatorial seat and will be in the fight. The man that wins the nomination will have to be speedy and the fight for Congress for Senator Taylor would be no whit more strenuous.

McNary Is Alert.

When it's time to file nomination [illegible] Congressman McNary's friends say, he will announce that he is a candidate for Congress again in the Tenth District. In the meantime he will keep posted on the work that is being done for Senator Edward [illegible] and Joseph F. O'Connell, his rivals. Joseph Lundy says he will formally announce his candidacy for the Republican nomination in the Tenth in a few days.

SULLIVAN COMPILES OLYMPIC RECORDS

A comprehensive volume of the Olympic [illegible] of 1906, replete with pictures and information valuable to people interested [illegible] has been compiled by James E. # MINISTERS' RAID ON RUM DENS STIRS UP SLEUTHS OF NATICK

PASTORS IN RUM WAR AND CONTRABAND SEIZED.

"Spite," Cries Head of Police Force; "I Didn't Even Know There Was Illegal Liquor Selling in Town."

An immense crowd gathered in and about the Natick courthouse yesterday, eager to learn the disposition of the cases of illegal liquor selling, resulting from the personally conducted raid by three clergymen of the town on July 4.

Great was the disappointment when Judge Mulligan announced that two of the cases, those of Michael Quirk and W. T. McGrath, of the Sunnyside House, were continued, and that of Roger Conners [illegible] come up later in the day.

Conners's case was called at 4 o'clock. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $50 and appealed. Both Quirk and McGrath pleaded guilty at a former hearing. Quirk was given three months in jail and fined $50, and appealed. McGrath's case has been continued again for two weeks.

More sensations are expected before the clergymen finish their crusade against the liquor sellers. Six more warrants have been sworn out and the town is waiting anxiously for further developments.

Clergymen Put Police to Shame.

The raid on the Fourth created great excitement in Natick. Tired of the inactivity of the police, Rev. Morris H. Turk, of the First Congregational Church, Rev. Howard A. Pease, of the Baptist Church, and Rev. G. Edgar Folk, of the Fisk M. E. Church, decided to do a little sliding themselves. Ignoring the police and selectmen they enlisted aid of Sheriff Whitman, secured teams and started out.

Rev. Mr. Turk, with Deputy Sheriff Nutt, visited Quirk's place on Court street, [illegible] quantities [illegible] the wagon. The load was driven to the police station.

The news soon spread and in a few minutes a large crowd had gathered about the station. While they were waiting a [illegible] Rev. Mr. Folk [illegible] waving a bottle and shouting, "See what we got." This load was secured at Sunnyside Park and Connors's place by Rev. Mr. Folk and Rev. Mr. Pease, assisted by Sheriff Whitman and Deputy Walsh.

The crowd almost blocked the street and there were many smiles, some of them wistful, as the goods were unloaded and carried into the station.

When the cases came up in court a week later Quirk and McGrath both pleaded guilty. The cases were continued one week and at the second hearing Quirk was fined $50 and sentenced to three months in the House of Correction. He appealed.

Fourteen Bottles Shy.

A week ago Friday a new sensation in the case came to light. At that time the confiscated liquor reverted to the State, according to law. When Deputy Nutt arrived to turn over the goods to the State he found that fourteen bottles of whiskey were missing. The matter was reported to the Selectmen, who ordered an investigation by Chief Brown. It was found that the outside door of the lockup was not kept locked. It was further learned that the whiskey was piled near the door of the cell and could be easily obtained by reaching through the bars of the cell. Anyway, the police disclaim all responsibility for the liquor as they were not officially notified that it had been placed in the cell and were not asked to look after it.

Chief Brown Wrathy.

To a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter Chief Hiram Brown poured forth indignant protests against the charges of inefficiency which have been made. Chief Brown said:

"The whole thing is a case of politics. The present board has been in power for the last five years. These people have been [illegible] out ever since. They have started this just to make trouble for us.

"The police did not know that there was illegal selling going on. If the ministers wanted these places raided, why didn't they come to me and say so. When they wanted Sunday ball playing stopped they came to me, and it was stopped at once. When the [illegible] wanted poker rooms raided they came to me and within a week we had the town cleared.

Disclaims Responsibility.

"When I took charge here, and it was just after the other crowd had been run [illegible] there were twenty-seven places selling liquor within ten minutes walk of the square, but I cleaned them all out.

"In regard to the liquor being stolen, I don't know anything about that. There are lots of people who have keys to the lockup that I don't know anything about. Besides that, we have to keep the door of the station open, and the staff could be reached from the outside. They did not tell me when they put it in there, and did not ask me to be responsible for it."

AN INTERESTING PROPOSITION

Just think of this suburban store drawing trade from outside towns. Yes, even from Boston itself and its large stores. It's out of the ordinary—but this is an "out of the ordinary" store. We already have a large outside trade—such a large store must have to prosper. But we're reaching for more and we're justified in doing so because there's something here to pay the people for the trouble of coming. The most important advantage is LOW PRICES made possible by LOW CAMBRIDGE RENT. There's other good things besides low prices, too. We convince people of these facts every day—let us prove it to you.

ACCUSES WOOD OF PREJUDICE AND BIAS.

Courtmartial of Capt. Koehler Reveals Story of Feud in Army Through Appeal Made to the Secretary of War

Leavenworth, Kan., Aug. 4.—The courtmartial of Captain Lewis M. Koehler, Fourth Cavalry, at the instance of Major-General Leonard Wood, commander of the Philippine division of the army, on the charge of using intemperate language toward a superior officer, is attracting deep interest in military circles.

The intemperate language complained of occurred in an official letter by Captain Koehler, appealing to the Secretary of War from a reprimand by General Wood, in which the division commander is accused of "unfair, unjust and illegal acts," and of trying to injure the character of Captain Koehler as an officer and a soldier.

The trouble started about one year ago, when Captain Koehler, with his troop of cavalry, took station in Jolo, in the department of Mindanao. The quarters for the officers and the horses were inadequate.

Captain Koehler made a request of Major Hugh T. Scott, civil governor and military commander, to have them repaired. It is alleged that Major Scott paid no attention to requests. The controversy between Major Scott and Captain Koehler warmed up and finally ended in Captain Koehler filing charges through military channels against Major Scott, accusing him in substance of inattention to duty and incompetency.

When the charges reached General Wood a court of inquiry, the usual method in military procedure, was not ordered, but instead Major Scott was allowed to file a counter charge against Koehler, accusing him of making allegations that were "malicious, vexatious and groundless."

Koehler's trial was followed by General Wood giving Captain Koehler a reprimand in a division order. Captain Koehler appealed from this to the Secretary of War. In his official letter appealing to the head of the army, Captain Koehler reviewed most of the trouble and makes direct accusations against General Wood of unfairness and illegal acts, and says that he is the victim of prejudice, bias and even malice.

Captain Koehler's letter of appeal says in part:

"Without counsel, without witnesses, and especially with the principal witness, Major Scott, absent in the United States, I was harassed and handicapped by a feeling that I was helpless and at the mercy of a superior who would make use of every unfair advantage to harm me and protect his own personal friend, Major Scott.

"The case has so many irregular and unusual features, and I am so thoroughly possessed with the feeling that I haven't been given a fair trial but have been the victim of prejudice, and even malice, that I beg for a full and complete review of the case at the hands of the Secretary of War, with a view of setting aside the findings, sentence and reprimand."

Watch Your thirty Feet of Bowels!

YOU have thirty feet of Intestines!

What makes food travel through them?

A set of Muscles that line the walls of these Intestines or Bowels.

When a piece of Food rubs the walls of the Intestines these Muscles tighten behind it, and thus it starts a Muscle-wave which drives it through the whole length of the Bowels.

It should take about 12 hours to do this properly, so that nutritious parts of the food may have time to be digested and absorbed.

But,—If it takes twice or three times that period the food spoils in passing, and becomes as poisonous as if it had decayed before being eaten.

Now, the cause of delay (Constipation) is simply Weakness, or Laziness of the Bowel-Muscles.

Want of Exercise, Indoor Employment, weakens these Bowel-Muscles, just as it weakens Arm and Leg Muscles.

They do not remove the Cause of Constipation.

But this is different with Cascarets.

Cascarets act on the Muscles of the Bowels and Intestines. They act just as Cold Water, or Exercise act on a Lazy man.

They act like exercise.

UN AIDS RICH LADY'S FLIGHT FROM ASYLUM.

wo Men Hold Up Guard at Point of Revolver and She Escapes.

HAD SHORT FREEDOM FOR CARRIAGE RIDE

Springfield, Aug. 4.—Aided by two men, one of whom threatened her attendant with a revolver, Mrs. Egbert W. Simmons, a wealthy inmate of Dr. Edwin Vail's sanitarium at Enfield, escaped from custody and has disappeared.

Mrs. Simmons, whose home is in Providence, has been an inmate of the sanitarium about four months. She had been improving and had been given permission to attend a matinee in Springfield with a guard from the institution.

Two Men in Carriage.

As they were walking along the street Mrs. Simmons suddenly exclaimed: "Why, there's my brother."

A carriage drawn by a pair of horses and containing two men drew up to the curb and one of the men greeted Mrs. Simmons affectionately. An invitation was extended to her and the guard to take a drive to North Wilbraham and the invitation was accepted.

The carriage was driven rapidly to the outskirts of the city and when in a strip of woods one of the men suddenly pointed a revolver at the attendant and ordered him to get out of the carriage. The man demurred, but was forced to alight. He was told that the whole affair was prearranged and the two men and Mrs. Simmons drove away, laughing.

Police Hunt Plotters.

The attendant made his way back to Enfield and told his story to Dr. Vail. The police were notified and search was immediately made for Mrs. Simmons, but without success.

Egbert Simmons is superintendent of a department store in Providence, but has been in New York for some time for treatment for hip disease. It was known by friends of the family that Mrs. Simmons was away, but none knew that she was in a sanitarium.

Plucky Woman Made Ill by Reaction That Follows Closing of the Famous Divorce Suit That Has Shaken Pittsburg

Pittsburg, Aug. 4.—After the long and weary trial of the divorce case instituted against her husband, Mrs. Mary Scott Hartje is showing signs of collapse, the first real weakening on her part since the struggle began.

It was reported from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Scott, to-day that she is better. Yesterday, however, she was confined to her room on account of the reaction after the excitement of the court room. Mrs. Hartje's friends expected her to collapse some time ago, but she showed great courage. She has been under a physician's care for several weeks, it is said. During the first part of the trial she was in excellent health, but later she was somewhat indisposed.

SAYS 2 CHILDREN WERE NEGLECTED

Delia and Patrick Murphy, aged four and six years respectively, were brought before Judge Corbett in the South Boston Court yesterday by Agent Mann of the Society for the Protection of Children, which said they were neglected and insufficiently cared for by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Murphy of No. 11 Vicksburg street, City Point. The father, according to the agent, was sent to Deer Island last Monday. The mother has a two months' old infant, and Agent Mann said he would try to have her placed with the overseers of the poor. The two children were sent to the Harrison avenue home.

Over one hundred persons will leave for Concord from Boston over the Boston & Maine this morning and they will join their New Hampshire brethren, leaving at 5:45 p. m. The great Boston pilgrimage will leave the North Station on Friday evening, August 17 at 7 p. m.

Rev. Father Charles R. Hennon, rector of St Joseph's Church, of Laconia, N. H., will conduct the pilgrimage which leaves to-day. The Boston archdiocese pilgrimage will be conducted by Rev. James J. McCafferty, of St. Thomas' Church, Jamaica Plain.

Father Hennon will conduct to-day's pilgrimage upon practically the same lines as that led last Summer by Rev. Father Saunders of Somerville. The tour will occupy from a week to ten days, as the members of the party may elect.

Special Masses for Pilgrims.

It is Father Hennon's intention to spend at least three days at the famous shrine, and many special devotions are planned to make the visit most profitable spiritually. A special tridum will begin on the morning of the arrival of the first New England pilgrimage at Beaupre. It will be continued through the two following days, with exercises both day and night.

The party is expected to reach Beaupre to-morrow morning and a special mass will be celebrated in the basilica near the shrine, one of the greatest churches in Canada. Each of the following mornings will witness special masses for the Boston and New Hampshire pilgrims. On the afternoon and evenings other services will be held.

The pilgrims will climb the great "Sancta Scala," or sacred stairs which are mounted on the knees. They will also participate in the celebration of the Calvary ceremony, one form of the "Way of the Cross." This is made in the large cemetery near the shrine.

The relics of St. Anne will be displayed and solemn benediction will be celebrated each evening. The third day is the day upon which pilgrims who seek the sacred shrine for cures depend for their accomplishment.

After supper at the hotel, where first class accommodations have been secured for the party, the religious exercises of the Tridum, conducted by a Redemptorist father, will begin with the benediction of the sacrament. On Sunday the feast of St. Joachim will be celebrated; Monday and Tuesday will be spent at the shrine. On Wednesday the Octave of the Assumption. After mass the pilgrims will return to Quebec by rail, stopping en route at Montmorency Falls. At 5:30 in the evening the steamer will start for Montreal, arriving Thursday morning at 7:30 o'clock. After breakfast a special train will leave for Boston. It will travel through the Green Mountains by daylight and arrive in Boston on Thursday evening, August 23, at 7:30 o'clock.

HOW THE "JAG" PUT THE JOKE ON MONROE OF PARAGON PARK

He Wanted to Walk Will Hill's High Wire and the Dinners Were in the Palm Garden.

Assistant Manager Frank Monroe of Paragon Park hasn't recovered yet from a fright given him by a "jag" who insisted he wanted to walk Will Hill's high wire, and who made a heart-breaking start to do it.

A high wire is a bad thing unless one knows how to handle it; a "jag" is a bad thing unless one can handle it. But the combination is very bad. So Monroe was scared.

It was this way. The night was rather foggy and Monroe told Hill he had better not risk his regular evening stunt of walking and tripping about on his high wire, 125 feet up in the air over the park.

"All right," said Hill, "perhaps I'd better not," and he took the evening off.

Monroe, who never sees Hill do his wire stunts without a feeling of anxiety lest something should happen to the daring performer, breathed a sigh of relief as he glanced up at the taut wire, which seemed like a silver thread through the fog and mist.

Too Many Lights.

Later in the evening someone stuck his head in Monroe's office door and sung out:

"Hey, Frank, come out and get this 'jag' off the grounds. He's likely to be a nuisance."

Monroe is death on "jags." He bustled out and found a young man, highly exhilarated and just able to navigate by putting his feet carefully on the ground and looking where he was going. He was jauntily dressed. He started over where the band was playing, swung unsteadily toward the tower by which Hill ascends to the high wire. He leaned wearily against the tower and sighed:

Monroe came along, yelled, "Here, get out of here, you," to the inebriate.

With the surprising quickness of a drunken man the "jag" spun swiftly, spied Monroe, turned back to the tower, and with an agility little short of marvellous began to clamber up the cross-pieces.

Monroe was horror-stricken.

Climbed Slowly Toward Top.

"Come down here, you fool, you'll get killed," he yelled.

"Killed nosshin' walkinsh great—goin up."

Monroe danced up and down with fear for the man.

"I'll come up there and get you," he sung out.

"You dasshen—I'l'comnsh up, push y' face flatsh p-p-pancake," gurgled the "jag" cheerfully, at the same time starting to get onto the little platform that surmounts the tower. He seated himself comfortably and leered down impudently at Monroe.

The "jag" glanced around and spied the wire.

"Trolleysh off—shut off curren'—makesh bully tight rope."

Whereupon the "jag" stood up unsteadily and put one wavering foot along the wire. Monroe could stand it no longer. He shinned up the cross-pieces and was nearly to the tower when Will Hill's voice said mockingly: "Aw, get off the tower. Beat it back before I laugh at you. Fine night for a fog, eh, don't I make a good character 'jag,' say?"

Amid the laugh of the crowd Monroe clambered down sheepishly and went into the Palm Garden to order the dinners for Hill and for Manager Dodge, who put Hill up to the joke—also for himself.

"Might's well get something out of it," says Monroe.

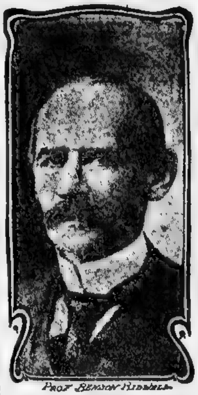
A Life Income for You

DON'T SPECULATE, INVEST

I Have Made Millions of Dollars for Thousands of People by My Patents

I expect to make millions more. This stock has increased in value more than 100 per cent. since Sept. 1st, 1905, and should make you a life income in handsome dividends. Be a safe and sane investor and get as much of the stock as your means will allow. The natural increase of business and inquiries for motors has forced the price of stock up several times; it will soon go higher. I have moved my office direct to our new factory at 139 S. Clinton st. and I am there every day from 9 to 5 o'clock.

The Bidwell Cold Motor Will Double the Capacity of Any Motor



PROF BENSON BIDWELL
Inventor of the Trolley Car System.
Inventor of the Gearless Motor.
Inventor of the Railway Car Telephone System.
Inventor of the Bidwell Cold Motor.
Inventor of the Water Electric Generator.

I never made an unsuccessful invention. My first invention was the electric fan just as it is run all over this country in hot weather. I didn't get a patent on it, but see what a tremendous success it is!

I next invented the Trolley Car System, just as it is run to-day. I made it perfect and successful right from the start. It has never been improved since I invented it. Look at the millions of money it has made for the stockholders. The stock in the trolley manufacturing companies sold below 15 cents a share in 1893 and 1894. Poor men could buy that stock then. Thousands of them did buy it and every one who held on to it is a rich man to-day.

No Man on Earth Ever Lost a Penny He Invested With Me

If so, I will make it good. Next I invented the Railway Car Telephone System. It is a system by which passengers or train crews can telephone from still or moving cars anywhere the same as if seated in an office. It is a more perfect system in operation than any other telephone you ever saw. This is on the road toward millions for the stockholders.

This Is My Greatest Invention

Now I have invented something bigger and greater than either of the above. It is called the Bidwell Cold Motor. It is guaranteed not to burn out and is exactly the kind of a motor the steam railroad people have been looking for. It will change all the steam railroad systems over to electric roads, because it will be cheaper to run than steam and can be run faster and more safely than any present method.

The one drawback the railroads have had in changing over to electricity has been that no motor as at present made can be run 150 miles at 60 miles an hour without burning out. It would melt the very wires.

By using the Bidwell Cold Motor a train of cars could be run from New York to San Francisco without a stop at the rate of 60 or 80 miles an hour and not even warm up and without a hitch.

Besides running faster they would be more safe and sure than steam, cost less to operate, and would last longer than any other motor now known.

The Bidwell Cold Motor is the greatest invention out since I invented the trolley car.

THE OPPORTUNITY OF A LIFETIME

I want to give every man and woman a chance to come in with me on this, for I expect to make millions for the stockholders out of this new patent.

The stock will be sold on the square. There will be no hocus pocus about preferred or common stock, nor any other scheme, trick or wrinkle by which anybody can be frozen out.

Every dollar invested will represent one hundred cents of the best stock. Every share will be exactly like every other share. The profit on every share will be the same as the profit on every other share. In short, there will be nothing but a square deal all around. This stock is fully paid and non-assessable.

I have a lifelong reputation for square dealing. I will personally see to it that every stockholder gets a square deal on this. More money is made every day by good judgment in investing money than by all the labor and wages in the country. Safe and shrewd investments in this stock will make fortunes.

You will never get rich on wages. No one ever did. Every man in this world who ever got big money got it either by speculation or investment. Speculation is unsafe. You stand more chance to lose than you do to make. Investments are right the other way. Make a safe investment and it is sure to bring you returns.

Here Is An Important Point to Remember!

There never has been a failure of consequence in electrical manufacturing. Stop and think of that. All are immensely successful. All pay big dividends and have made their investors wealthy.

This company will soon be one of the biggest in electrical manufacturing in the world.

This is bound to be so, because there is not a place now where a motor or generator is used but will have to sooner or later change for the Bidwell Cold Motor or Generator. Why? Because we make something better than any other kind known.

Hetty Green, the Richest Woman in the World, Says: "The Way to Get Rich is to Invest in Necessities."

The Bidwell Cold Motor is one of the greatest necessities of the 20th Century. This stock has already taken eight jumps up. Now is the time to buy. It will soon jump up again. The profit is yours. # ATTACKS GIRLS AT NIGHT ON CAMBRIDGE STREETS?

Two of the victims of alleged night attacks on Cambridge streets by mysterious man

Police Investigating Stories of Four Young Women Who Tell of a Mysterious Man Who Has Terrified Them

The Cambridge police are investigating the stories told by four young women, all of whom live in the vicinity of Rindge Field, North Cambridge, that, within the past month, they were attacked by a strange man on the street at night.

The description given of the man is the same in each case. The victims of the supposed "slugger" are all girls under twenty, except one, Mrs. Mary Correau, who is about thirty five years of age.

The latest attack, which is said to have been committed last Monday night, was the most serious. The victim was Miss Amanda Varney, seventeen years old, daughter of William Varney of No. 24 Railroad street. Miss Varney, in the struggle with the man secured a plain gold ring which has been turned over to the police.

Escaped From Man.

The first attack is said to have occurred on July 1. The victim was Miss Hattie Frykemann, twenty years old, of No. 7 Van Norden street, Cambridge. Miss Frykemann had a struggle with the slugger, but broke away from him and [illegible].

Mrs. Mary Correau [illegible] years old, of No. 20 Railroad street, says that she was attacked by the same man on the evening of July 23. She succeeded in beating him off. This occurred at her own gate.

The only tangible clue that the police have to the identity of the man is the gold ring which Miss Varney slipped from his finger. It is a plain band wedding ring and bears no inscription.

The peculiar feature of the case, and one which makes the police doubt the accuracy of the stories told, is the fact that none of the attacks were reported to them. They say that the district in which the attacks are said to have been committed is thoroughly covered by the patrolmen and has been so covered all the time during which the alleged outrages are said to have been going on.

Miss Hattie Frykemann, the first victim of the mysterious assailant, is the daughter of Otto Frykemann. She is a masseuse employed in Boston.

Followed by Strange Man.

She says that on July 1 a man followed her down Rindge avenue as she was on her way home about 9:30 P. M. When she had reached a dark portion of the street the man sprang upon her, pinned her arms behind her and attempted to throw her to the ground. She screamed and he released one hand in order to stifle her cries with his hand. Then she succeeded in breaking away from him and ran at full speed toward home.

About two weeks ago Miss Lizzie Alton of Henderson street, Arlington, was on her way down Rindge avenue, having been paying a visit to her friend Miss Varney, [illegible] Railroad street. Miss Alton says that she was attacked by the mysterious man and ran screaming back to the Varney house. William Varney and his brother escorted her to her home.

Mrs. Mary Correau of No. 20 Railroad street, the next victim, says that on the evening of July 23 as she came across Rindge field on her way home she noticed [illegible] following her. At her own gate [illegible] attempted to gag her. She turned upon him and throwing her arms wildly about hit the man in the face. He was apparently stunned by the blow, and she succeeded in getting into the house.

Miss Amanda Varney says she had been on Massachusetts avenue Monday evening. She started for home about nine o'clock and noticed a man following her on Rindge avenue. He seized her wrists and threw her to the ground. She fought him with all her strength and in the struggle was dragged nearly two hundred yards into some willow bushes at the rear of the park. She fainted on the doorstep and remained there for nearly two hours until her father, aroused by an alarm of fire, came to the window and discovered her crouched on the doorstep.

All the girls agree in the man's description. They say that the man was a tall, dark man, rather thin and weighing about 150 pounds. He had long, thin fingers and smelled strongly of tobacco. One of the girls says that there are tobacco stains on her waist, where the hands of her assailant grasped her during the struggle.

Miss Sells decided she wouldn't cry. She told her experience instead.

"Somebody told me a lot of things about Mr. Weller which I shouldn't have believed, but did," she said.

Mr. Weller [illegible] a confirmation.

"I went to a lawyer and asked him what to do and told him not to say a single thing about it," she continued. "It was 4 o'clock when I got there and he must have filed that suit five minutes after I left. I will have it withdrawn the first thing to-morrow."

NEW PRIMARY LAW MAKES CHICAGO 'DRY'

Chicago, Aug. 4.—For the first time in its history, Chicago was, to-day, while the primary elections were being held, an absolutely 'dry' town. The law forbids the selling of liquors during elections under ironclad provisions, which make it mandatory upon the authorities to cancel the license of any saloonkeeper violating the law. The law is a new one, and to-day's election furnished the first test of its efficiency. A cancelled license could not be renewed for at least twenty years.

UNION MEN OF BROCKTON GO INTO POLITICS.

New Wage Earners' Club to Select Candidates and Urge Laws.

MEETS TO ORGANIZE NEXT FRIDAY NIGHT

Special to the Boston American.

BROCKTON, Aug. 4.—The newly formed Wage Earners' Club of Brockton organized under the national labor movement to secure labor candidates and labor legislation, will meet next Friday night to adopt constitution and bylaws now being framed by the Committee on Constitution. The first meeting was largely attended and the movement is being more and more favored every hour in this, one of the strongest labor union communities in the country.

Brockton takes the credit of first suggesting a national labor movement in politics in a definite manner. At the last convention of the Massachusetts State Branch of the American Federation of Labor the Brockton delegates introduced a resolution calling for a movement of this kind. The adoption of the idea by the American Federation of Labor and its rapid spread through the country is very gratifying to the Brockton unionists.

Indorsed by All Unions.

When the subject of a Brockton Wage Earners' Club was broached here every one of the fifty six labor unions in town indorsed it and elected a delegate to attend the organization meeting.

This took place last night in Mason's Hall. Out of the fifty six union delegates elected fifty four attended, two being unable to come. In addition there were other interested unionists of all political creeds up to a total number of 400 earnest, enthusiastic men.

There were Democrats, Republicans and Socialists there. Although partisan feeling has run high in Brockton politics, it was noticeable that this organization, in the interest of labor, was harmonious, personal proclivities being subordinated to the main purpose.

The meeting was called to order by E. Gerry Brown, chairman of the State Committee of fifteen from the Massachusetts State Branch A. F. of L., which is organizing the State movement. Mr. Brown was elected chairman pro tem. Jeremiah S. Carey, a Socialist member in the Common Council, was chosen temporary secretary. The following committee was named to draft a constitution and by-laws and to prepare a list of candidates for club officers to be submitted at the next meeting:

Committee on By-Laws.

Emmett T. Walls, for nine years President of the Brockton C. L. U. and a delegate from the Sole Fasteners' Union.

Charles T. Laird of the Cutters' Union.

W. D. Dwyer of the Laborers' Union.

It was voted to call the organization "The Wage Earners' Club of Brockton."

It was voted to adopt the declaration and platform of the Wage Earners' Clubs throughout the State, which have already been frequently published. The declaration says that the club is formed "as a means toward securing non-partisan independent political action and to support candidates for public office who will agree to favor legislation indorsed by wage earners." The platform calls for pure legislation, municipal ownership, initiative and referendum, regulation of trusts and other standard labor principles.

The movement is regarded as a very important one in Brockton and the politicians are watching it very closely. When it is stated that Brockton is the strongest labor city in the country in proportion to its population and that the fifty six labor unions represent a union membership of 22,000, it can be understood that the new Wage Earners' Club is a power in the community.

RHODE ISLAND ICE TRUST PROBE TO BE THOROUGH.

Investigators Go Out of the State to Find Out Why One Dealer Can Sell Ice at $5 While Another Charges $7

Providence, Aug. 4.—The Ice Trust probe in Rhode Island has resulted in the discovery that some dealers can afford to sell ice for $5 a ton, while others find it necessary to charge $7 for the same ice, purchased in the same market.

Why this is so is one of the things that the investigating committee will endeavor to ascertain. Two dealers, one a representative of the Providence Ice Company, were before the committee yesterday, and were kept on the rack for an hour.

The inquiry is by no means being confined to the State boundaries. This morning Commissioner George H. Webb of the Bureau of Industrial Statistics, returned from New Hampshire, where he has been looking into the question of the cost of handling, transportation, shrinkage, etc.

Another representative of the department is on a secret mission in Maine, where there is reported to be plenty of ice melting waiting for the American Ice Company to say what shall be done with it.

The dealers seem to have been primed for the investigation. They have deluged the Board of Trade Committee with information. The committee will inspect the material at hand to determine what portion of it, if any, is of value.

Better Places for Profit Than Wall Street Now.

BY BOSTON AMERICAN LEASED WIRE.

New York, Aug. 4.—While it must be expected that the first shock of actual warfare in Russia would hurt stock markets all over the world, there is justification for the belief that any such decline would be followed by a quick recovery in America. The reason would be the foreign demand for cotton, steel and grain, and Russian gold would come here in great volume at the same time, and it might easily happen that there would be enough money on hand to move both crops and stocks at the same time.

Unless something desperate happens the stock market must quickly subside after the effect of the present stimulating manipulation has worn away. Crops are of huge proportions and will demand all the money available in their movement. They will furnish the basis of a great advance in stocks later, for their size makes it seem that the large dividends being distributed can be maintained.

Except for raids that may be inspired by political engineers, there is no excuse for selling stocks if they are not held on margin. The wheat crop is so large that the best authorities on the grain market are selling wheat freely at present prices. They believe that even actual revolution in Russia will not furnish enough of a market to give the United States more than 75 or 80 cents for its wheat this season.

The reactionary tendency of the stock market, therefore, simply voices the sentiment of those who believe the present movement will be abandoned as soon as certain financing is finished. Money can be employed almost anywhere the next three months to better advantage than in Wall street.

It is doubtful whether, with the exception of a few specialties such as St. Paul, Southern Pacific and Copper, for the advances in which there are specific reasons, there can be any sustained movement in the list.

Recent Rise Suspected to Have Been Engineered for Unloading Securities at a Profit.

An upward movement of stock prices which had extended practically through the rest of the week was abruptly terminated yesterday by a simultaneous slump of nearly every stock in the list.

The losses ranged from a fraction of one point to four points. They were not sufficient to wipe out the recovery made the previous week, but they proved a bitter pill for such of the "outside public" as had been inveigled into the market by the sudden change from a prolonged decline to a rapid recovery.

The market had had a substantial advance, extending over a period of two weeks and carrying up the prices of active stocks several points. It suddenly dawned upon the minds of some traders a week ago that the advance was coincident with the return of the big men of the financial world to Wall street. The suspicion was breathed that they had outlined a plan to bid up prices and get the public into the market.

Public Bit Eagerly.

Attracted by the activity which suddenly took the place of the usual midsummer dulness, the dear public did go into the market. For a few days prices went merrily upward, and sales during the past week went above a million shares a day. With a rosy perspective, the public, believing that the return of the market leaders would surely clear the speculative horizon, cast away pessimism and did just what was expected of it.

The probable plan to create a market for the unloading of their shares was suggested in this column a week ago. The bidding up of prices for this purpose was hardly to be expected at this season, but for that very reason it succeeded. The public forgot that big fish exist by devouring the smaller fry. Immediate success has attended the plan. It is only partial, however, and only time can show what the final result is to be.

Basic Conditions Sound.

Basic conditions continue sound. Speculation is progressing independently of them, for actual security values are for the most part even greater than existing prices. For a long time there has been a quiet but confident underlying sentiment, but now a period in the crop year has arrived when some reasonable judgment can be formed as to agriculture harvests there is a decided disposition to discount the apparent coming prosperity.

It is just barely possible, therefore, that steps have been taken to restore whatever confidence has been lacking. The resumption of dividends on United States Steel common for instance, was important influence to this end. Money is still the restraining influence. There is no indication of anything like ease, unless it is for call funds. These are quoted at 3 to 3½ per cent. Time money rules from 5 to 6 per cent.

The bank statement yesterday was unfavorable, the surplus a loss of nearly $15,000,000. The surplus is large, nevertheless, amounting to over $14,000,000. It is considered a favorable feature that wheat is moving early, and that the price is on an export basis.

Short Interest Reduced.

The stock transactions during the week, which were heavy except yesterday, are regarded as reflecting heavy realising and a reduction in the short interest. This is in addition to the manipulation of prices for the purpose of unloading. As the public is taking an active part in speculation for the first time in more than a year, the realizing sales were readily absorbed, and there was no setback until yesterday.

Good judges of speculation believed before yesterday's slump that the rise was near the point of culmination, and preferred to sell on a scale rather than to buy on top of such a material advance as had been made. These observers see nothing but bull features in the crop and business situations. On the other hand, however, they argue that the borrowings of speculators in view of the crop moving season now at hand and the enormous business being done throughout the country, are certain to swell bank loans to a dangerous limit.

Copper Shares Better.

Loans increased last week nearly $19,000,000. It is believed that the money question explains the haste with which stocks like Union Pacific, St. Paul and Southern Pacific were advanced, the interests behind them being desirous of closing their deals and unloading their speculative holdings before the money market became any firmer.

The copper shares have been benefited by the improvement of the general business situation. The metal is in a strong position, and indications are towards even higher prices. There has been no great change in the prices of copper shares, but they are more than holding their own, in spite of several recessions yesterday.

The New York stock market yesterday was lower from the start. The trading was only fairly active, even for a Summer Saturday. There seemed to be an inclination to look upon the opening break as merely a reaction in the upward movement, but soon it became evident that the break was to continue through the day.

Closing Price Lowest.

Southern Pacific was the only strong active stock, although Amalgamated resisted the attacks on it and lost only a fraction. The market closed at the lowest prices of the day. Total sales were 869,000 shares.

Reading, the most active stock, reached 134, but closed at 130⅜, off 2¼. Of this stock 80,600 shares changed hands. Union Pacific was fairly active, with 41,000 shares. The close was at 155⅞, off ⅝. Sales of 39,300 shares of Amalgamated carried the price down 101⅝, off ⅛, after 102¾ had been reached. Steel common lost ⅝ to 39⅛, and the preferred ½ to 106⅜. Anaconda dropped four points to 255. Sugar 1⅛ to 136⅜, St. Paul 1¼ to 186⅞, Chicago, Northwestern 3 to 203, Colorado Fuel & Iron 2⅛ to 51⅞, Great Northern preferred 2⅛ to 204, [illegible] & Nashville 1⅛ to 144¼, National Lead 1 to 79, New York Central 1¼ to 139½, and Pennsylvania ⅝ to 131¼.

Losses in Local List.

The local copper market reflected somewhat the weakness in New York, but only one stock lost a point and a half. Butte Coalition was an early feature, declining to 32 off 1. It closed unchanged at 33.

The weakness in American Pneumatic shares was the feature of the general list. The preferred sold at 30 and the common at 12½, off 1 in each instance. The closing was at 30 for the preferred and 13 for the common, the latter off 1½. The weakness in these stocks is based upon the company's necessities for raising $800,000 for tube construction in New York. There is believed to be quite a short interest in both Pneumatic preferred and common.

Allouez lost ½ to 32½. Bingham lost 1 to 31¼. Boston Consolidated ⅜ to 26, Calumet & Hecla 1 to 699, Centennial ⅜ to 23, Copper Range ¼ to 74, Greene Consolidated ⅛ to 24⅝. Michigan was unchanged at 12¼ and Mohawk at 62. North Butte lost ½ to 90¾. Parrot was unchanged at 27¾ and Tamarack at 100. United Copper lost ⅜ to 63½. United Fruit ⅜ to 110. United States Smelting common gained ⅛ to 56⅞, the preferred gained ⅛ to 46⅛, and Utah lost ¼ to 57¾.

FLEES FROM RICH SUITOR TO WED MAN OF HER CHOICE

MARION G. OLIVER, WHO RAN AWAY TO WED.

Pretty Lynn stenographer who is thought to have figured in elopement to escape marriage with rich suitor favored by family.

Pretty Lynn Girl and Young Shoe City Lawyer Take Out Marriage License in Providence.

To escape the attentions of a wealthy New Yorker, whom her mother greatly favored, and to marry the man of her choice, Miss Marion G. Oliver, nineteen years old, a charming Lynn stenographer, has eloped with Edwin J. Coughlin, aged twenty-five, a rising young attorney of the same city. Postals have been received from the couple dated Providence, where they took out a marriage license. That they are married is not doubted by intimate friends of the girl, for she had confided in at least one of them that the only way in which she and Eddie could become happy was to run away.

Up to three weeks ago, William Thompson, confidential clerk and head bookkeeper in the Valentine Brewing Company, New York, believed himself the man who would become Miss Oliver's husband. He had given her a diamond engagement ring besides numerous other handsome presents and had been assiduous in his attentions. Mrs. Abbie B. Oliver, of No. 777 Boston street, mother of the girl, did everything possible to further the suit of Mr. Thompson, whom she considered a very estimable young man for a son-in-law.

A letter reached Mr. Thompson three weeks ago containing a full confession by his fiancee, asking her release, for she loved another. He immediately came to Lynn, and that Sunday there was a stormy scene, during which the young lady returned all the presents, including the ring. All coaxing and threatening proved unavailing.

As yet her former fiance has received no intimation of her clandestine marriage with his rival, but he is expected in Lynn to-morrow on a visit to Mrs. Oliver, and between the two they hoped to effect a reconciliation.

KING'S BULLETIN

I want to send my weekly financial newspaper free to every investor in corporation securities—to every person with money deposited in banks or trust companies.

"King's Financial Bulletin" is a large 8-page newspaper and is published for and in the interest of honest investors.

It is issued on Saturday of each week and is sent free, postpaid, to all making written request for it.

It is absolutely independent in all things.

It has no advertising space for sale, and is, therefore, in position to hew straight to the line, letting the chips fall where they may.

At all times, in season and out of season, "King's Financial Bulletin" will be found standing for, insisting on and demanding a "square deal" for investors.

It is the personal organ—the special envoy—of a financial agent who believes that Right is Right—who believes that Wrong is Wrong, whether committed by a bank president or a bootblack—who believes that four cents does not begin to represent adequate compensation for the labor of an American dollar a full calendar year—who deplores the fictitious form of speculation fomented by Wall Street and its apostles and disciples—who believes that the trading in stocks on margin is a broad and beaten path that leads more men and women to destruction every year than any other form of gambling—who believes that banks, trust companies and all corporations should be conducted in the interests of the people whose funds make their success possible, whether deposited in vaults in the name of safety or invested in their securities—who believes that the crying need of our country is a clearer understanding of the rights of corporation stockholders, whether the engraved certificates represent a one-share interest in the Billion Dollar Steel Trust or a ten-dollar peanut stand.

Always "King's Financial Bulletin" will stand for and commend without favor all things in the world of finance that are Right, and condemn without fear all things that are Wrong.

My hope is that the doctrine of Correct Investing, which I boldly proclaim through this publication from week to week, may touch a responsive chord in the hearts and minds of investors, and to the end that I may be able to render the greatest good to the greatest number, I invite personal correspondence with all interested persons, to whom I will gladly send this liveliest and most vigorous of all financial newspapers, free postpaid, so long as its weekly visits may be desired. No investor should be without it. Write for it today. Address

"Thriller of Thrillers" Sends Shivers of Delight Up Spinal Columns of Grand Opera House Patrons.

HERO TOM TO THE RESCUE OF BERTHA

AH! I HAVE YE NOW!
TERRIBLE SCENE IN THE ENGINE HOUSE

Bertha the Sewing Machine Girl, one of the latest creations of the fertile brain of Playsmith Theodore Kremer, thrilled and delighted a large and discriminating audience at the Grand Opera House last night, the opening night of the season.

No claque is needed at the Grand when a Kremer play is produced. The entire audience, especially the gallery, holds that job and performs its work efficiently. Last night was no exception. The audience was a typical "first night" on the Grand.

The gallery cheered the hero, sympathized with the heroine and her blind sister and hissed the villian impartially and vehemently.

Kremer has written many thrillers, but "Bertha" shows the results of experience. Bertha escaped death by drowning and the gallery yelled. She dodged bullets and the gallery shrieked. She escaped roaring flames and the gallery howled. An awful death in machinery was narrowly averted and the gallery whooped joyously. She side-stepped the electric chair for a murder and did not commit, and the gallery yelped vociferously.

How Hard the Others Work.

Edith Browning, who acted Bertha, had her troubles. That Miss Browning is a physical culture girl is evident. No other could stand the strain.

Tom Jennings, a New York fireman and another hard worker, is her "steady." The villain Harold Cuttings, keeps Tom on the jump to frustrate his abse designs, but he does it and has the pleasure of saying "twenty three" to Harold in the last act.

No one in the audience went to sleep. In the first act Bertha is kidnapepd in a motor car. Tom hikes fter it on a bicycle. It is too high-powered for his leg muscles, and he gets to Central Park just after Bertha has been thrown into the lake and rescued by Archibald Stubbs, who loves Jessie, her blind sister. Tom and Mrs. Katzenhopf kep Harold and Olive Roberts, the she villain, out of the game with revolvers.

Saved from Machinery.

In the sweatshop the persistent Harold tries to throw Bertha into the machinery. Again Tom is Johnny-on-the-spot and barely saves her. She jumps from a window, is caught by one of Harold's pals and again kidnapped, this time in a motor boat. The boat chug-chugs up the Hudson, with Tom and Mrs. Katzenkopf hiking alongside in an auto. In the nick of time Archibald, in a special trolley car, takes pot shots at the boat, disables her engine, and gives Tom a chance to get into the spotlight with Bertha in his arms.

Cheers from the gallery greeted this climax, interspersed with cries of "Good boy, Tom!" "Kiss her!" and other advice gratis.

All Comes Right in Last.

There is rather a delicate scene in the last act, participated in by Bertha, a folding bed and an alarm clock. The entrance of Harold ends the suspense. There is a mix up, policeman mysteriously appears, is shot and Bertha is arrested and tried for the murder.

Bertha is her own counsel and her eloquence restores sight to her blind sister. Bertha cross-examines Harold. He draws a gun. More shooting. The villainess is shot. She fesses up, Harold gets his and Bertha and her sister get their fortune.

EXPERTS SEE IN THEM BIG LOSS TO CITY

Believed Awards Have Been Agreed Upon, With No Bids for the Work.

Boston street paving contractors are declaring that there should be more work for District-Attorney Moran and the Grand Jury if the $150,000 job on Columbus avenue is awarded by the Mayor.

A short time ago it was rumored that Street Superintendent Doyle was in a mood to resign because he could not have his own way about the contract. It is now said that he is to continue in office and that the rough edges of the deal for the avenue job have all been smoothed over.

The street superintendent is very friendly to the contracting firm of Jones & Meehan, and would not have felt badly if that firm had received the contract for the entire piece of work. As the contractors out in the cold now figure out, the job, the work will be split between the Jones & Meehan concern and the Barber Asphalt Company of New York. The latter is practically the asphalt trust. It is expected that the contract will be awarded in a few days and that no bids for the work will be invited.

Suspect Tacit Understanding.

The law stipulates that every officer or board in charge of a department shall, on every job calling for the outlay of $2,000 or more, invite proposals for the work by advertisements in four daily newspaeprs "UNLESS THE MAYOR GIVES A WRITTEN AUTHORITY TO DO OTHERWISE."

No bids on the Columbus avenue job have been invited. The amount which the spirit of the law exempts from bidding is exceeded by $148,000 in this instance. It is the belief of contractors that the contract has already been tacitly disposed of between the firm that Superintendent Doyle is friendly to and the Barber Company, which controls the Trinidad asphalt.

Local contractors have learned that the price to be paid for this Columbus avenue job is $3.25 per square yard, with a ten year guarantee by the contractor. One of the leading contractors in Boston says the work can be done for much less than that price if proposals are called for according to law.

"Against Public Policy."

"It is contrary to sound public policy and encourages graft," he declares. "Why limit the bidding to two or three contractors, and bluff bidding at that? Meehan and the Barber company understand one another and the division of the work is all a bluff. The law never was intended to give the Mayor the power to dictate large contracts, but that is just what the Mayor is doing. The law was framed so that he might step in and serve the city's interests when they seemed to be endangered by the operations of the department heads. There are plenty of contractors in Boston and in other cities of the commonwealth who would like to have the chance of bidding on this job and they are entitled to it. The best interests of the city will be served in this instance by competition and not by allowing firms friendly to the powers that be to fix up a price that suits them. City money can be saved by advertising for bids for this $150,000 piece of work. It should be advertised. It should be an open competition. No patent pavements should be stipulated, the material for which is controlled by the trust. There should be an outcry against the Mayor if he perverts the spirit of the law and avails himself of the technical advantage it gives him to give out the contract."

Law Which Contractors Say Is Violated in Sptrit

This is the law of 1890, Section 4, Chapter 418, which is being violated in spirit, so Boston contractors say, in order that large contracts may b secretly awarded by Mayor Fitzgerald:

EVERY officer or board in charge of a department in said city, when authorized to erect a new building or to make structural changes therein, shall contracts therefor, not exceeding five, each contract to be subject to the approval of the Mayor, and when about to do the work or to make any purchase, the estimated cost of which amounts to or exceeds $2000, shall, UNLESS THE MAYOR GIVES A WRITTEN AUTHORITY TO DO OTHERWISE, INVIE PROPOSALS THEREFOR BY ADVERTISMENT IN MORE THAN FOUR DAILY NEWSPAPERS published in said city, such advertisements to state the time and place for opening the proposals in answer to said advertisements, and reserving in such invitations the right of the officer or board to reject any or all bids.

Scale of Big Prices.

Talking about the fat contracts that have gone to the political friends of Mayor Fitzgerald, the Congress street job was pointed to as a fine sample.

Congress street from the bridge over the Fort Point channel to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, was fixed up with block paving and concrete. James Doherty did the work. The bill for the job reads:

For material and labor furnished by the city, $22,000.

For material and labor furnished by the contractor, $10,000.

This bill was signed by Superintendent Doyle, approved by Mayor Fitzgerald and Corporation Counsel Babson June 28.

Here are some of the fancy prices charged by the contractor: Excavating 6,950 square yards at 6 cents, 1,760 lineal feet of edgestone at 21 cents, 6,950 square yards of concrete base at 30 cents, 150 square yards of granite block paving at [illegible] cents, 682 square yards of granite blocks at $1.05, flagging crosswalks, gravel at 65 cents, flagging crosswalks, gravel, at $1.05, 1,630 square yards of brick sidewalks at 35 cents.

There is not a contractor in Boston who would not like to do work at those figures. There is not one who would not be willing to retire to a country seat if he could have four or five years of steady work for the city on the same scale of prices.

REVERE BOY MISSING.

THAW AND HIS MOTHER IN ANOTHER QUARREL IN THE TOMBS REGARDING DEFENCE

MADGE MARSTON

Disagreement of Mother and Son in Presence of Prisoner's Wife Reported by Jailors—New Line Outlined by Counsel.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Aug. 4.—Harry K. Thaw and his mother had another disagreement in the Tombs to-day.

Mrs. Thaw came to see her son, accompanied by his wife, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw. During the course of the hour they were outside the prisoner's cell Harry Thaw's voice could be heard at frequent intervals, raised in angry retorts.

Mrs. Thaw, according to the prison keepers, was trying to persuade her son to adopt a [illegible] attitude in regard to his case, but what this was could not be learned.

Thaw's mother was extremely pale when she entered the prison. This was so [illegible] that it caused remark, especially when it was seen that [illegible] [illegible] But when the elder woman left the Tombs [illegible] and seemed angry.

Shortly after they left word was received at the prison that Thaw's counsel, Clifford W. Hartridge, would come to see him. It is [illegible] Thaw sent for Hartridge [illegible] the conference with Mrs. Thaw.

New Line of Defence.

[illegible] an impelling motive [illegible] [illegible] by those who studied [illegible] provides the [illegible] Clifford W. Hartridge [illegible] Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, the p[illegible]

Madge Marston, an actress friend of Mrs. Thaw, who is to testify in Thaw's behalf, is expected to give important evidence on this point. Thaw's counsel expect Miss Marston's testimony to be of great value to Thaw.

Information to this effect came to the District Attorney's office yesterday through a voluntary witness. The new "impelling motive" was, it is said, something Stanford White did on June 2[illegible], the day of the shooting, or [illegible].

It involved nothing less than interference in Thaw's domestic affairs.

So sure is Lawyer Hartridge [illegible] evidence will persuade [illegible] that he is daily [illegible] witnesses who come to him with [illegible] details of different [illegible] White's studio life. It is said that the defence will make no attempt to blacken the character of the late architect and that no evidence of the sort will be introduced except that which has direct bearing on the case.

Government Witnesses Gone.

The District Attorney's office is somewhat alarmed over the disappearance of many witnesses for the State. Half a dozen have slipped out of New York, it is said, in the past few weeks on their way to Europe, where they will remain until after the trial. Among those missing is Miss Anna E. Evans, at whose house on West Forty-seventh street Thaw met several of his chorus girl friends. She is said to have the story of Edna Thomas, a girl who sued Thaw for whipping her, and who has since died in a sanitarium.

It is not known in the District Attorney's office how Thaw obtained the knowledge of the attack by White upon his home, but it is known that Mrs. Thaw shared the knowledge with her husband. They had discussed it seriously in their apartment just prior to the shooting.

Rand to Defend Thaw?

It was reported today that William Rand, former Assistant District Attorney, who prosecuted Nan Patterson, has been re[illegible] to act as principal counsel in the defence of Thaw. Mr. Hartridge seemed surprised when told such a report was current. He only said:

"You may rest assured that when Mr. Thaw is placed on trial he will be ably defended."

It was rumored too that it has been decided that Evelyn Nesbit Thaw shall take the stand in her husband's defence. To draw out her story without leaving holes for the prosecution to extract more than the defence will care to have told will be a delicate task. Rand is regarded as equal to this and it is understood that was why he was retained.

CORONER TOO SOON, ASSERTS DYING MAN

Horribly Crushed by Train, He Retained Possession of His Faculties.

Pittsburg, Aug. 4.—Called to the Pittsburg & Lake Erie Railroad yards to view the body of a young man who had been crushed under the wheels of a train, Deputy Coroner Hugh Dempsey was surprised upon his arrival to find the man still alive, although so horribly crushed that his death was a question of a short time only. The unfortunate fellow was in full possession of his faculties, however, and jokingly told the coroner that he had come too soon.

He insisted upon supplying all needed information to the coroner, said his name was George Earl and his home was in Clyde and where he belonged to the Order of Elks. He wandered on to the [illegible] tracks, was struck by an engine and injured.

After he had cheerily given all this information Earl was removed to the West Penn Hospital. There it was found that he could not recover, but he lingered for four hours after the accident happened, when he died.

DYNAMITE PLOT CLUE GIVEN POLICE BY WOMAN

New Bedford Police Hunting for Mysterious Man on a Bicycle.

GOMPERS COMING TO GIVE CHEER TO STRIKERS

New Bedford, Aug. 4.—The police have discovered a clue to the men who placed dynamite cartridges on the street car tracks. An arrest is expected hourly.

Mrs. Harry Weeks, who resides on Kempton street, opposite the Catholic cemetery, declares that she saw a man ride by on a bicycle and place something on the track just before the dynamite was discovered. She furnished a description of the man, who rode rapidly away. Inspector Gendron is detailed on the case, and he expresses himself as confident of landing the suspect.

Decrease in Traffic.

The discovery of the supposed dynamite has caused consternation among the few trolley patrons and there has been a noticeable decrease in the traffic since.

There is a feeling that the work was done by the strikers or some sympathizer, but President Mahon indignantly denies this accusation. The strikers on the other hand are positive that it is the work of some street car emissary or the strike breakers who have been known to practice this sort of work to turn public wrath against the strikers.

District Organizer Fitzgerald says it is strange that of the three sticks discovered not one exploded. The police are of the opinion that the dynamite was a joke and would not explode anyway. Experts, however, state that after an examination they find the stick a combination of poor nitro-glycerine and ordinary pulp.

Extra Police on Duty.

Saturday is regarded by the authorities as a day auspicious for violence and demonstration and accordingly a large force of officers was on duty during the day and at night all the available reserve police were on duty. No trouble was reported, although a number of noisy crowds congregated on the corners. These were quickly dispersed to prevent any possible mischief.

Four more desertions from the union ranks have been reported, but on the whole the men are firm in their convictions and trust their leaders implicitly. The active campaign has been started and they will put up a strenuous fight against the railroad.

President Gompers has not yet answered the request to be present at the mass meeting Tuesday night, but it is pretty certain that he will be on hand to encourage the men. The local unions continue to contribute to the support of the cause. An appeal will be sent to every city in New England.

CONNERS PREDICTS HEARST WILL BE ONLY NOMINEE.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 4.—William J. Conners to-day engaged rooms for Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, in the Iroquois Hotel for the Democratic State convention.

All the Buffalo hotels are receiving requests for accommodations from Democratic leaders and intended delegates and the prospects are for a crowded house at convention time.

Mr. Conners returned to Buffalo last night. He was asked to discuss ex-Judge Alton B. Parker's attempt to question the legality of the election of delegates to the Democratic State convention prior to the formal calling of the convention.

"I am perfectly well satisfied that Judge Parker is an able judge and an able lawyer, but I certainly do not believe he is a successful politician. The men elected as delegates to the State convention will be their own judges as to the men they believe should be named for Governor of the State.

"The only way Parker has a chance to beat Hearst is for him to declare himself a candidate. We would all greatly welcome such a statement from the lips of the former candidate for President.

"Mr. Hearst will have enough delegates before the convention is called to insure his nomination and I believe his will be the only name mentioned before the convention. I predict one of the most enthusiastic conventions ever held in the State which will be followed by the election of Mr. Hearst by the largest majority ever given a candidate in the Empire State."

MRS. J. R. SOLEY IN RUNAWAY PERIL

Good Horsemanship of Her Coachman Saves Her at Newport.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 4.—What threatened to be a serious runaway accident here to-day was prevented by the good horsemanship of the coachman who was driving for Mrs. James Russell Soley. A rubber tire came off the forward wheel of the trap and rolled against the horse, which started on a mad race past the Casino. The spectators held their breath, expecting every minute to see the occupants hurled to the ground from the swaying carriage. After a quarter-mile run the coachman managed to regain control of the spirited animal. Mrs. Soley is being congratulated by her friends upon her narrow escape from serious and possibly fatal injuries.

HAGGINS BUYS THE FINE WAKEHURST PLACE AT NEWPORT

Magnificent Villa of James J. Van Alen Becomes Property of Millionaire Westerner.

New York, Aug. 4.—Wakehurst, the magnificent Newport estate of James J. Van Alen which has been reputed to be on the market for over a year, is said to have been sold to Millionaire James B. Haggin. Mr. and Mrs. Haggin spent several days last week in looking the property over. It is said they were well satisfied with the building and spacious grounds and a confirmation of the sale will be had in a few days.

Ever since his marriage to beautiful Pearl Voorhies of Versailles, Ky., in 1897 Mr. Haggin has been slowly migrating east ward. His wonderful horse breeding establishment, the Rancho del Paso, in California, where many of America's greatest thoroughbreds first saw the light of day, was abandoned and the stock transferred to Elmendorf Stud in Kentucky. New York property was eagerly sought by the millionaire turf man, who purchased many pieces of business real estate here in addition to a handsome home at No. 587 Fifth avenue.

The Haggins have been spending the Summer at Newport occupying Arleigh, the Platt villa, corner of Parker and Bellevue avenues. Mr. Haggin has stated several times during the Summer his intention of making the famous Rhode Island watering place his permanent Summer residence.

Wakehurst was dismantled a year ago, when Mr. Van Alen followed the example of the expatriated American William Waldorf Astor and sought a residence in England. The Van Alen estate is situated in the Ochre Point district near the Cornelius Vanderbilt Court and Twombly villas. The estate is taxed on a valuation of $272,000. It is believed that the price set upon it is in excess of twice that sum.

ARREST SUSPECT IN PLOT TO SLAY ITALY'S MONARCH

New York Police Catch Alleged Anarchist With Deadly Bomb Concealed in Satchel.

New York, Aug. 4.—Suspected of being an anarchist emissary whose mission is to murder King Victor Emanuel, Graciano Tamalara, an Italian who was to have sailed on the White Star liner Arctic today, is a prisoner in Hoboken. In a satchel which Tamalara carried was found a deadly bomb of high explosive power.

The valise was found on the pavement at Willow and Twelfth streets last night by a policeman. He waited until the Italian came along and picked up the satchel and then arrested him. In police court Tamalara admitted the ownership of the satchel.

He first said he was taking the contents to a friend in Italy, but later changed this to state that some one must have put the dynamite in the satchel as a joke. He was remanded until Monday while the police investigate.

CULLOM WINS IN PRIMARIES OVER YATES FOR SENATE

Chicago Has "Dry" Day Under New Law With Forfeiture Provision.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Late returns from the city primary elections confirm the earlier forecast that Cullom wins for United States Senator. Congressmen Mann and Lorimer are also to be returned. Senator Cullom's plurality is somewhat reduced from the early estimate of 20,000, the figures now showing somewhat better than 15,000.

From Springfield and Jacksonville comes reports that the returns from the state outside of Chicago also show Senator Cullom leading by a very safe margin over former Governor Richard C. Yates.

The city was "dry" as a result of the new law imposing forfeiture of license for violations.

CHIME OF BELLS FOR VANDERBILT'S PLACE

Will Peal Out Music at the New Oakland Farm Training Ring.

Newport, Aug. 4.—Every inhabitant of Portsmouth, R. I., took deep and personal interest to-day in the arrival of a large set of chime bells for Alfred Vanderbilt's new training ring at Oakland Farm, now called Vanderbiltville by the irreverent and waggish. The set of chimes is declared to be by the knowing and those who say that they speak by the book, the largest and most complete in the world. The people of Portsmouth are eagerly awaiting the setting up of the bells.

TO FIGHT EXCESSIVE STREET CAR CHARGE

Clinton, Aug. 4.—A vigorous fight will be inaugurated against the Worcester Consolidated street railroad for charging excessive fare at the Selectmen's meeting Monday. The point at issue is a five-cent charge for passengers who ride less than a hundred yards. The people are determined to force the reduction else they threaten to revoke the road's franchise.

PROVIDENCE PLANS BIG LABOR PARADE

Providence, R. I., Aug. 4.—Hopes of saving the government steam collier Nero, which went ashore on Devil's Ditch, off Block Island, Tuesday, are almost abandoned. The pounding she has been subjected to by the heavy seas has opened large holes in her hull. Hundreds of tons of coal have been dumped overboard.

IDENTIFIED, SHE DENIES HER FRIENDS.

Lowell, Aug. 4.—Learned men of science will join efforts with devoted relatives and loyal friends in solving the psychological problem of [illegible]

AS SHE WAS FOUND ON STEPS OF LOWELL NORMAL SCHOOL.

Three Personalities of Lowell Woman

AS SARAH WILSON
Found on steps of Lowell Normal School, nearly frozen to death on a cold day in March.

AS MRS. ALICE WALKER
Found by roadside in North Saugus. Said she was in pursuit of Sarah Wilson (her other personality), who, she said, hated her.

AS MARGARET KELLEY
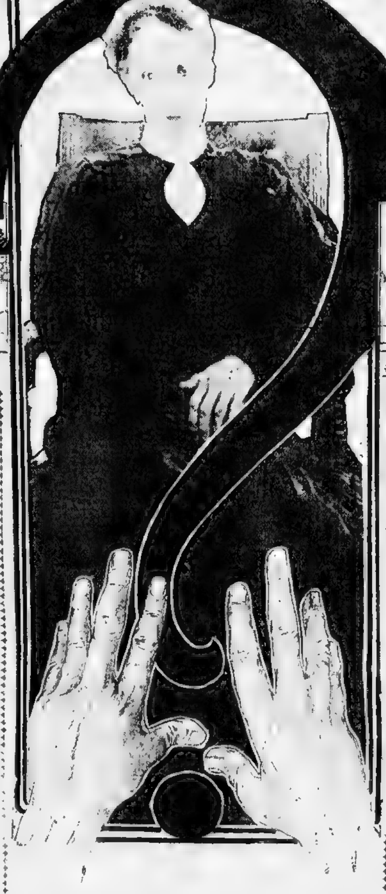
Was found wading in Merrimac River and denied all knowledge of "Sarah Wilson" or "Mrs. Alice Walker."

AS MRS ALICE WALKER FOUND BY ROADSIDE IN NORTH SAUGUS



WILL THE HANDS OF HYPNOTISM FULLY SOLVE THE STRANGE MYSTERY OF THIS WOMAN'S MIND?

AS MARGARET KELLY FOUND WADING IN MERRIMAC RIVER →

personality presented by the case of Susan Norris, who insists that she is Margaret Kelly.

Dr. Morton Prince of Boston, whose biographical study of Christian Beauchamp under the title "The Dissociation of Personality," has been adopted as an authority on the abnormal phenomena of multiple personalities, has become interested in the mysterious woman at the City Farm, and has expressed a desire to see and talk with her.

Other doctors of repute have volunteered to help try to restore her identity, and her family, represented by a sister, Mrs. Annie Barr, and a brother, John Norris, both of Tyngsboro, are considering the value of hypnotism as a memory awakening power.

Besieged by Visitors.

In the meantime Margaret Kelly is besieged with visitors, all of whom identify her as Susan Norris, call her "Susie" and fail utterly in arousing a spark of memory.

Scarcely an hour in the day passes that Margaret Kelly is not called from the sewing room to receive her former friends in the reception room. The result is always the same.

Every one recognizes her. She sees only strangers. [illegible] the past is recalled. She remembers nothing except what has happened since her fourth day's residence at the City Farm, when she found herself in the hospital, weak and ill, the result of [illegible] in the Merrimac, of which she had no recollection.

I saw and talked with this woman of mystery this afternoon just after two old friends had visited her.

Visitors Knew Her.

The visitors knew her at once, though they said she is much thinner and more feeble than when they last saw her in March.

"Why, Susie, it's you all right," said one of them.

"I'm glad it's me," replied Margaret Kelly, "but I never saw you."

Susan Morris or Margaret Kelly as she insists on being called is a woman fifty years old. She is of medium height and painfully thin.

Her face is broad at the brow and narrow at the chin, which recedes in sharp contrast to her projecting upper jaw. Her greyish black hair is parted in the middle and waves crisply.

Voice Low and Well Modulated.

Margaret Kelly, like the woman of refinement and education Susan Morris is, uses perfect English and frames her sentences with peculiar charm.

Every now and then some bright sally or keen bit of wit surprises one.

"Why do you call yourself Margaret Kelley?" I asked.

"It's the only name that comes to me."

"How did you get it?" she glanced at me in amusement.

"Why, the same way anyone gets a name, I suppose."

"Susan Morris means nothing?"

"I never heard the name until two days ago."

"Do you read?"

"Yes, everything I can get."

"And nothing that you read ever brings back a memory?"

"Once in a while I find a word that I seem to have heard some where before."

"And the name of authors, Shakespeare, Dickens, Thackeray mean nothing?"

She shook her head.

"Why should they?" she asked. "Do people usually read their books?"

"Yes, Susan M[illegible] probably did," I replied.

She smiled [illegible]

"If I'm not [illegible] Kelly, I don't know who I am [illegible] I would like to find out and stop [illegible] this talk, and all these faces [illegible]"

I drew closer [illegible]

"Listen [illegible] you remember any holidays [illegible] Christmas mean to you?"

"What Is Christmas?"

"Christmas," she repeated slowly. "Christmas. What is Christmas?"

"Don't you [illegible] ever seen a big evergreen tree [illegible] with candles and glittering [illegible] and laden with Christmas [illegible]"

Her face [illegible] Deep wrinkles came [illegible] forehead between the eyes [illegible] brought back some forgotten [illegible] the past?

Was the poor [illegible] brain struggling to fill some [illegible] head, and stretched her arms [illegible]

"No," she [illegible] "I don't know it."

"And you never [illegible] up your stockings on Christmas [illegible]"

"What for?" she asked with the interest of a child.

"Why, for presents?" I said. She laughed heartily.

"We hang our stockings up to dry," she answered.

[illegible] she said.

It was [illegible] her previous visitors had told of her generosity. [illegible] that Susan Morris gave to her just before leaving that fateful day last March ostensibly for North [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] of the City Farm.

Nearly [illegible] was familiar to her. She [illegible] and stated them, calling them [illegible] sweet peas, nasturtiums, geraniums.

Yet she could [illegible] remember having seen them [illegible] names "just came to her."

When she first went to the Farm, she declared she did not know what a needle was and had never [illegible]

Sewed With Skill.

Yet given the materials, she sewed with unusual skill, knowing how to cut and fashion garments.

Once or twice she declared that the songs sung in chapel sounded as though she had heard them before. She has never been to the service.

Yet Susan Norris was a devout church-woman, an attendant at St. Ann's Episcopal Church.

"If you had a lot of money and your freedom what would you do?" was one question asked this strange and strangely [illegible] woman.

"What do you call lots of money?"

"Enough to gratify all your wishes."

"How much would that be?"

"It depends upon what you needs are."

"How [illegible] I don't know [illegible] for nor what things cost."

"Would you buy fine clothes, or books, or would you travel or what would you do?"

"I would buy some new clothes like other people wear," she admitted. "I notice the people who come here to see me wear clothes different from mine. And I like to read. I've read all the books I've found here. What is travel?"

"Going about to different places."

She shrugged her shoulders indifferently.

"How do I know [illegible] any where."

Soon to Go Home.

In a few days "Margaret Kelly" will go to Susan Norris' old home, open Susan Norris' trunk, look over its contents and wear Susan Norris' [illegible]

CHANGES IN HER IDENTITY A STUDY FOR SCIENTISTS

Sarah Norris seems but one personality [illegible] time and to lose knowledge of her others when she is given over to the controlling obsession. When identified by brother, sister and neighbors she could not remember [illegible] or her real name. She was then "Margaret Kelly," who was found wading in the Merrimac River [illegible]

[illegible] when found half frozen on the steps of the Lowell High School one [illegible] March, she was "Sarah Wilson." When she was found to be tend[illegible] in North Saugus, she spoke of Sarah Wilson [illegible] person whom she [illegible] of persecut[illegible]

So [illegible] by her state[illegible] she did not [illegible] that she herself was also Sarah Wilson. Nor [illegible] than that she was "Mrs. Alice Walker," a [illegible] personality.

The self-hypnotism involved in both cases may [illegible] illustrated in the [illegible] of some of the Salem "witches" and other persons who in the [illegible] were thought [illegible] of demoniac possession. It would appear from ancestral record that [illegible] more [illegible] personality [illegible] at least to [illegible] it.

MAD CAT BITES BOYS, ATTACKS WOMAN

Providence, Aug. 4.—A mad cat, supposed to have been bitten by a dog afflicted with rabies, attacked Raymond Drysdale, eight years old, of South Boston, who is visiting here, and bit him severely in the hand. His brother, Louis H., tried to tear the animal away, and was scratched on the face. The screams of the lads drew a crowd, which chased the cat down the street, where it bit a woman in the ankle. The feline was shot by an officer, and will be sent to Boston for examination for rabies germs.

OIL TRUST ON TRIAL FOR LIFE

Government Probers to Stand Legal Fight to Kill Great Octopus.

PRISON THREAT FOR GREAT TRUST LEADERS

Rockefeller, Rogers and Lieutenants to Be Tried in Chicago Court.

RAILROAD HEADS MUST ANSWER FOR REBATES

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Monday morning the Standard Oil Company will face the first systematic and determined effort ever made by the United States government to break up its monopoly in the oil trade. This effort results from instructions from Washington that cut short the vacation periods of attorneys and officials and brought them scurrying home to prepare for the sitting of the grand jury before which will be placed charges, not only reaching at the throat of the oil trust, but at all railroads and railroad officials who have been connected with the making of rates and agreements under which the Standard has been enabled to undersell its competitors in a vast field.

It is the avowed purpose of the government to indict, if possible, all of the officials of the Trust, including John D. Rockefeller, but it is an open question as to the ability of the district court for the northern district of Illinois to reach the great father of the octopus with its drag net.

Great Array of Probers.

For ten days attorneys and special agents for the government have been at work on the evidence. Assistant Attorney General Oliver E. Pagin came from Washington to take charge of the work. He was followed by T. M. Schindler, special agent for the Department of Commerce and Labor. A day or two later J. J. Sullivan, U. S. District Attorney of Cleveland, dropped in, and with District Attorney C. B. Morrison, Assistant District-Attorney Francis Hanchett and Frank B. Kellogg, special counsel for the government, a formidable array was presented.

Quite unexpectedly, the attorneys changed front in their ideas or procedure, and whereas they had started with the idea of presenting an "information" to Judge Bethea, as the basis of a misdemeanor prosecution founded upon uncollected storage charges due by the Standard Oil to the Lake Shore Railroad, a special Grand Jury was summoned to meet Monday for a general investigation. It was stated that a second Grand Jury would be drawn to sit August 14, for an investigation of even broader matters than those to be submitted to the first.

These charges are to be probed:

Illegal granting of rebates to the Standard Oil;

Granting rebates by device to the Standard Oil;

Failure to collect storage charges on oil kept at Chicago.

Making a secret combination, known as the "grand junction combination," for discriminating favorably to the Standard Oil in shipments extending from the Atlantic coast, south of Mason and Dixie's line, to the Mississippi;

Making a secret discriminatory arrangement for shipments to East St. Louis, controlling that trade west of the Mississippi and south of a point on the Pacific coast south of San Francisco, extending through Colorado, Kansas and Missouri;

Absorption of switching charges by carriers on shipments made from Whiting, Ind., through the Chicago switching district, to St. Paul, Milwaukee and many other points not named;

to the Standard Oil so as to show the actual net charge of the service to that trust;

And, most important and equally difficult, the charge that the oil trust and the railroads conspired to create a monopoly in restraint of trade, or attempted to create such a monopoly.

$20,000 for Fine.

The punishment of these offences will take in fines of from $1000 to $20,000 in the rebate cases, and an additional penalty of not more than one year in prison on the monopoly issues.

While the investigation has been known as the Standard Oil case, the charges not only touch the oil trust, but take in almost all the railroads centring in the city of Chicago. There is prospect for the indictment of traffic officials of these corporations as well as the corporations, and the attorneys hope to get results from their work.

IRELAND'S HOPE IN LIBERAL'S HOME RULE PLANS.

BITTER OPPOSITION IS EXPECTED FROM LORDS.

Imperfect in Details but Will Be Taken as Entering Wedge Toward Victory.

GOVERNMENT MAJORITY BACK OF NEW REFORM

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Aug. 4.—The Irish leaders in the House have received positive [illegible] that with the assembling of Parliament for the session of 1907 the Government will be prepared to introduce and push to passage a sweeping measure of local self-government for Ireland. It will not, however, provide for a separate Parliament.

In almost every other respect it will meet the demands which Gladstone was once willing to grant. It will, of course, be not accepted as wiping out Ireland's grievances, but it will be supported as being the thick edge of the Home rule wedge. It will almost [illegible] be thrown out by the House of Lords and then may come a dramatic constitutional struggle between the Lords and the Commons, with the possible intervention of the King.

Outlook Bright for Ireland.

Whatever may be the result of that intervention, the outlook was never brighter than to-day for the realization of the the hopes of those who have struggled for Irish home rule.

The news of the Government's plans had gone abroad before Parliament arose this afternoon for its Summer recess, and as a consequence there was great rejoicing among the Irish Nationalists. Assurances have been privately given to Mr. Redmond and his colleagues of the intentions of the Campbell-Bannerman ministry.

Between now and next Spring Parliament will reassemble for the Autumn session of a couple of months. The danger point of a delay in bringing forward the measure is regarded as now passed by. Owing to the necessity of the Irish Catholic members bitterly opposing the Government's education bill, there has been a [illegible] possibility of a break between the Liberals and the Nationalists so severe as to cause the Government to refuse to bring in their Irish Government bill. All that is now over and [illegible] the Irish Nationalists are likely to support Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman in anticipation of the bill to be brought in next February.

Bitter Fight By Lords.

Of course no one supposes that the fight for the Irish bill will win without a [illegible]. The Conservatives will use every effort to delay its passage, and it is expected that debates will arouse [illegible] to the highest pitch of [illegible]. Premier Campbell-Bannerman, however, has such an overwhelming majority [illegible] and his forces are so well in hand, that no one doubts his ability to carry his measures [illegible] through the House of Commons. Still it is [illegible] for the opposition to do a great deal of filibustering, and it is believed that the opponents of home rule will [illegible] depend on the Lords, which is absolutely committed against the policy.

Pabst Beer is the Clean Beer

PHYSICIANS have said there is nothing better than Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer as a vitalizing tonic, because they know how it is made. They know the Pabst eight-day malting process and they understand the importance of the perfect purity and cleanliness of the Pabst exclusive process of brewing. They know the healthfulness of the beer produced by the Pabst process. People, and especially doctors, demand that everything they eat and drink be absolutely clean.

Pabst BlueRibbon

Beer is always clean and wholesome. The Pabst brewery is as clean as the cleanest kitchen. In the long process of brewing, Pabst beer never comes in contact with anything unclean. The tubes through which it is run, from the time the malt is mashed until the beer is bottled or kegged, are sterilized to prevent any impurity or uncleanliness. Pabst Beer is not fermented in open vats, as is usual in breweries, but in special Pabst hermetically sealed tanks, into which no air, except pure filtered air ever enters. Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer is not cooled, as is usual, in rooms where men walk in and out, but it is cooled in specially constructed sealed coolers where no hands can touch it, no breath of foul air can taint it. Only filtered air is used to oxygenate it. It is then stored in hermetically sealed storage tanks until science and the test of time pronounce it perfect beer in age, purity and strength.

ROOT, LEAVING RIO, TOASTS BRAZIL.

Secretary Deeply Impressed by Honors Paid Him by the Southern Republic.

BEAUTIFUL DIAMOND PRESENTED MRS. ROOT

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Rio de Janeiro, Aug. 4.—The International American Congress at its session to-day received the report of the committee on the Pan American railway. The committee includes representatives of the countries interested in the road. The Congress then adjourned until Tuesday, when the report of the committee on arbitration will be received.

Secretary of State Root and his party bade farewell to Rio de Janeiro last evening after the most successful visit ever made by a foreign diplomatist to the Brazilian capital. Mr. Root yesterday afternoon gave a reception on board the cruiser Charleston, which was largely attended. Among the guests was President Alves, who boarded the Charleston amid salutes from that vessel and the Argentine cruiser Buenos Ayres. A number of vessels of the Brazilian navy also attended.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Aug 4.—A dispatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Tangier published this afternoon says:

"Highly sensational reports are being received here, causing the utmost excitement. Daily, almost hourly, comes information from the interior of the rapid spread of a violent anti-French agitation.

"The rebels are concentrating their military contingents around Marrakesh (Morocco City), the Southern capital, and there is no doubting a formidable coalition of semi independent vassals has been formed.

"They are clamoring for a holy war and urging the viceroy, Prince Abdul Hafid, to proclaim himself sultan. The situation is more critical than it has been for thirty years."

SIR ROBERT HART STICKS TO POST

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Aug 4.—Answering a question in the House of Commons to-day, Foreign Secretary Grey said the Government had no reason to believe the report of the intended resignation of Sir Robert Hart, inspector general of the Chinese imperial customs. The secretary had been informed by Charge d'Affaires Carnegie of the British Legation at Pekin of the new instructions given to the inspector general of customs, and they did not appear to be contrary to the assurances given by China that the administration of the customs will continue as before.

SWISS HOTELS CUT THE TIP SCHEDULE

Adopt a Fixed Tariff of Ten Per Cent. of the Amount of the Guests' Bills.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Geneva, Aug 4.—Tipping having been raised to exaggerated rates by American visitors to Switzerland, the hotel proprietors have combined to bring them down to a reasonable level, and have framed a fixed tariff.

This tariff which will shortly come into force regulates the tipping system on a basis of ten per cent of the hotel bills. Ten years ago there was a five per cent system, but Americans, who do not realize the moderate cost of living outside of hotels in Europe, have been tipping hotel servants on the American scale, forcing the customary rate up to about twenty five per cent.

The hotel proprietors believe that the reduced tipping rate will attract more visitors to their establishments, and so in the end benefit the employes.

SOCIALISTS OUSTED IN SQUATTERCLAIM

Colony That Seized Strip Is Put Off Forcibly by Police and Council.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Aug 4.—The Socialist squatters who seized a plot of unoccupied land several weeks ago, with the avowed intention of cultivating it, were to-day ejected from the premises by a force of mounted and foot police and ten borough councillors. The tent they had erected, as well as the red flag they had raised above it, was removed. The leader clung to the flag until he was forcibly ejected, but his followers left quietly.

The land seized was in Plaistow, West Ham. The squatters hoped to raise a small harvest on the land and were living meanwhile on contributions made by benevolent persons.

NO CONSUMPTION IF YOU RINSE OUT MOUTH

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Paris, Aug 4.—Dr. Maurice Letulle appeals to the Parisian population to take the following elementary steps as a safeguard against tuberculosis:

"Every person should make it a duty never to sit down to the table without washing the hands, no matter how clean they may look. The lips also should be washed and the mouth rinsed out before eating. In this manner the dust which may have lodged on the lips and hands, and which generally contains germs of tuberculosis, is got rid of, and as it has been proven that tuberculosis is communicated through the intestines, you are pretty safe if you don't swallow dust."

RAILROAD OPENED HAVING 728 BRIDGES

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Vienna, Aug 4.—A railroad with 728 bridges has just been opened by the Archduke Franz Ferdinand. The reason for the multiplicity of bridges is the mountainous country through which the railroad runs. It connects Trieste with Assling, passing through the Alps. It is the first section of a new railroad which is to connect Southern Germany with Trieste, passing over the Alps.

Besides the 728 bridges there are 47 tunnels on this wonderful road. The bridge over the Isonzo River, one of the forty, is the largest. It has a span of 270 feet and is the largest stone arched railroad bridge in the world.

SUBURBAN REAL ESTATE IS ACTIVE.

EDGAR VAN ETTEN BUYS FRAMINGHAM ESTATE

There were fewer transactions than usual in the real estate in the city proper last week but the market could not be called a dull one. Country residences, suburban dwellings and vacant lots were in fair demand. Farms were especially active.

Papers have gone to record conveying title to the home estate of William H. Hunt, located on Monument street, Concord, to the Concord School. This is one of the most attractive estates in that historic town. Located on the top of Punkatasset Hill it commands an attractive view of the surrounding country. The land runs from Monument street in a gentle slope to the Concord River. The estate comprises a mansion house of fourteen rooms, large stable and outbuildings, twenty acres of well tilled land, hundreds of rare fruit trees of many varieties. It adjoins the estate of Dr. Cheney, on which a magnificent dwelling is now being erected. It is the purpose of Mr. [illegible] who at present [illegible] Concord [illegible] tory School [illegible] Park [illegible] private school [illegible] paid was $18,000. The Edward T. Harrington Company negotiated the sale. This is the second farm sold [illegible] the Hunt estate within a short time, it having sold recently the Bigelow farm, so called [illegible].

Buys Dairy and Fruit Farm.

Ex-Mayor Henry F. Bothfeld of Newton has taken title to dairy and fruit farm located on Apple street, Sherborn, comprising some seventy acres with the usual farm buildings, stock and tools. The property is assessed for over $7,000. The price paid was considerably in advance of this figure. Mrs. Anna Dearth was the grantor.

Charles S. Parent, South Boston, has bought a one family house located on Park street, Medford, belonging to the Eliza Hunt estate. [illegible] were made through Brooks [illegible].

Agreements have been signed for the sale of five parcels of real estate in South Acton for the executors of the will of the late Charles A. Harrington. The Edward T. Harrington Company acted as the brokers.

Van Etten Buys Estate.

In Framingham the heirs of William F. Gregory have sold the Gregory homestead in Prospect street to Edgar Van Etten, vice president of the New York Central Railroad Company, general manager of the Boston & Albany Railroad Company. This is one of the most attractive of Framingham's high class estates. The house was built a few years ago by the late Mr. Gregory at a cost of $[illegible]. F. F. Leland was the broker.

In Melrose, Mary L. Tomlin has sold her estate No. 20 Poplar street, consisting of a dwelling house and about 7,000 feet of land. The purchaser, who buys for a home, is a Boston man whose name will be given when the deed passes. Thomas-Rivers Company negotiated the sale through the Melrose agency.

Floyd & Tucker Sales.

Mrs. H. E. McDowell, executrix of the Dr. H. S. Soule estate, has disposed of the several parcels belonging to that estate, consisting of a frame house, stable and 10,998 square feet of land on Worth... street, two houses and [illegible] square feet of land on Ocean View street and 7,[illegible] feet of land on [illegible] street. Floyd & Tucker were the purchasers. A dwelling house and 15,000 square feet of land at the corner of Pleasant street and Woodside avenue, owned by Edwin S. Baker of San Diego, Cal., [illegible] sold to Miss Wilhelmina McDonald of Winthrop. Miss Agnes F. Rowe has sold 5,000 square feet of land on Sagamore avenue, Winthrop Highlands, to F. E. Chase of Boston. Floyd & Tucker were the brokers in each of the sales mentioned.

Some Suburban Dealings.

The Edward T. Harrington Company reports the sale through their Mansfield agency of the [illegible] Hill farm, Foxboro, together with all the personal property, such as [illegible] tools, etc. This is one of the [illegible] farms in this section [illegible] twenty-one acres of rich land [illegible] cultivation, house of nine rooms [illegible] and outbuildings. The new owner, whose name is withheld, will occupy [illegible]. [illegible] papers have gone to record conveying the property [illegible] No. 102 Highland avenue, Somerville. The purchaser [illegible] Harrington [illegible] for occupancy. The property consists of [illegible] of six rooms and lot of land containing [illegible] feet [illegible] $7,100.

BRALEY GIRL MURDERED, SAY RELATIVES, MYSTERY IN CASE DEEPENS DAILY

Strange Woman in Black Seen Near Place Where Girl Disappeared Is Sought by Police.

Belfast, Me., Aug. 4.—Still convinced that Clara Braley did not commit suicide, and hoping that the mystery of her disappearance and death may be cleared up, her relatives are determined to continue their investigation.

Not only the relatives, but many of the friends of the dead girl refuse to believe that she took her own life. One of her aunts, Mrs. Jennie Clement, is an adherent of the suicide theory, however. She declares that Clara had brooded over her troubles, real or fancied, and had often complained that she had no home like other girls, and had not much to live for.

Strange Man With Phial.

Despite this, the belief that she was slain is growing. A fresh stimulus was given the investigation by the story of Frederick Baker. Baker said that a man whom he knows, with a companion, a stranger, called at his house on the evening on which Clara Braley disappeared and asked for his son, Alma Baker.

"It was about 7 o'clock," said Mr. Baker. "The strange man stood across the road [illegible] the bushes [illegible] the other man [illegible] and tried to get my boy to go with him. Alma refused, and the man took a phial from his pocket [illegible]. This all [illegible]. The [illegible] was blue [illegible] on the cloth.

Alma Baker, the son, denies his father's story, and declares that it is a product of [illegible].

Another element of mystery has been added [illegible] by the appearance of a strange woman in the woods within two hundred feet of the spot where Clara Braley was seen last. [illegible] tall and dressed in black, [illegible] has been seen twice near the place and has used every effort to avoid being observed.

Coroner Coombs has visited the upper bridge and examined the marks which many believe were made by Clara Braley's shoes upon the bridge rail. At the Rollins house [illegible] shoes of the dead girl for [illegible] tests. [illegible] on the right shoe fitted the marks [illegible] those on the left did not correspond, and the coroner was not convinced. Had the test been decisive the suicide theory would have been fully established.

Theory of Kidnapping.

Another theory which has developed in the mystery is that the kidnappers kept the body back in the woods all night, trying to restore consciousness. Despairing of success they threw the body into the water [illegible] the first following ebb tide.

[illegible] citizens are roundly condemning the [illegible] for not having an autopsy performed upon the body and settling the point definitely whether she was murdered or not. It is even now not too late, according to medical men, to hold an autopsy.

HANS, THE GERMAN SHORTSTOP

By William F. Kirk

ABOUT Hans Wagner—may his bits increase!
Awoke one night from a dream of peace,
And glancing toward his favorite Morris chair
Saw an angelic rooter writing there.
"Himmel!" said Wagner, "vat it iss I see?
Vy shudt an angels come to wisit me?"
Then to the angel, with a trace of fear,
"Vat iss de writings you vass writing here?"
The angel paused a moment, then replied:
"The names of players who have never tried
To bait an umpire or to start a row—
I have a list of forty players now."
"And iss my name among dose present yet?"
Or haf you left me in der coldt und vet?"
"I'm sorry," said the angel, "it's a shame,
I didn't have the nerve to write your name."
"Vell, anyhow," said Wagner, with a grin,
"Write me as von vat alvays lufs to vin."

The angel wrote, then beat it. The next night
He handed Hans a scroll in black and white—
The names of five great shortstops—just the best;

WILLIS'S LONE PASS TO BRIDWELL RESULTS IN PIRATES' DEFEAT

BY ALEXANDER C. SULLIVAN.

"Little Cy" Young, the [illegible] pitcher of the Boston National League corps, performed a great feat at the South End Grounds yesterday afternoon by winning the first victory of the season for the local club over the Smoketowners by a score of 1 to 0.

It was a great game, [illegible] more interesting [illegible] seen in the Hub this season, and three thousand fans enjoyed it to their hearts' content.

At one o'clock it did not look as though there would be a ball game, as at that hour the rain was falling rather heavily. About two o'clock the rain stopped and the sun came out for a long enough period to induce the baseball management to play the game.

The Showers Held Off.

When the contest started it was so sultry that the fans had to divest their coats and hats. The sky became clouded again but Jupiter Pluvius had the pleasure of the fans at heart and held off the showers.

The conditions over head and under foot were not conducive to a fast game, but despite all contrary elements the game resulted in one of the most interesting and closest contests seen locally in many a day.

Against the crack "Little Cy" Young who was sprung upon the fans at the last moment, as it was generally thought Pfeffer would twirl, was "Vic" Willis, last season a member of the dire line squad of the Boston Nationals.

By the way the two pitchers warmed up before the game it was evident that they were in good condition and ready to pitch the game of their lives. Willis was anxious to show the Boston fans that he still had a good game left in him, and Young, who has not been blessed of late, wanted to illustrate to the Hub baseball public that his deviation from the column of games won was but temporary.

It was a tussle of giants all the way through. Young, the railroad man, he with the broad shoulders and mighty biceps, never was in better form and he worked so hard to bring the dove of victory to a Hub roost, that he was a sheet of perspiration after the game.

Willis's Fatal Pass.

Vic Willis only gave one base on balls during the game, and that was his undoing, as Bridwell, the first man up, who had received the free transportation, was moved to second, when Tenney scratched a hit, went to third on Brain's sacrifice, and scored on Bates's out.

The Bostons got six hits off the visiting pitcher, at least four of them being very scratchy.

Five hits, with a total of six, were made off the home slabster. Leach and Clarke were the best stickers for the Pirates, getting two apiece. It was Ritchey who connected for their other hit, a corking single to right.

The visitors came very near tieing the score in the fourth inning. Manager Fred Clarke led off with a double to left, which Howard prevented from being a triple only by the fastest kind of sprinting. Wagner struck out and the fans went wild with enthusiasm. Honus certainly made a desperate attempt to connect with the sphere, and his strenuous efforts only served to convulse the fans.

Nealon, the next man up, flied to Bates, and Clarke was held at second. Ganley was passed, and things looked pretty gloomy for Boston. It was then that the best play of the day was made, and one of the snappiest in the history of the pastime. Ritchey lunged the ball to right for a single and it was a cinch that Clarke would score. Dolan tossed the ball on a lead line to Needham, who tossed to Brain, and Clarke was obliged to go back to third. Brain without a second's hesitation whipped the ball to Bridwell, who caught Ganley just rounding third. So swift was the play that the fans could hardly realise that the Pittsburgs had been retired.

All Kinds of Fielding Stunts.

There were all kinds of fancy fielding stunts accomplished by both sides. Nealon caught a liner with his gloved hand which looked good for three bases and two runs. That was a hair-raiser. Bridwell at short played as fast a game as ever put up by Freddy Parent, that other clever Boston shortstop. The playing of all the other members of both teams was also exceptionally fast.

There was only one misplay made by each team. Wagner made a poor throw on Young's grounder in the eighth, after a startling stop, which gave the Hub southpaw two bases. Strobel stupidly ran into Bates's territory after Ganley's fly in the ninth, and muffed the leather.

In the opening inning Bridwell was passed. Tenney got a scratch hit to Wagner. Brain sacrificed. Bates grounded out, Wagner to Nealon, scoring Bridwell. Clarke pulled in Howard's fly to short left after a remarkable run.

Boston got two singles in the sixth with one down, but no tallies resulted. Two more singles came in the eighth with one down, but Strobel hit into a double play, Wagner to Ritchey to Nealon.

In the eighth Young hit a swift grounder toward second. Wagner scooped it in on the run and threw to first with one motion, but the aim was bad and Young got to second. Leach threw out Bridwell, Young moving up a base. Tenney hit to the pitcher and Young was caught at the plate. Bates grounded to Leach and Tenney was run down at second. The score.

BETWEEN THE INNINGS.

Tenney made a great play on Beaumont's grounder in the second. The former saw that the Pirate had a good chance making the bag so he slid feet foremost, getting the put-out by a hair.

Young got a tremendous hand when he fanned "Honus" Wagner in the fourth, after Clarke opened the inning with a double.

The Boston players pulled off one of the best plays ever seen on the diamond in the fourth. With two on base, Ritchey singled to right. Dolan threw the ball into the plate, but Clarke ran back to third. Brain just missing him. The Hub third baseman then shot the sphere to Bridwell who tagged Stanley off second, completing a very fast play.

Had Nealon missed Bates's liner in the sixth which he caught with his gloved hand over the bag, it would have meant two runs for Boston.

Wagner started a swift double play on Strobel's grounder in the seventh, tieing up Dolan and Needham, who had previously singled.

NEW YORK, 7; CHICAGO, 4.

New York, Aug. 4.—In a great batting rally this afternoon the New York Nationals took the lead in the fifth inning and were never headed. Mathewson was hit hard by the Chicagos in the sixth and Wiltse relieved him. The latter held the Cubs safe. Score:

LARNED BEATS BEHR IN FAST TENNIS AT NAHANT.

In Doubles, Clothier and Whitman Have a Very Easy Victory.

Nahant, Aug. 4.—Some of the finest tennis ever seen at the Nahant Country Club was witnessed by about 200 of Nahant's Boston colony this afternoon when the finals in both the singles and doubles in the invitation tennis tournament were played off.

In the doubles the outcome was never for a moment to be doubted. M. D. Whitman and W. J. Clothier, who played C. F. Watson, Jr. and F. C. Colston, were superior in every way.

In the singles event, however, the real exhibition was witnessed when Karl Behr was beaten by the champion, W. A. Larned, in a hard fight for the trophy cup. It was a repetition of the challenge at Longwood earlier in the week.

Owing to the rain of the morning, the events were played simultaneously, and in the doubles only two out of three were required to decide the winner. This gave everyone a chance to witness the greater part of the big game.

Behr started his play in an aggressive manner and played Larned for his weak point. Repeatedly he won on shots after he had driven Larned out of position and into the further corner of the court. Larned, while playing a streaky game at times, developed some remarkable tennis in the second and third sets. In the fourth Behr again assumed the aggressive and in the early stages of the fifth he led. With three sets to one against him, Larned went in and won out by some of the prettiest playing he has ever shown. Behr, while still playing a plucky game against the champion, was a perceptable failure. The summary of the day's play was as follows:

Singles, finals.
W. A. Larned defeated K. Behr, 7—5, 6—4, 6—4, [illegible]
Doubles, finals.
W. J. Clothier and M. D. Whitman defeated C. F. Watson Jr., and C. Colston, 6—3, 6—2.

TOBIN, FOOTBALL COACH.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—John Tobin, the gridiron star for the Maroons two seasons ago, announced yesterday that he would be at Salt Lake City College this Fall as physical trainer. In 1905 he held the same position in Tulane College, and during his stay at the New Orleans school brought up the standard of athletics there 100 per cent. He will enter upon his new duty about the middle of September.

EWRY CREATES NEW WORLD'S MARK FOR STANDING JUMP.

Three-Mile Run Was Best Event in Great Athletic Carnival in Gotham.

Special to Boston Sunday American.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Ray C. Ewry, the world's champion standing jumper, broke the world's record in the standing broad jump here at the great athletic carnival for the benefit of the non-sectarian San Francisco orphan asylum fund this afternoon. The old mark was 11 feet 4⅞ inches, and Ewry jumped 11 feet 6 inches.

Secretary James E. Sullivan, of the Amateur Athletic Union, was present when the new record was made, and immediately examined the ground to see if the record would stand. He found that all conditions had been fulfilled and said that the record was good.

Martin J. Sheridan, the world's champion discus thrower, also tried to lower the record in his event, but only succeeded in [illegible] feet 6 inches. This was enough for him to take first place through a scratch, as none of the other competitors with their handicap could equal the mark. No records were broken in the running race as the competitors had to run on the grass and few of them were used to it.

Harvey Cohn and James Sullivan, two athletes who competed in the Olympic games, started in the mile handicap from scratch. There were over fifty starters in the race and the Olympians were unable to pick their way through the big field of contestants.

The best race of the day was the three-mile scratch event. This was won by George V. Bonhag of the Irish American Athletic Club, who was a member of the American Olympic team, in 15m. 25 2-5s. His closest competitors were William Nelson, the Pastime Englishman, and John J. Daly, the great Irish runner. Nelson led the first mile, Daly the second and Bonhag the third, finishing a winner by twenty-five yards over Daly and 100 yards over Nelson.

John Flanagan of the Irish Athletic Club was beaten in the sixteen pound hammer throw by S. P. Gillis of the New York A. C., who threw [illegible] feet 7 inches. Flanagan threw 1[illegible] feet 5 inches, but Gillis had five feet handicap.

GLENVALES WIN OUT.

The Glenvales of Jamaica Plain defeated University City on Cambridge Common 8 to 1, before a large crowd.

Russell of the losers pitched better ball than Rae, but received poor support.

GREER'S CASE TO BE ACTED UPON TO-DAY

The directors of the club do not feel very much encouraged over a favorable verdict but hope for the best as Greer would be a great card for the regatta.

UNIONS TAKE LEAD.

The Unions of City Point defeated the Volunteers of Waltham by the score of 2 to 0. The batteries for City Point were Gill and Carey; for the Volunteers, Heath and Connolly. Gill struck out eleven batsmen and allowed only three safe hits.

Patterson Steady as Clock.

Roy Patterson did the prettiest kind of work in the box, being as steady as a clock at all times. The few hits that Boston got were well spread out, so their chances were indeed slim. On the other hand, Big Bill Dinneen let his head get away from him on one or two occasions and, doubtlessly, for that reason was beaten.

He was handed [illegible] more speed and better curves than Roy [illegible] a little [illegible] clean out a half angered man, and in an instant burst forth with a string of talk that only Dinneen knows how to spout. It was plainly heard by all in the grand stand, but still Bill was not benched. After that Bill weakened a bit. The Sox took advantage of it, and when he came up in the ninth inning Donohue rapped him for the three-bagger, which was followed by Dougherty's [illegible] and the game was over.

Rain fell during the last two innings, but not enough to call the game. The score:

LUNDIN IS VICTOR OVER PASCAL IN MATCH ON MAT AT SCOTS' GAMES

The Scots made merry at their fifty-third annual picnic and games at Caledonian Grove yesterday and from early morn till late in the evening, the sports dear to the hearts of the Highland chiefs were in full swing.

The kilties were in their element and formed in alignment in the morning, marching to the station and thence to West Roxbury to their grounds.

Then the lively things commenced to happen. The first on the program of sport were the games for the members divided into amateur and professional events as there are many prominent Scotch athletes who rank high in the "pro" ranks and they must have their fling.

It was shortly after the noon hour that the big professional games, open to the world, were held on the track and in the arena and with the many special events, including the championship wrestling match between Lundin and Pascal there was a continual performance till the sun went down.

The feature event of the day, which outshadowed all others in way of holding the most intense interest, was the championship wrestling match between Halmar Lundin, the Swedish champion, and Frank Pascal, of St. Louis, and they were after the big purse of $500.

Lundin, who was the burliest of the two, won in two straight falls. It took him twenty-six minutes to get the first fall, and he did the trick with the [illegible] of a crotch and hammerlock hold. After a brief rest they went at it again, and Lundin won in nineteen minutes, getting a half-Nelson and toppling his adversary who fought hard to get away from being downed.

Lundin had the advantage in weight and had previously defeated Pascal, so

Oldtield Beats Bald In Race for $2,000

Washington, Aug. 4.—Barney Oldfield captured the National Sweepstakes, amounting to $2,000 in gold, here to-day from Eddie "Cannon" Bald at the Benning's race course.

In the first heat Bald got the inside and led all the way. Barney let out full speed in the stretch, but was beaten by a foot in 4 minutes and 3 seconds for the three miles.

In the second trial both cars passed under the tape at the same time, making it a dead heat, in 4 minutes and 10 seconds.

The third heat was for one mile, with a moving start, and was nip and tuck all around the track, Oldfield finally winning by a mere length.

In the last and deciding trial for three miles Barney barely won by a foot in 4 minutes and 18 seconds. Summary:

Three Miles Novelty Race, open to fully equipped touring cars, carrying three passengers and driver—Won by C. W. Frank, Pope-Columbia car, second, B. N. Dorsett, Clyde car. Time 6.29.

Five Miles, open to fully equipped cars, listing at $2,000 and over, prize cup—Won by C. W. Frank, Pope-Columbia car; second, A. B. Bell, Thomas machine. Time, 8.43.

ATHLETICS, 8; CLEVELAND, 1

Cleveland, Aug. 4.—Cleveland gave another listless exhibition of baseball this afternoon and for the third consecutive time presented the Athletics with a victory by the score of 8 to 1. Hess pitched a strong game, and with clean or anything like support would have held the Athletics down to one run. In the first inning he struck out three men. Dygert pitched a strong game for the visitors, his fast fielding keeping the Clevelands from scoring more than one run. Monte Cross and Hartsel carried off the fielding honors for the visitors. The smallest Saturday crowd of the season was out, owing to the listless work of the team. Score:

Will Stand Pat on Four-Cylinder Models for 1907. New Plant Nearly Ready.

By Alex Schwalbach.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 4.—This city is located in Wayne County, named after Mad Anthony Wayne, the intrepid American general, leader and patriot, hence the name is singularly appropriate for the Wayne automobile made here. Just now the Wayne automobiles are being constructed in two plants, the old plant in the down town district in Champlain street being in full operation, while part of the new plant on the outskirts of the city, where all the other big makers in Detroit are located, owing to good railroad facilities and large acreage of land, is used for assembling and shipping purposes.

Secretary Roger J. Sullivan of the Wayne Company said that he expected that the new plant would be wholly completed early this fall, when the old plant would be abandoned, which would be a tremendous relief to the company and its workmen, the demand for Wayne cars having long outgrown the facilities of the old shops.

The new plant embraces three acres of land, the buildings [illegible] space of 420 by 60, and three stories in height; three of the main buildings are finished and in complete operation for assembling. The power house is a separate building and furnishes [illegible] separate piece of apparatus in the machine shop, doing away with long lines of belting and shafting, and furnishing the requisite amount of power just where it is most needed. Mr. Sullivan said that next year's models were all ready, and, in fact, the new cars had been ready since July 1, samples of them having been sent to their agents. This, he believed, was in advance of all other makers. Regarding prices, Mr. Sullivan said that they must obviously be higher, because the price of material such as is now demanded in the construction of high class automobiles had materially advanced.

There were three essentials, he thought, most necessary toward the successful building of a successful automobile organization, experience and equipment. They already had the organization, experience they had also already gone through with, and now they proposed, he said, to have an equipment that would be second to none in the way of a plant and tools, and these, combined with their previous experience and their organization, must produce a good automobile in the Wayne. Mr. William Kelley, general manager of the company, said they proposed to stand "pat" on four-cylinder construction, in different sizes and prices, for at least the coming season, abandoning all other models, which they are closing out at a low price, but that when the six-cylinder does prevail they will be ready with it also. He thought it was wise to make haste slowly and educate the public to meet the new demand, and these demands, he thought, led along the line of comfort in the shape and upholstering of the body of the car, the springing of the chassis and attention to minor details.

This he partly instanced by saying that their foot pedals were adjustable, so that either a short or long legged man could use them with the greatest convenience. One of the main difficulties they had this season was the scarcity of good drop forgings, delivered promptly, so that they had arranged to turn out their own drop forgings in the future, giving them the widest range possible in this line, without depending upon other concerns for their supplies. Mr. Kelley further said that to the average observer all automobiles, "like all coons, look alike," but that the main point of difference in automobiles which distinguished them [illegible] from inferiority are materials, labor, purpose and design. Their idea was to [illegible] the best of materials, finest of skilled labor, and to build the car as nearly perfect as possible.

New York has two favorite and popular Kulls—the Kill von Kull, separating Staten Island from the Jersey Shore, and Mr. A. L. Kull of Broad, the manager of the Wayne Company of New York, who, if anything, is better known here than the car he represents. His [illegible] driving of the Wayne car at Ormond-Daytona Beach, at the Vanderbilt races, and everywhere where the New York daily newspapers circulate have made the Wayne car not only locally but nationally famous. It was my good fortune to be in Detroit [illegible] Mr. Kull visited the Wayne factory. Late in the afternoon, when the business of the day had been done, Mr. Kull took me out for a ride through the streets and boulevards in what he called a 50 horse-power tourist Wayne car of 1907 model, but which was really a big gray-colored runabout, and which they had originally intended to enter into the Vanderbilt cup race. Neither of us knew much about the way of the town, and although we were strangers and raced along the boulevard at a fifty mile clip the coppers did not take us in.

By the way, big, fast touring runabouts are all the go in New York just at present, showing that owners are now so proficient as to do away with the services of a chauffeur, thus more nearly approaching the [illegible] sporting conditions which have so long prevailed in the one man horse-drawn trotting wagon. Mr. Kull, in his big 50 Wayne car, was the only New Yorker, and the sole representative of the New York Motor Club who toured from New York to Boston and from Boston to Bretton Woods with the Bay State Automobile Association to greet the Glidden tourists. He also had two of the 1907 Wayne models entered in the hill climbing contest up the famous Crawford Notch, where they performed entirely to his satisfaction, after which the cars leisurely toured back to New York in the rain, where, I understand, they arrived in fine condition to-day.

DEAD CALM MARS CORINTHIAN Y. C. OPEN RACES.

In a decidedly fretful air which diminished and increased times innumerable before the boats were back on their moorings, the last day's racing of the Corinthian Yacht Club's midsummer open series were held over the course yesterday.

There was an unusual number of yachts hovering about the starting line before the preparatory guns were fired, about ninety, but less than three quarters of this number got away. There was little wind blowing, but what there was, coming from the northeast, didn't look as though it would clear the fog that was hanging over the bay. Before the last gun, about 7 o'clock, there were some exciting finishes, however, though there were in the direct opposite of the usual race.

Many classes were held up in a dead calm but a few feet from the finishing line, the dory class especially having a hard time of it. Within a very few yards of the flags, with ten minutes to spare, the little boats were forced to see their time limit expire, the first ones being within ten seconds of the line.

The winners in the classes which finished were: Class M, Cricket; 22-footer, Marie L.; Sonder Klasse, Hayseed III.; Class Q, Aristes; Hingham Y. C. specials, Hee-Haw; Special Handicap, Muleyah Car; Canoes, Banchee.

The presentation of the cups to the winners of the midsummer series was made at 9 o'clock by the racing committee. A smoke talk was given to the visiting yachtsmen.

On the sail-off for the trophy presented by the Corinthian Y. C. to the winner of the German American class the Manchester, Boardman's boat, won over the Sally VIII. of Lawrence Percival yesterday morning by 1 minute and 9 seconds.

Pascal Thrown by Lundin at the Scots' Games

was confident of repeating his victory. He let Pascal do at first the heavy work and then suddenly took the offensive and the exhausted [illegible] was easily vanquished. Pascal said after the match that he was handicapped by Lundin's greater bulk, and would challenge him, declaring that heavy as Lundin was and he scaled 210 pounds he could not throw him twice in the hour.

Lundin's Skill Evokes Applause.

Sports of All Kinds at St. Anne's Field Day

The annual reunion and field day of St. Anne's Church, Somerville, at Combination Park, Medford, Saturday, Aug. 11, promises to be one of the most successful ever held by this church. The committee in charge have worked hard to make it a winner, and every one attending is assured of a good time as there will be something doing all the time, including dancing in the large hall all day and evening, step dancing for the old folks; African dodgers, cane ringing, etc., and all kinds of athletic games, horse racing, and tug-of-war.

The tug-of-war is an open contest and promises to be one of the features of the day. Division 37, A. O. H., of Charlestown, Division 4, of Charlestown, the Granite Cutters of Quincy, and Charlie Black's crackajack team of the Central Labor Union of Medford have already entered.

The baseball game between the K. of C., Chelsea Council of Chelsea and the Santa Maria Council of Malden, will be an interesting event, it being a scheduled game in the K. of C. League. There will also be a loving cup given to the winning team.

Cups, medals and watches will be given the winners of the various field and track sports, which include 100-yard dash, 440-yard run, mile run, sack race, obstacle race, three-legged race, greased pig race, (prize the pig), putting sixteen pound shot, and potato race. These events are open and entries may be made to Edward C. McMahon, No. 572 Medford street, Somerville.

Mrs. A. E. Porter of Arlington, the well-known horsewoman, will give an exhibition of fancy driving.

BIG AL KAUFMANN WILL BE IN TIP-TOP SHAPE FOR HIS BOUT WITH FRED BRADLEY

HIGHLAND LAKE, Aug. 4.—It's an ideal spot at Mike Deveney's training quarters, where Al Kaufmann, the giant Californian, is now preparing himself for his fifteen-round bout with Fred Bradley of Roxbury, at the Lincoln A. C. next Tuesday night.

With Kaufmann is Bob Deady and Harry Foley, and between them they see that the youthful fighter tends to business.

Kaufmann thinks that this place compares favorably with any in the West as a conditioning ground.

"I like it here," said Kaufmann. "The air is grand, and I have found the climate just right. The roads, too, are fine, and I have not been troubled with my feet, as in the past. In Philadelphia I found the water bothered me, but it is different here.

"How do I figure on my chances with Bradley? Why, I am not taking any chances of being unfit, as you never can tell what is coming."

The Coast athlete is a wonderful specimen of mankind. Big and strong, with a body as hard as nails from head to foot, he is a husky looking piece of humanity.

He never worries about any coming contests and seems to take naturally to training and likes it. He has not reached his majority yet and has to be watched, as he is inclined to indulge in candy and other tidbits at most any time, but that is the limit of his dissipation, as he neither smokes nor drinks.

His daily routine is not tiresome, as it consists of a run on the road of four miles before breakfast and then he takes a plunge in the mill pond not far from the house. In the afternoon it is more travelling on the road with Harry Foley and there is no loafing for any part of the distance. When he reaches headquarters he is ready to take on Foley for several rounds and does some bag punching.

Occasionally he stops at the village smithy and does a turn at the forge, as he is perfectly at home with the sledge and leather apron, as he served an apprenticeship at the forge not so many months ago.

He is always ready for any kind of sport, and any hard work in sight the crew always turns over to the big fellow.

The big Coast boy is delighted with his surroundings and he has no greater admirer than Mike Deveney, his genial host, who thinks the big "kid" a worthy successor to Jeffries.

He never tires telling of the remarkable traits that Kaufmann has and his many [illegible] qualities.

Many of the villagers take an interest in the stranger fighter and are attracted by the absence of anything that is usually attached to the prizefighter and his career.

He is purely a student of nature and appears happy when in the midst of his rustic environment and perfectly contented, though many miles from his native State.

BRADLEY MAY PROVE SURPRISE TUESDAY NIGHT

There will be a crowded amphitheatre at Chelsea Tuesday night, for there is great curiosity to see Kaufmann, who is touted as the coming world champion. Opposed to the giant from the Golden Gate, will be Fred Bradley of Roxbury, whose successful work in this vicinity during the past year has made him a favorite in local sporting circles.

There will be a big delegation at the ring side from the Boston Athletic Association, where Bradley made his initial appearance in the ring, and under whose auspices the Roxbury lad won the Amateur Heavyweight Championship of New England. The B. A. A. members are a unit in believing that Bradley has a great future in the ring, and they will applaud his efforts Tuesday.

Those who have watched Kaufmann at work against Joe Thomas, Harry Foley and at the punching bag at Mike Deveney's training quarters believe that he is as good as he has been touted. He is so strong, youthful and full of life that he makes easy work of the arduous duties of the training camp. He is fast as lightning on his feet, speedy with both hands, and after leading with his left crashes in with a right cross that is sure to bring destruction to an opponent if he lands.

Bradley May Be a Surprise.

But the surprise party in this match will undoubtedly be Bradley. Since he has started work at Revere Beach he has been under the tutelage of Jack Johnson, and he has become proficient in many of the finer points of the game. When he made his professional debut against Jerry Gaines he showed great skill in avoiding the teamster's dangerous wallops, but he lacked viciousness and had a great deal of sympathy for Jerry's debilitated condition after the latter had been jolted into subjection. While this fault was glaringly apparent in the Gaines battle, it will not be in evidence against Kaufmann.

Bradley says that Kaufmann has only two hands, and will go down the same as any other man if hit right, and he intends to explode the "phenom" from the Golden Gate.

Confidence is apparent in both camps and the club members are sure to see a warm bout, no matter how long the bout goes. It is a fact that the club members prefer a short, rapid fire exchange mill like that between Mellody and Lewis in preference to long drawn out affairs, which are monotonous round after round.

Two Prelim Bouts.

The Lincoln Club has made two splendid preliminary bouts for Tuesday night, each of which will be the "candy" as far as red-hot slugging is concerned.

In the opening bout Denny Ryan of Cambridge will face Billy Clinton of Lowell, and in the other Frank Adams of Newton will face Jimmy Hanlon, who now hails from Chelsea. The first bout will be put on at 8 p. m. promptly.

German Yachts Here to Race for Roosevelt Cup

A large crowd was at Mystic Wharf yesterday to see the two small German yachts, the Gluckauf and the Wannsee, brought from Germany on the decks of the steamer Belgravia from Hamburg, to compete in the races next month off Marblehead for the Roosevelt Cup.

The newly arrived boats are quite different from any of the seventeen built on this side, which will decide the three American boats to meet the visitors. Their length, which is only thirty-two feet, is shorter than those of any of the native boats except the Chewink IV., designed by Herreshoff.

The German boats are identical in form, being built as sister ships by Max Oertz, a well-known builder of small boats at Hamburg. The Wannsee will be sailed in the coming races by Otto Protzen of Berlin, while the Wistran Brothers, who are members of the Academic Sailing Club of Berlin, will skip the Gluckauf.

The Wannsee hails from Wannsee Lake, near Berlin, and is the property of the Verein Segelhaus am Wannsee.

The Gluckauf, although representing the Kaiserlicher yacht club of Kiel, is owned in Berlin by Hugo Stinnes.

The bow is the most distinctive feature in the design of the foreign craft, being straight sided, suggesting a sailing canoe, with the overhang out close to the water, and the stem snubbed.

The boats are beautifully built, each being planked with mahogany, and the top finished in the natural wood. The Gluckauf has a black bottom, with a narrow white stripe at the waterline, and a narrow gilt band around the plankshear, [illegible] inches below the deck.

The Wannsee has a white bottom and a broad band of light green on the planking as well as a narrow gilt stripe. Each has her name carved on the stern with the initials of her club.

Each fin, which is thin and beautifully formed, is covered with copper sheets, on both lead and deadwood.

The dimensions of the two boats are, approximately: Overall length, 32 feet 4 inches; breadth, 6 feet; draft, 4 feet 11 inches; waterline, 21 feet. The aft overhang is about 4 feet 6 inches, forward overhang 3 feet. The latter dimensions are to the painted waterline, which is above the line of flotation.

The freeboard is 15 inches.

CASE FOR SUPREME COURT.

Kansas City, Aug. 4.—The bill of exceptions to the conviction of Charles Oldham for selling pools on horse racing at the Elm Ridge race track last Spring has been accepted in the Criminal Court here, and the case will now go to the Supreme Court of the State for final decision. Oldham contends that he did not violate the Missouri anti-pool selling law when he accepted bets at Elm Ridge track and telephoned them to Kansas City, Kan.

Burkett's Team Won Close Battle from Lynn Boys

Worcester, Aug. 4.—Worcester defeated Lynn in a close and exciting game on Boulevard Park by the score of 4 to 2. Both pitchers were effective at critical times. Deering had the better of the twirling with six hits against him. He struck out five men and passed one on poorly called balls. Chadbourne, for the second time this season, smashed the ball into deep centre field for a home run, winning a gold watch for the stunt.

Continual wrangling between Umpire O'Reilly and Captain Bannon of the visiting team marred the great game. The umpire was off on some decisions, but Bannon's nagging was incessant and he was hooted by the crowd. When he fanned with a man on third base and two out the crowd in the grand stand hooted and yelled like bleacherites. A one-handed jumping catch by Henry and the batting of Chadbourne were the features of the game. The score:

HAVERHILLS 5, LAWRENCE 3

Haverhill, Aug. 4.—Haverhill won from Lawrence to-day by timely batting, the visitors being unable to touch Haslem when hits were needed. Sensational fielding robbed local players of more safe hits off Barberich. The features were the batting of Madden and Ahearn and the fielding of Briggs and Murphy. Score:

FALL RIVER WON AND LOST.

Fall River, Aug. 4.—Fall River lost the first game of a double-header here to-day through poor work in the field. Both pitchers were somewhat wild, Maroney, of Lowell giving eight passes. O'Hara's hitting was a feature. Umpire O'Brien was late in showing up and Lake umpired a couple of innings. When Umpire O'Brien did get into the game there was considerable kicking from the Fall River bunch, resulting finally in Kiernan being put out of the game and Manager McDermott on the bench.

The second game was a cinch for the home team, Lowell failing to score. It was a one-sided and uninteresting contest. The scores:

New Bedford, Aug. 4.—In a fast game, full of exciting plays, Manchester defeated New Bedford by five runs to four. Elliott played an excellent article of ball until the sixth inning, when the Manchester players touched him up freely, scoring four runs. From then on the Whalers tried hard to even up the score, but Cross was invincible. Manchester's infield played a clever game and in the ninth saved the situation. # RONDO AT HIS BEST IN CLOSE RACE ON THE SPEEDWAY.

Tied Record of 30 1-2s. and Beat Rob B. in Three Exciting Heats.

The shower of early Saturday afternoon put the Franklin Field Speedway in excellent condition and as a result the best racing that has been seen on that quarter of a mile stretch for a long time took place. Seven of the nine races originally scheduled took place and there was some fast going.

Rondo, the bay gelding, owned by S. Walter Waits and driven by the latter's son, was the star of the afternoon. The first heat he tied the record time of the speedway, 30½ seconds. The other two heats were in 31½ seconds, making three specially fast ones. Rob B. was Rondo's opponent, and, driven by his owner, M. A. Nevins, made a great showing against such a fast one as Rondo. It was a horse race every inch of the way in all three heats and Rondo did not go under the wire first in any heat without going the limit.

ACCOUNTANT WINS RICH DERBY AT BRIGHTON.

Special to Boston Sunday American.)

Race Track, Brighton Beach, N. Y., Aug. 4.—The $15,000 Brighton Derby for three-year-olds at a mile and a half was won here this afternoon by Accountant, the son of Filigrane-Reckon, for whom "Diamond Jim" Brady paid $45,000 two months ago.

With Martin in the saddle he stood at 1 to 3 favorite. Martin took Accountant to the front right at the start and kept him there to the end, where he won galloping from Fred Burlew's colt Samson, at 10 to 1 to win, with Shaw in the saddle. P. J. Dwyer's Albert F., at 5 to 1, to win, ran third. Lane rode him.

The real contest of the race developed in the struggle for place honors. Albert F. and Samson hooked up together at the turn for home and fought it out hammer and tongs right to the finish, where Shaw lifted Samson's nose in front on the last jump.

At the club house "Diamond Jim" Brady created a sensation by his vehement rooting for Accountant. His sonorous voice could be heard all over the course as he stood exhorting Martin and the colt from the club house balcony. Accountant has now won the Lawrence realization of $10,000, the Tidal of $20,000, and the Brighton Derby of $15,000, making Brady a winner on his big investment.

GLIDDEN AND DEMING CONTESTS OF GREAT VALUE TO THE MANUFACTURER

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Now [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] were [illegible] As [illegible] as a [illegible].

To [illegible] another standpoint [illegible] man[illegible]facturers. In speaking [illegible] the best known manufacturers said [illegible] consideration [illegible] worth it. We discovered [illegible] weaknesses [illegible] to be found. We [illegible] in relation [illegible] our customers [illegible].

Good for Americans.

The fact that [illegible] participated in the [illegible] or loss of the tour, lasting [illegible] period of fourteen days with [illegible] attention than [illegible] volumes for the [illegible] and his product [illegible] that [illegible] forging [illegible] by comparison with [illegible] cars in the [illegible] American road [illegible] experiences [illegible] did considerable [illegible] foreign cars. [illegible] encountered [illegible] trying experience [illegible] foreign roads, [illegible] though at [illegible] the case [illegible].

I have [illegible] of the several [illegible] experience [illegible] test of cars ever held in [illegible] country.

System Good and Bad.

The system of [illegible] eliminate, [illegible] its bad points. There [illegible] system evolved which [illegible] perfection on its [illegible]. This served the purpose [illegible] a year ago. [illegible] system of a year hence.

It was [illegible] shown that in such contests [illegible] should be an observer [illegible] test [illegible] is a [illegible] front axles [illegible] machines were [illegible]. None had an advantage over [illegible].

In the future [illegible] should be penalized a certain number of points for every single difficulty, whether it be engine, transmission, [illegible] springs or axles and the only [illegible] properly be done is [illegible] little observer on each and every car, no driver being permitted to ride on any car more than one half a day during the tour. This would certainly evolve a winner in fact as well as in name and make the contest, whether it be for the Glidden or any other tour, a contest of much greater value than those that have gone before.

Route Should Be a Secret.

Another lesson learned on this tour is the selection of routes in secrecy, the making of special arrangements with hotels en route in order to prevent extortion. This year the route was announced first and the hotels profited thereby to the financial loss of the contestants and the raising of the "[illegible]" cry against the [illegible] every member of which paid his own individual way and received no remuneration other than rebuffs and sometimes [illegible]. An idea which [illegible] worth considering is to [illegible] central point, such, for instance, as Bretton Woods, for the [illegible], and to send the competing cars out for fifty or sixty miles and return each day. This would insure the contestants having a place to lay their weary bones upon the conclusion of the day's work without having to [illegible] for accommodations, as was the case in the recent contest or rather tour. Such a [illegible] would [illegible] be more advantageous than sending the participants on a [illegible] tour.

There are of [illegible] over the last tour. There always will be, no matter what [illegible]. [illegible] must admit that in a general way [illegible] good has been done the sport by the [illegible]sion.

The hill-climbing contest which [illegible] the week of [illegible] at Bretton Woods brought out [illegible] proved that the [illegible] Glidden tour [illegible] of one or two cars [illegible] the [illegible] Columbia [illegible] without [illegible] two [illegible] car was [illegible] as when [illegible] had been [illegible].

DEMING TOURING TROPHY

[illegible] place it in condition for the climb. [illegible] who drove from Buffalo to Quebec [illegible] to Bretton Woods, drove up the [illegible] ascent in sufficiently fast time to [illegible] honor was his.

Captured Two Events.

Ray Owen in the Oldsmobile, which came through the tour without a single defect, did likewise. These were the only two tour cars that made the climb in competition. The Stearns cars showed up to advantage [illegible] contests, capturing the heavyweight and free-for-all events.

Guy Vaughan, the clever operator who has driven in the majority of the big events of the year, sent one of the Stearns up the one and one half miles of climb in 2m. 48s. It was a daring drive for him, more dangerous, said he, than the drive up to the summit of Mount Washington. The Rambler and the Knox cars made satisfactory good time up the ascent while George Otis Draper, in his Packard, had his usual experience.

CONFETTI CAR MADE A BIG HIT IN THE LONG TOUR.

Among the shining achievements of the Glidden tour the work of the Maxwell Speedster, fitted with traction tread tires, entered as a confetti car by the Maxwell Briscoe Motor Company, deserves special mention. [illegible] car, the smallest in size and horsepower participating in the tour, made the entire journey with practically no trouble, being detained on the last day by [illegible] out of a pin from the universal coupling. Running on its own schedule, the car was permitted to develop great speed, and on seven of the twelve running days it made the fastest running time between starting town and night stop. The dependability and toughness of the big little motor car caused no end of comment along the line. It came to be expected at each night stop as confidently as if it had been shipped by railroad.

H. A. Grant, who drove the car, is an engineer of great ability, and his skill and judgment are responsible in a high degree for the magnificent record made. On July 16, on the way to Elizabethtown, it was Grant who discovered that the provender wagons of the soldiery had destroyed the bridges, and his prompt action in securing another road, arranging for the carriage of the confetti and in driving back over atrocious roads for twenty miles to warn the checkers, saved the tourists from an embarrassing predicament. At the conclusion of the tour the car was driven to the Tarrytown factory, thereby demonstrating its strength and durability after the taxing test it had been put through.

BARON DE CATERS MAY BE AT ORMOND

A report from Italy states that it is quite possible that Baron de Caters will be a visitor to the United States next Winter, and will bring with him an Italian car to compete in the speed trials on the Ormond-Daytona Beach, Florida. Baron de Caters is a noted and honorable sportsman, as [illegible] Gordon Bennett International [illegible] in 1904 proved.

In [illegible] he jeopardized his own chances in [illegible] to carry a message to the Countess of [illegible] who is now Mrs. Charles [illegible] that her fiancee was not [illegible] injured in his smash just outside of [illegible].

Baron de Caters will be warmly welcome to the United States, as his fame as a driver and sportsman has preceded him.

WHITE STEAMERS ATTRACT ATTENTION

An impressive demonstration of the popularity of White steamers was afforded all along the route of the recent A. A. A. tour. At every large town through Central New York local parties in White steamers were on hand to greet the tourists. Some of the White cars met with had come as far as St. Louis and Kansas City, some were returning West, others followed the tourists for a few days. The climax came at Bretton Woods, where there were no fewer than seventeen Whites lined up in the garage. Ten of these had come up from Boston on the tour of the Bay State Automobile Association, comprising exactly one half of the machines taking part [illegible].

NEW MODELS WILL BE OUT EARLY THIS YEAR

It has been generally understood that the automobile manufacturers would have their 1907 models out early this year, but that any of them would have their first new cars ready in the midsummer was unexpected. The entries for the Glidden tour reveal the fact that a new Knox truck is ready and also that there will be a [illegible] Pierce Arrow model in 1907. [illegible] was entered as a baggage wagon and [illegible] Great Arrow was [illegible] in the touring division of the run. The fact that there will be a six cylinder Pierce car out for 1907 may be considered as one of the most significant signs of what is to be the tendency for next year.

FRANKLIN CARS WILL HAVE BOSTON BRANCH

The H. H. Franklin Manufacturing Company have decided to open a branch house in Boston. Since 1903 the Franklin car has been sold in Boston by A. R. Bangs, and the decision of the company to open a branch is the result of careful study of the Boston situation and a determination to give their New England trade all the advantages to be gained from the location of a branch house in its buying centre.

IF THE HANDLE IS LOST.

If the starting handle of a car has been left behind or lost, and it is necessary to [illegible] the engine, do so on the slope of a hill, where the car can be easily restarted. First of all, withdraw the clutch, switch on the electricity and put the third or top speed in, retard the spark, and when the car has sufficient way on let in the clutch [illegible] and the engine will start.

NOT JOHNNY-ON-THE-SPOT.

It is not stated if Rene de Knyff is to still represent the Automobile Club of America in its dealings with the Automobile Club of France. It will be remembered that De Knyff failed to post the Automobile Club of America as to what was going on in the French's Club's solitaire game of racing, and the American club received its news from London and other [illegible].

FOR THE VANDERBILT RACE.

Jefferson De Mont Thompson, chairman of the racing board of the American Automobile Association, is expected to return to New York about August 8, bringing further news regarding the entry of foreign cars in the Vanderbilt cup race.

BAY STATE A. A. TOUR WAS A SUCCESS.

The tour of the Bay State Automobile Association, which concluded [illegible] Friday evening at the Point Shirley Club, was unquestionably the touring event of the season. The interest in the same was excellent and the management was all that could be desired.

Chairman E. A. Gilmore seemed to have arranged everything in the best [illegible], and this made the trip all the more interesting and enjoyable.

While in Portland the [illegible] were royally entertained by the Maine Automobile Club, for which they received the thanks of President Spooner.

The story of the trip [illegible] BOSTON AMERICAN [illegible] needs no repetition here. It is probable that within the next month or so the Bay State Association will [illegible] Maine aggregation, and if [illegible] Boston it will be accorded [illegible] of its young life.

AUTOMOBILE DERBY IS FIXED NOW FOR LABOR DAY.

The American touring car derby, which takes place over the West Brighton, Scottsville and West Henrietta twenty five-mile course at Rochester, N. Y., Labor Day, promises to eclipse any previous national road racing event. The promoters, who are the Associated Automobile Clubs of New York State, believe that the American touring car derby will rival in importance that now famous Vanderbilt cup road race, which takes place annually on Long Island.

The fact that the American automobile derby will be for regular stock touring cars, and the Vanderbilt cup race for racing cars only, will give the Rochester race a different standing in the eyes of manufacturers of automobiles and the buyers thereof.

It will be a severe and complete test of a touring car over a course which will be a fair sample of road as found in the State of New York at the present time. Part of the course will provide fast and other parts slower going.

WINTON SCHOOL FOR SALESMEN TO OPEN

The Winton school for automobile salesmen will open August 14 and continue for at least five weeks. Forty students have been enrolled, and no further additions will be made, inasmuch as it is the aim to give each student personal instruction of a character that would be impossible with a larger class. Lectures on automobile construction and [illegible] will be delivered by Harold D. Anderson [illegible] engineer of the Winton company, while road work, quizzes and general instruction will be in the hands of the company's supervisors, Messrs. Smith, Owesney and Arbuckle, assisted by M. Halstead, [illegible] of the parts department. Lectures on salesmanship will be delivered by J. D. Kenyon of the Sheldon school of salesmanship, and on advertising by William Boyd of the Saturday Evening Post, and E. C. Patterson of Collier's Weekly.

INTEREST IN COMING ECONOMY TEST

Interest in the coming economy test of the New York Motor Club, which was [illegible] to the Glidden tour for a time, is [illegible] awakening. A number of manufacturers have written to the secretary asking for entry blanks and particulars of the test. [illegible] American. The economy [illegible] New York to Albany on August 27, from Albany to Springfield, Mass., on August 28, and from Springfield back to New York. There are now nine entries for the test and a number of others to be received. The economy test employs observers, and its running will be a good opportunity for automobilists to judge the relative merits of the checking and observer systems.

THE INCOMPARABLE WHITE

THE CAR FOR SERVICE

Private Owners in the A. A. A. Tour

The most interesting feature of the recent tour to the general public was the performance of private owners. As in all previous tours held in this country, White owners turned out in comparatively large numbers. Four White private owners started and four finished the tour—as many as any other three makes combined.

Augustus Post, of New York, made a perfect score for the Deming trophy, but, owing to his official position on the committee, relinquished his claim to the trophy in favor of the other car which had a clean score. Mr. Post did not even have a puncture nor did he make any replacement or adjustment whatever.

Paul H. Deming, of Detroit, chairman of the touring committee, a non-contestant, came through in his usual faultless style, carrying in his runabout from two to seven people, as the duties of his position demanded.

J. G. Cassatt, of Philadelphia, not only drove from his home to the starting point at Buffalo, but also drove from the finish at Bretton Woods back to Philadelphia, thus putting to his credit the greatest mileage of any-one participating in the tour. Mr. Cassatt's only penalization was due to a piece of waste clogging his gasoline line.

The car of L. F. Braine, of New York, which had seen 12,000 miles of service before the tour commenced, was the only 1905 machine to complete the tour.

Of secondary importance are the doings of drivers representing the various companies. Watson Coleman, Lynn Representative, was penalized at but one of the 54 checking stations, and H. K. Sheridan lost only two points, due to three nail punctures, in a 12 mile control.

THE PUBLIC ARE INVITED

Maxwell Motor Car

WHICH

WON THE DEMING TROPHY IN THE GLIDDEN TOUR

This car has covered a distance of over two thousand miles in the [illegible]. It has run on a schedule whereby the loss or gain of one minute at any of the fifty or more controls would mean the loss of points. It met such a schedule perfectly, and made a perfect score.

In addition to its perfect score in the tour, this car was run from Tarrytown to Buffalo, and then around the tour by Montreal, Quebec, and the White Mountains to Boston, arriving August 1, starting from Tarrytown, N. Y., July 11.

This record is all the more remarkable from the fact that this car was but the third turned out of this particular type by the Maxwell-Briscoe Motor Co., and was entered to test it out, and while a good record was expected, it was hardly hoped that it would win the much-coveted trophy.

This car was not one of a team of several of the same type, others being sacrificed to bring one through, but was the only car of this type entered in the tour.

The Maxwell 10 h. p. runabout was one of the real sensations of the tour. It was the official confetti car, and it made the entire distance without the necessity of any repairs whatever to the motor.

The Maxwell Model H $1,450 touring car lost but one-half hour in the sixteen days of the tour, due to broken springs, caused by falling into a chuck hole. This was the identical car that made a perfect score in last year's Glidden Tour; was entered and run by its owner; had travelled over ten thousand miles, and is practically as good a car today as when it was made, one year and a half ago.

"WITH IDEAL GOVERNMENT, NO HELFLESS CHILDREN."

HELPLESS and unprovided children are a product of a crude civilization. When all parents are provided with work, they will be able to care for their own children, and leave enough to support them at their death, till the children are able to care for themselves. But the more ideal government will care for all children till they reach the productive age, regardless of the material condition of the parents.—DR. GERTRUDE T. BODFISH.

APPEAL IN AID OF FRISCO ORPHANS SHOWS UP HUMAN CHARACTER IN TRUE LIGHT

Prompt, Generous Response from Many, but Strange Lack of Sympathy Now and Then Manifested.

By Dr. Gertrude T. Bodfish.

What different effects are produced upon us by the various people we meet in the course of twenty-four hours!

One woman whom I was trying to interest in the work for the San Francisco orphans was so argumentative she fairly bristled with porcupine quills; although I tried to inhibit a similar growth in myself, at the close of the interview I felt so very much like a fully developed animal of that class that it took five minutes' brisk walk in the open and a sudden pull at my common sense reservoir to restore my previous feeling of good humor. Discouraged? Not a bit of it. I do not know the meaning of that word. I had been trying to make her look through my glasses for awhile, but could not succeed, as she was afflicted with mental paralytic strabismus, due to looking too long down one avenue of action, till the opposing muscles had become unable to work in any other direction.

We cannot all think alike in this world, nor all agree as to methods, but we can differ harmoniously and kindly, and not make ourselves full of bristling points of antagonism.

My next interview was with a certain bright star of the dramatic profession. Knowing the generous impulses that control the actions of a majority of this profession, I felt sure of a warm reception. I was not disappointed. I found close attention, enthusiasm, hearty support and willingness to aid in my work. A benefit for our San Francisco orphans' fund was promised to be given later in the season. I withdrew from the interview inspired, strengthened, walking on air, as it were, from coming in contact with one who knows how to be gracious and charming off the stage as well as on it.

It certainly is a gift worthy of emulation to be able to grant an interview to a stranger and leave that stranger impressed with the kindliness of the one interviewed.

Might Shatter Idols.

If you want to find out a person's real, inward temperament, just ask for a five minutes' seance for some philanthropy. I am afraid some of your idols would be shattered into fragments. A good many of mine have been. And a good many have grown larger, especially the ones I did not expect to.

Philanthropy is a queer institution when you stop to think of it! What business has one-half of the world to take care of the other half? None whatever. Everybody ought to have just as much as his neighbor in proportion to his effort to get it, and in proportion to the time spent in getting it. Now, the man who works the hardest and the longest gets the least! Is that justice? The agreeable tasks and the shortest efforts get the most! No wonder then that we have philanthropy. Madame Idleness plays Lady Bountiful at the expense of her neighbor, Mrs. Drudgery, while Mr. Own-it-all plays Fortunatus to those who ought to possess by right what he grants by favor. So we have to go on with our associated charities, our thousand and one other misnamed philanthropies. What an insult to humanity! How much longer are we going to tolerate such absurdly unjust conditions?

How much longer are we going to beg for the helpless, the aged, the infirm and the mental and moral delinquent? In a world with properly adjusted business methods—where all are properly educated, rightly qualified for work, and where all are given work—there would be no need to ask alms for the sick and helpless, the young or the aged. We ought not to have mental or moral delinquents, but so long as we do have these abnormal excrescences on the face of humanity we must seek their removal by humane and scientific methods. This means readjustment within and proper applications without.

Strike at Root of Disease.

In other words, a better government, with better people at the head and wiser people at the polls. Then wealth would be more evenly distributed, education would be general and effective; the defectives and delinquents would cease to exist as the product of poverty and idleness. Symptomatic treatment is always dangerous because misleading. The kind of physician is he who seeks to remove the cause of the disease and not merely to palliate the leading symptoms.

While we seek to help humanity with our many sugar-coated pills under the guise of philanthropy, we are degrading it, debasing it to the level of the lower animal creation. Instead of all this we should help humanity to come into its own by seeing that every member of society, who is able to work, is provided with work and does it. This would be striking at the root of many of our national diseases—yes, the disease of humanity in general.

While one-half of the world lives in idleness and poverty, and idleness and riches, the other half, which is the humane and intelligent half, must care for the abnormal products of the idle half.

Not until we are wise enough and strong enough collectively can we hope to adopt the curative methods. Education and experience will soon teach us as a people the costliness of symptomatic treatment. Some leaders of society, religion and philanthropy have long recognized this truth, but the number has been so small, little progress has been made toward producing any results.

Must Aid Helpless Children.

The people—the masses—now are awaking to a full and keen realization that we have been treating symptoms ever since the world began. They are also beginning to realize that the power of readjustment, the ability to cure and not to palliate, lies with themselves.

But while we firmly adhere to the curative methods as being the safest, wisest and most just, still, until the time shall come when these methods will rule the relations between man and man, we must go on with our crude and symptomatic treatments, hypocritically called philanthropies. Not forgetting, however, to keep our eyes on the main track and working toward this goal: The time when all will be economic equals because all will be workers. Until that time, the strong must bear the infirmities of the weak and those who have must help those who have not, especially when those who have not are the young and helpless children of our brothers and sisters, who were unjustly left out of the race for bread. It is safe to say that helpless and unprovided children are a product of a crude civilization. When all parents are provided with work, they will be able to care for their own children, and leave enough to support them at their death, till the children are able to care for themselves. But a more ideal government will care for the children till they reach the productive age, regardless of the material condition of the parents.

By teaching, by writing and by actions let us hasten the approach of this ideal period, but let us also do what we can now for helpless children who need our loving care.

By indifferent inaction on our part we may be the cause of much suffering; we may prevent the growth of children into a useful and healthful manhood and womanhood.

Yield to Noble Impulses.

Inasmuch as we are responsible as a people for the needs of these children, because we allow the conditions to exist which produce those needs, so ought we to assume the responsibility of supplying those needs. To you who have read this series of articles written on behalf of the 2,000 orphaned and destitute children of San Francisco, I say, "What are you doing in a small way or in any way to alleviate their pitiful condition?" It is not too late to begin now to send in your small amount or a large check, according to your financial ability. Help the Mothers and Daughters' Relief Committee, not only to erect a suitable structure for the shelter of these children from the storms of Winter, but make it possible for them to maintain a permanent fund which can be used for their support and education till they are able to care for themselves, or until the State can support them.

This fund will be in the hands of honest and wise people, who will see to it that no part of it is deflected into private channels, or used for any other purpose except for the care, education and training of these little children, the future fathers and mothers, the future citizens of our nation. Down in Maine, up in the hills of New Hampshire, as well as in many towns of Massachusetts, the cry has gone forth, and women are working to add to this fund. Yield to your noble and generous impulses in behalf of these needy children. Deny yourselves some luxury that you may give your proper share to this San Francisco orphans' fund.

 To help the right.
Be strong in faith, and emulate
The virtues of the good and great
 With all thy might.

BRYAN COMMITTEE "STACKED" TO SUIT MACHINE LEADERS

Colonel A. C. Drinkwater to Preside Over Meeting at Democratic State Headquarters To-Morrow.

"Stacked" to carry out the wishes of Colonel William A. Gaston and Chairman Josiah Quincy of the Democratic State committee, the committee of twenty, to arrange for the delegation to the Bryan reception in Madison Square Garden, New York, will be presided over at the meeting in Democratic State headquarters to-morrow afternoon by Colonel A. C. Drinkwater.

The meeting will be called to order at 2 o'clock. The appointment of Colonel Drinkwater to take charge of the meeting is looked upon as a crafty scheme. The Colonel was put in charge of the arrangements for the meeting several days ago, the purpose being to make it appear that things were to be conducted on fair lines. Knowing that the Colonel is a John B. Moran man, his selection as the ostensible master of ceremonies was thought to be a move that would have a big tendency to exonerate the "stacked" committee from blame in the event of District Attorney Moran being ignored in the make-up of the Massachusetts delegation to greet Bryan.

Drinkwater Wants Moran On.

Colonel Drinkwater says Moran ought to be on the delegation and Josiah Quincy says he has not been considered as a member of the delegation. Out of the twenty members selected with great care—ten by Quincy, acting for Mayor Fitzgerald, and ten by Gaston, as member of the National committee—only four or five are out-and-out friends of Moran. His name will be proposed, his friends say, and, if he is [illegible] it will [illegible] become clear, they [illegible] of Quincy and Gaston is an attempt to keep Moran in the background.

Besides arranging for the Massachusetts delegation to the Bryan New York reception there will be a political discussion at the meeting to-morrow. It won't be anything in the nature of a formal game, but an attempt will be made by the majority of the committee of twenty to show the other fellows the error of their ways.

It is the latest plan to make the committee of twenty the Bryan delegation, thus shutting out Moran, and giving out the impression that it has always been the purpose to have the committee constitute the delegation.

Williams in "Harmony" Plan.

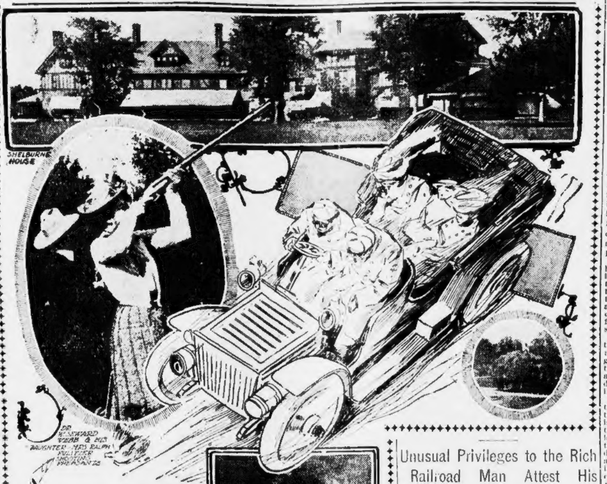
George Fred Williams says he and the Democratic State Committee are working in "harmony" on the Bryan plans, but the State Committee men do not seem to think so. There is apt to be a clash of invitations between Mr. Williams and Mayor Fitzgerald. As a member of the executive committee, having in charge the invitations and ticketing for the reception, Mr. Williams has submitted a list of names of prominent Massachusetts Democrats who should receive invitations.

Claiming to be placed in charge of the work of making up delegations for this State, New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine, Mayor Fitzgerald has called upon prominent Democrats in the four States to select delegations. Mr. Williams seems to think there won't be room in Madison Square Garden for all the people from New England who have been appealed to by the Mayor in his letters, combined with the delegation the committee of twenty may select and the men he has recommended for invitations

VERMONTERS WAIVE SPEED LAWS FOR MILLIONAIRE WEBB'S RACING AUTO

SCENES AT THE COUNTRY HOME OF DR. SEWARD WEBB.



SHELBURNE HOUSE
DR. W. SEWARD WEBB & HIS DAUGHTER MRS. RALPH PULITZER SHOOTING PHEASANTS

Villagers Declare He May Go 100 Miles an Hour On the Country Roads if He Wants to; They Will Look Out

SHELBURNE, Vt., Aug. 4.—Dr. W. Seward Webb is one of the few multimillionaires in this country who has no fear of being held up by a country constable with stop watch in hand when he flies along the roads around this village at top-notch speed. All the laws relating to automobile speeding are suspended in his case because of his popularity with the country folk.

He has been so generous to his farmer neighbors that they make no protest against anything which adds to his pleasure. He has many automobiles at his beautiful estate, Shelburne Farms, but it was not until this year that he got a racing machine. It is as fast as some of those which have made records on Ormonde Beach, in Florida. When he got the car he gave orders to every employe of the Farms to listen, while driving, for the sound of the approach of the new auto, and if they heard it coming to turn to the side of the roadway and stand still until the racing car went by.

"If you do that," said Dr. Webb, "there will never be a collision and nobody will be hurt."

"Go as Fast as He Likes."

The order that he gave to his "help" was made as a request to every villager and to every farmer in the vicinity of Shelburne. It was discussed at all the village stores as seriously as anything which ever came up at a town meeting and there was a remarkable unanimity of sentiment.

MRS. RALPH PULITZER

Dr. Webb's neighbors said he was not "stuck up" and was a good farmer, and the money he had spent in this Vermont village had helped property and business there. "Let him go as fast as he likes," was the village decision. No one would complain of him now if he drove his auto at the rate of 100 miles an hour.

This sentiment towards Dr. Webb is remarkably in contrast with the public feeling entertained towards him by denizens of the

Unusual Privileges to the Rich Railroad Man Attest His Popularity with the Farmers Who Are Summer Neighbors

Adirondacks ten or twelve years ago. The Adirondacks are right across Lake Champlain which Shelburne Falls borders. When Dr. Webb built the St. Lawrence & Adirondack railroad he provoked intense hostility on the part of many dwellers in the great forest its rails traverse. They said that it was vandalism and an instance of a rich man ready to destroy for gain a sylvan retreat. Forest fires and the disappearance of game were predicted.

One Shot in Feud.

Then many millionaires went into the woods and bought thousands of acres and established vast hunting and fishing preserves. The Adirondacks men resented the intrusion. Some of the great landowners were arbitrary in dealing with a class which believed the woods as free as air and that they had the right to shoot and fish where they would, regardless of property rights. There was a feud, which resulted in the mysterious shooting, a few years ago, of a millionaire who had incurred the vengeance of backwoodsmen.

But on the other side of the lake Dr. Webb's popularity was unbounded from the time he went to Shelburne Farms to pass the Summer time. His estate there is vast in area and a fortune has been spent in buildings and appointments. It is the scene of great house parties, where Newport social kings and queens delight to be guests. Dr. Webb is allied to the Vanderbilts by marriage.

ASK APOLOGIES FOR DOUGLAS SEIZURE.

CONSUL DEMANDS FULL REPARATION

Portland, Me., Aug. 4.—The seizure of the sacred person of a lord of the realm, especially since the police of Portland, Me., stand pat and refuse to apologize for that slight to the dignity of one of King Edward's titled subjects, may cause international complications. Lord George Sholto Douglas was arrested in the Maine city on suspicion of being the man of many wives who has been impersonating him.

His Lordship and the British Consul here, the Hon. John B. Keating, are firm in their demands for suitable apologies for the affront shown to a British Lord, and the Consul is studying whether to appeal to Washington and the highest British authorities to determine if an insult was offered him officially when his request for redress in proper form to His Lordship was ignored by the Portland police.

No reparation will be made, according to the Portland authorities, and seemingly to add insult to injury they even impugn the genuineness of his Lordship even yet, and threaten a possible re-examination into his antecedents. The Portland authorities defy the British consul to start proceedings against them.

Both sides are determined, and international complications may yet result from the affair. His Lordship is angry, and so is Consul Keating. Lord Douglas declares that he will bring a suit for damages unless the authorities back down. The fact that Lord Douglas was asked to sign a document absolving the police from blame and granting them immunity from proceedings for damages is considered as strengthening the case he has against these very officials who subjected him to so many indignities.

FIND ICE DEALERS GAVE OVERWEIGHT

Grafton, Aug. 4.—Complaints from customers that they were getting short weight caused R. A. Smith & Company, ice dealers, to call in Sealer of Weights and Measures Samuel Leland to-day and have him test their scales.

The result of the test showed that so far from giving short weight to customers, R. A. Smith & Company were handing them out more ice than they were entitled to for their money. Every supposed fifty-pound piece of ice weighed exactly sixty pounds.

The old scales have been replaced by new ones and the kickers are kicking themselves.

VOYAGERS TO START FROM ATLANTIC CITY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 4.—Backed by wealthy New York and Philadelphia enthusiasts in the new fad for ballooning, Joseph Wortscher, known throughout this country and Europe as one of the most daring and skilful aeronauts of the day, arrived in Atlantic City late this afternoon and at once opened negotiations for the erection of an immense balloon shed, from which late this month or early in September he will launch the largest balloon ever built, in which he will endeavor to cross the Atlantic Ocean to Europe.

Sufficient funds to finance his novel expedition, which will cost from $25,000 to $50,000, have been subscribed. Worthscher selected Atlantic City as the most suitable port from which to take his giant airship on the long heralded but never attempted trans-ocean balloon voyage. Worthscher is a native of Germany, where he early in life became interested in the subject of aerial navigation. He first came into prominence in 1902 in several successful experiments with a motor balloon of his own invention at Innsbruck. He was a partner of the aeronaut Suncouf of Paris, and planned and built the aeronautic observatory for the French government and the meterological institute at Aixla Chapelle.

He said to-day: "My plans is not entirely new to aeronauts, and after a study of meteorological conditions, I am sure the voyage across the great Atlantic can be safely accomplished. A French firm already has the order for the balloon, built after my plans. It will arrive in New York before the end of the month.

"The balloon is to have a capacity of 10,000 cubic metres of gas. Larger balloons have been built, but this will be large enough to support the car, and six passengers, and will enable me to carry a reserve supply of liquid gas representing nearly 4,000 cubic metres for refilling the balloon.

"I shall depend entirely upon the trade winds for locomotion and that is one reason I have selected Atlantic City for the starting point. There is no other city City the trades should land us near the so easily caught, and where the facilities for preparing for a start are better.

"By keeping the balloon in the proper level to utilize the trade winds and escape the anti-trades, the journey will occupy from four to six days, but our provisions and gas supply will be sufficient for twelve days if necessary. Taken from Atlantic City the trades should land us near the west coast of Ireland.

"Several New York and Philadelphia gentlemen before whom I have laid my plans are satisfied the trip to Europe can be accomplished and have furnished the funds to carry out the project. There will be room for five others besides myself in the car, and I hope to have meteorologists for my traveling companions. There will be little danger attached to the trip. One car will be water tight, capable of floating in case of accident, and I shall also carry a wireless telegraph outfit for communication with passenger ocean liners and continental stations.

"I need now only the shed in which to inflate my balloon. I should like to have it on your beach front here, where the great American public can more easily study this interesting subject of aerial navigation. I will probably make two trial ascents to test the balloon and apparatus before the final start."

LITHOGRAPHERS IN TWO SHOPS OUT ON STRIKE

Fight for Shorter Day Ties Up Chelsea and Franklin Printing Plants.

As a result of an ultimatum received from the national headquarters of the Lithographers' Union in New York, the lithographers of the Forbes Lithograph Manufacturing Company, of Chelsea, and the Heliotype Printing Company, of Franklin, went on strike yesterday. The stone grinders at these two establishments also quit work out of sympathy with the lithographers.

The point of contention is the length of the work day. The former agreement called for fifty-three hours a week. The men now demand eight hours a day straight or forty-eight hours for the week.

After issuing their ultimatum to the New England employers, the union officials received notice from the following firms that they would grant the eight-hour demand: The Boston Bank Note Company, of Boston; the lithographing department of the Associated Insurance companies, at No. 31 Milk street, this city; the Worcester Lithographing Company, of Worcester; the Lakeside Press, of Portland, Me., and the E. H. Ehrnins Lithograph Manufacturing Company, of Nashua, N. H.

Superintendent Rogerson, after conferring with W. H. Forbes of the firm, said:

"While we are on good terms with our employes, and do not believe in the principle of fighting to settle our troubles, this demand of the union is something to which we cannot submit.

"The Manufacturers' Association in New York has declared for the open shop. We are not members of that association, but we have to take their attitude into consideration."

BODIES OF DROWNED PAIR RECOVERED

Providence, R. I., Aug. 4.—Within twenty-four hours of each other, the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Anthony, who, with their daughter Eveline, were drowned by the overturning of a sailboat in a squall a week ago last Sunday, came to light in the waters of the bay where searching parties have been dragging for the past two weeks. Mrs. Anthony's body was found Friday morning on the shores of Gould Island, and this morning that of her husband came to the surface not far from the scene of the accident. The little girl's body was recovered the day after the drowning.
